STRIKE AVERTED

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A strike of umpires and referees was averted Wednesday shortly before the opening of Los Angeles Dodgers' second game with New York Mets. A spokesman for the County Federation of Labor confirmed that negotiators for Dodger Stadium and the Building Services Employees union (AFL-CIO) tentatively agreed to new contract terms. Terms of the new contract were not announced.

The Trots

TORONTO (CP) — Damon
King slid over a sloppy track
Wednesday night to win the featured eighth race at Greenwood Raceway by ¾ lengths, and paid $4.90 to win.

Owner Stan Hughes of Ingersoll, Ont., dared to the last from the outside No. 5 post and was never challenged. Arawana
Rilla was second with Jack
Bolton, Ont., was second with George Hawks driving.

Lady Man the Second, a 14-year-old trotter with Clarence Hilliard, 45, from Sutton, Ont., at the controls, won the first race and combined with Bert
Hazlewood's Little Bert from London, Ont., in the second for a $16.40 daily double.

fifth and Lord Dean won the sixth. Both horses are from Oshawa.

filly owned by Jack and Verne
Hanna of Toronto, made a winning debut as a three-year - old Wednesday at Fort Erie on a fast mile 1½ days after the afternoon she made her first trip to the post.

Conditions were fast as they were when the little daughter of Jive Hanover broke from the starting gate. It was raining and the track was sloppy. The Hanna Wednesday double saw Lady Thythm won by eight lengths, in her first race she finished only a length and a 1¼ lengths.

paid $5.40 to win and $3.20 to place. Jive Hanover, a double of Ermine Sox and Sun Dan returned
$32.80, while Shook Red and

Entitled to Benefit at 65, Woman Refuses to Apply

DEAR DORIS — What can a widow do, when she has an interest in a home-operated business which can only help keep up house payments?

The problem concerns my mother-in-law (65), and she is furious at me for making a suggestion she apply for benefits. Why is it that people who have donated generously to charity for years, and paid income tax, get very upset when they are now in need of help and refuse to apply for benefit to which they are entitled?

Her situation is pretty rather desperate. — FRUSTRATED.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR FRUSTRATED—There is old age assistance for needy persons of 65. She may have a partial income and still be eligible for supplementary help.

It is pig-headed to consider such help as charity. Throughout a lifetime she and her husband have paid their share in taxes of many kinds to government coffers, for the very purpose of building up a bank account, as it were. Now the bread will come back buttered — but she has to put out a hand for it.

Public servants want to help citizens like your mother-in-law to receive the help they are entitled to. This is the Canadian way of keeping our senior citizens free of charity.

Confidential to CONCERNED — After 20 years of rude remarks, your parents are used to each other. Give your father recognition for what he has tried to do, and help your mother insulate herself a bit more by doing some things for her your-self. Separation at this late date is not likely to accomplish anything — but loneliness!

DEAR DORIS — I have a club with a lot of people in it. Hardly anyone comes. We do art and other things, but they don't seem to want to come. Give me your advice. — TROUBLED.

P.S. — This is a girls' club, and the age is eight to ten years.

DEAR TROUBLED — At eight or 80, the secret of a good club is to have everybody in on the plans, right from the start. Then you'll be doing things they all asked for.

Next secret is to give everybody a job. The best leader doesn't do everything herself; others enjoy taking part.

And then she doesn't worry about how many come. She makes it interesting for those who did.

DEAR DORIS — *

(1) Who decided what fee an executrix is entitled to?
(2) Is there a maximum fee? — CURIOUS.

DEAR CURIOUS —

(1) Usually the judge of the surrogate court, on an audit. May depend on size of estate as well as on amount of work involved. Sometimes the amount is decided at by agreement between the beneficiaries.

(2) No maximum fee. The executrix may say how much she feels she is entitled to; may well be guided in this by the advice of her solicitor.

Confidential to TRYING TO HELP — Have your friend get an opinion from her teacher about her writing. If the teacher encourages her, have her write to me herself for a suggestion.

DEAR DORIS — My husband's lifelong profanity is a very persistent habit. When he's at work on a project I like to have the kids out of earshot, for I would curl your hair!

But if they are all in the car when it won't start, there's no escape. I don't consider it a laughing matter that our sons learn to meet setbacks with this reaction, but who am I to preach to him, since I know every curse word in the book.

Is there any tactful, practical strategy? — BAFFLED.

DEAR BAFFLED — The best I can say for profanity is that it may release the cursed wrath and prevent a stolid bottling up which is bad for mental health.

The worst I can say for it is that it is an inferior reaction, farring to the hearers, usually insulting to the Almighty, and grates the nerves of all but the hard of hearing.

It would probably shock him out of a year's growth if he heard such words handed back on the lips of his boys.

Tactful strategy? Could you have a heart-to-heart about mutual concerns, including what bothers you about such other?

DEAR DORIS — Last night my boy friend and I went to a fraternity party (not a college fraternity), and I didn't approve of what went on. The boys didn't seem to mind at all about changing girl friends and paired off with a different girl.

I told my boy friend I didn't care for this at all, and he said he really didn't mind because everyone else is going steady and so are we, and he trusts me. I trust him too because his actions with me for the past few months have been above reproach.

I know belonging to this group means a lot to him and I'm willing to go along with him to a certain extent. But I'm not sure what exactly to do now. — STEADY OR NOT.

DEAR OR NOT — It's not my idea of "above reproach" to go along with this share-and-share-alike routine. It's cheapening, dangerous and childishly self-indulgent. Tragedy has nothing to do with it.

DEAR DORIS — For a long time I have been a big tomboy. Many people have told me I'm not one of this habit including myself but all fails. At times I feel like acting like a lady but other times I feel like being a real boy.

I know I'll never be a boy but I still can't resist it. I'm slowly losing my friends and my boy friend. — TOMBOY.

DEAR TOMBOY — If "tomboy" means climbing trees, enjoying bikes, and a generally undignified exuberance in living, stop worrying. Others have lived through it.

Worry instead about doing the tough things which go with growing up: taking care of clothes and person; carrying your share at home; liking and learning other others; learning good manners. Gradually the feminine heart of you will take over.

DEAR MOTHER—Anne is courting trouble. She should not risk losing her good name for the sake of a little excitement which simply cannot come to anything good. His wife probably suspects something.

(Don't just muddle along. Do something about what's troubling you. A letter to Doris can put you on the way to more Successful Living.)

SIT-DOWN DEMONSTRATION — Demonstrators tell their story to a police sergeant during a sit-down protest outside the U.S. consulate in Vancouver. They were protesting U.S. action in Viet Nam. The demonstrators make their headquarters in an old house near the University of British Columbia.

Vancouver's 'Demonstration' Centre

A School for Peace

VANCOUVER (CP) — In an old green house not far from the University of British Columbia, the young people meet to plot their war for peace.

Peter Light, head of Peace House, calls it a "school for non-violence."

The young people—some university students, some artists, some unemployed "peace workers"—meet there to paint their signs and plan their demonstrations.

Four were arrested early in April for sit-down picketing in front of the United States consulate in Vancouver.

The signs they carried read Hands Off, Viet Nam, and Replace War With Love.

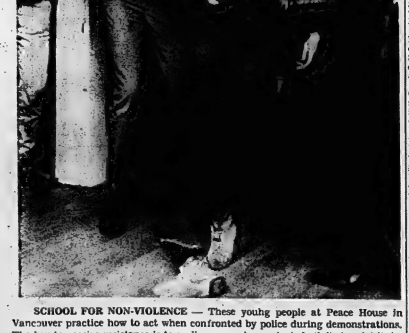
In court, they all gave the same address: the Peace House.

Peter Light opened it Feb. 1, pays $175 a month rent and gets the rest money by subletting six upstairs rooms.

IS POLITICAL ANARCHIST

He is 22, a former UBC student who describes himself as an anarchist politically.

"The question of peace crosses all political lines. I don't think political parties can do the job. I agree with the aims of democracy. I'm not convinced society could be organized without some form of government.



"But I won't work for political parties and I won't vote for any of them. In Canada, I suppose the New Democratic Party is closest to my ideals, but if they got in power they would compromise."

In April, his followers were practising for a march June 4 and 5 to Comox RCAF base on Vancouver Island, where they plan a sit-down protest against nuclear arms.

Each Wednesday night, they watch movies of the horrors of atom-bombed Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

The Young People at the Peace House practise up on passive resistance, sitting stubbornly, going limp all over, seeking up for protection against kicks and clubs.

They read peace literature, wear boots and beards and blue jeans. Their average age, says Peter Light, is 18.

SCHOOL FOR NON-VIOLENCE — These young people at Peace House in Vancouver practice how to act when confronted by police during demonstrations. The key to passive resistence is to go limp, as demonstrated (left to right) by Philip Carpenter, Mirrian Wolochow and Maren Carter. The Peace House is an old house near the University of British Columbia where students and unemployed teen-age "peace workers" plotdemonstrations. (CP Photo)

World Leader in Transportable Industrial Housing

Exporting To Earth's Remotest Regions

Riding high on the crest of the road which leads to the far corners of the space-age world of modern industry and exploration is a unique Canadian enterprise that supplies the men on the job with their basic requirement —a place to live. To the bitter, relentless cold of Antarctica, to the searing sands of the Sahara, to the Yukon, to Turkey, Hawaii, Australia and Nigeria, to just about any place where teams of technologists, researchers, constructors and explorers are engaged on today's varied projects, go the complex, pre-built industrial housing products of Calgary's ATCO Industries. Sprung from a trailer-making business and given initial fast growth by Canada's soaring oil industry, this venture into the world of the future has become a massive and rapid producer of transportable townsite and settlement facilities—including laboratories, schools, banks and churches—which house the crews of scientific research stations, dam sites, oil fields and construction projects of the nations of the world.

Two halves of a housing unit, part of a large convoy, begin their long journey from Calgary, Alberta, where complete portable housing facilities for hundreds of men and their families are made to special order.

London's Fine Art Salerooms

Your Itchy Nose Could Cause Million $ Mix-up!

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP)—A nod is as good as a wink, as the saying goes, but either could get you in real trouble at one of London's famous fine art salerooms, where fortunes often turn on the merest twitch of an eyelash.

The five-day-a-week morning sales at Sotheby's and Christie's are among the finest free entertainments in the city, offering anyone with the price of a threepenny catalogue the experience of watching international art moguls compete for rare art treasures.

You might even pick up a bargain like the first edition of Sir Winston Churchill's youthful Boer War book London to Ladysmith, sold at Christie's last January for a mere £2.

But the nightmare of the amateur auction addict amid publicity-shy art dealers who signal their bids by secret signs to the auctioneer is that if he gets an itchy nose just as the hammer is poised, he may get landed with a $1,500,000 old master painting or $100,000 worth of French empire furniture.

In fact, mistakes are rare, say auction experts. They happen perhaps once in five years. The professionals who like to bid surreptitiously are a comparatively small band, well known to the auctioneers.

KEEP QUIET!

If an outsider makes an ambiguous sign at the crucial moment, the auctioneer will usually ask outright: "Is that a bid?" or he may, as happened at a recent Christie silver sale, crisply reprove a fidgetty onlooker: "Are you bidding or chatting?"

If someone bids for the wrong "lot," as once happened at Christie's over a $100,000 piece of furniture, he's stuck with it. But the "underbidder" can usually be persuaded to buy it back at his top bid, leaving the balance to be paid by the unlucky person who outbid him.

The whole mystique of secret signs and saleroom protocol has lately been fascinating millions of Britons because of the astonishing uproar in Christie's over a disputed bid for a costly Rembrandt portrait.

The row was sparked by Norton Simon, California canned-food millionaire. To avoid publicity, Simon had previously arranged an incredibly complex method of secret bidding, which Christie's reluctantly accepted though they would have preferred him to let one of their men bid for him.

Simon's mysterious instructions involved such phrases as: "When Mr. Simon is sitting down, he is bidding. . . . When he stands up, he has stopped bidding. If he sits down again he is not bidding until he raises his finger. Having raised his finger he is continuing to bid until he stands up again."

SYSTEM FAILED

But the whole thing went haywire. Four times senior auctioneer P. O. Chance repeated the £777,000 bid of London's Marlborough Fine Art Gallery, looking at the seated Simon and clearly saying "against you."

The hammer fell. "Sold to Marlborough Fine Art."

Up jumped Simon, shaking with rage. "I have not finished bidding." His letter of instructions was read out to the embarrassed Chance, who despite furious protests by Marlborough's man, reopened the bidding. Simon got his picture for a British auction record of £798,000 — and a fearsome amount of the very publicity he had dreaded.

Christie's weren't exactly delighted either. To make things worse, a leading Bond Street art dealer, Geoffrey Agnew, wrote a letter to The Times in which he sharply reproved Christie's for disregarding accepted saleroom practice.

Other art experts entering the fray mostly supported Chance. But the uproar is still shaking the dignified premises in St. James's — and causing many a quiet chuckle over in the Bond Street salerooms of Christie's great rivals, Sotheby's.

A Sotheby spokesman said his firm would accept any arrangement, however bizarre, and it was up to the auctioneer to remember it.

Both the rival firms claim to be the world's oldest art auctioneers. Sotheby's was founded in 1744, Christie's 22 years later. But as Christie's carefully explain, Sotheby's dealt only in books and prints until the end of the First World War.

Sotheby's counter this with their spectacular annual cash turnover. Last year more than $13,250,000 worth of art treasures changed hands in their salerooms, treble Christie's figure.

Matchbox Series of Vintage Cars Make Men a Fortune

NEW YORK (AP)—This may come as a surprise to General Motors Corp. it doesn't build more cars than any other company in the world.

The honor goes to the British firm of Lesney Products Co., Ltd.

Lesney turns out 100,000,000 cars a year—authentic models about the size of a match box.

Lesney cars add up to a big worldwide business. They are collected by children and adults alike.

The business got its start in 1947 when two British war veterans, Leslie C. Smith and John W. Odell, pooled their resources—$2,000 and set up a die - casting business in a bombed-out London pub.

Smith, here on a semi-annual trip to check on U.S. distribution of his products, recalled that rent was $6 a week.

When the Coronation of Queen Elizabeth came along in 1952, the young die-casters decided to branch out and produce a miniature Coronation coach as a souvenir. They sold millions in England and abroad.

"We decided there was a market for a miniature toy if authentically reproduced," says Smith.

They started out with what they call their Matchbox series of vintage cars, exactly reproduced to the specifications of the originals.

The Matchbox series includes 75 models of different cars. Each month two of the older models are dropped and two new ones introduced.

Children and adults buy them to form collections. They can assemble a full line of the models only through trading and paying premium prices to other owners for the models that have been discontinued.

In addition to the Matchbox series, Lesney produces "models of yesteryear" antique miniature toy vehicles, "king size" series of toy vehicles and "models of yesteryear" ash trays and cigarette boxes — 130 different toys in all.

Lesney markets its toys in 120 countries.

MISSISSIPPI'S FLOODWATERS SPREAD

SOME POTHOLE — A motorist gets a close look at what may be the biggest "pothole" in the country. The 600-foot-long, 25-foot-deep canyon was carved by water flowing down a hill and undermining the road 16 miles southwest of Peterborough, Ont. The gap is 40 feet wide at its widest point. Argued With LBJ Says PM

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson said Thursday he and President Johnson "had an argument" when they met earlier this month at Camp David, Md., but insisted they had parted friends.

The prime minister, holding a press conference on the second anniversary of his minority government's taking power, said "When I left him he certainly wasn't mad."

Mr. Pearson gave no details as what the argument was about, but there have been reports that the U.S. president was annoyed about the prime minister's suggestion of a "measured pause" in U.S. bombing against North Viet Nam "at the appropriate time."

The Pearson-Johnson meeting at Camp David was held the day following Mr. Pearson's speech in Philadelphia.

To newspaper men Mr. Pearson again emphasized that he had advocated a pause "at the right time."

The prime minister celebrated the second anniversary by attending a small reception given by his staff in his East Block office. The occasion also marked his 68th birthday today and he was presented with a red and green fishing cap.

He also told the press conference:

—A federal - provincial conference to discuss the federal government's war on poverty proposals and other measures will probably begin May 31.

— Indian Prime Minister Shastri, whose visit to the United States has been postponed, will visit Canada as planned. A definite date has not been set, but he is expected to be in the capital in early June and then go directly to the Commonwealth prime ministers' conference starting at mid-month in London.

—He will carry on "as long as I'm fit and healthy of mind, body and spirit. . . ."

—Discussions are under way with France for a possible sale of Canadian uranium, and he hopes the "security problem" of inspection to ensure its peaceful use can be solved.

—There is no particular time set for any cabinet changes and "there is no truth" in a report that Privy Council President McIlraith might become justice minister, succeeding Guy Favreau.

Mr. Pearson said although both houses of parliament have rejected President Johnson's offer to negotiate, regarding Viet Nam, they had rejected it "in a form I would like to think is not final."

The prime minister also said he assumes provinces that want to initiate arrangements with other countries will work through the federal government.

He was commenting on a speech by Paul Gerin-Lajoie, Quebec minister of education, who said recently that provinces have a right to negotiate international agreements with other countries in fields of provincial jurisdiction.

Queen Can Expect Hearty Welcome on Germany Trip

BONN (Reuters)—Queen Elizabeth can expect one of the most heart-warming receptions ever given a foreign visitor when she flies here in May for her long-awaited state visit to West Germany.

Millions of people are expected to fete her in more than 10 major cities, including West Berlin, more than 100 miles inside East Germany.

They will be greeting the British monarch both as a person and as a symbol of post-war Anglo-German reconciliation.

Many of them, particularly the older generation, may see in her a nostalgic reincarnation of the German monarchy abolished in 1918.

And, though the Queen speaks little German, they will follow with sympathy her first visit to the land of her forbears, who ruled both the Duchy of Hanover in northwest Germany and Britain from 1714 to 1837.

The many private visits made by Prince Philip to stay with his German relatives have increased West German interest in the British royal family.

When Elizabeth arrives at Bonn Airport May 18,—she will be the first reigning British monarch to visit Germany since her grandfather, King George V, attended the wedding of Princess Viktoria Luise, a daughter of Kaiser Wilhelm II, in 1913.

Across the Rhine from Bonn is a small, old hotel, the half-timbered Schaumburger Hof, where her great-great - grandmother, Queen Victoria, is said to have been courted by her future prince consort, Albert of Saxe-Coburg Gotha, then a student in the sleepy university town of Bonn.

Family links with Germany will also be marked by brief visits, during the country-wide tour, to some of the members of former German ruling houses related to the Queen and Prince Philip.

At Salem Castle, near the northern end of Lake Constance on the Swiss border, they will stay with the widowed Margravine Theodora of Baden, Philip's sister.

The queen will also meet other of her royal relatives, estimated to number more than 400, in West Germany.

The Grand Duchess Ernst August, head of the House of Hannover, and Prince Ludwig Ferdinand, head of the House of Hohenzollern and grandson of the last Kaiser.

Racial Truce Sought

BOGALUSA, La. (AP)—Negro leaders studied today a surprise offer by a Louisiana labor leader and two prominent political figures to mediate this paper mill town's racial troubles.

Mayor Jesse Cutrer promptly accepted the offer on behalf of Bogalusa whites. Negro leaders promised their answer later amid indications they would go along.

Biracial talks in this town of 14,000 whites and 8,000 Negroes stalled two weeks ago. Negotiators were unable to agree on who spoke for the Negro community.

The all-Negro Civic and Voters League has continued almost daily demonstrations protesting racial segregation. Although the Ku Klux Klan is strong here, city officials have managed to prevent serious racial incidents. Cutrer says the league does not speak for the total Negro community.

Nearly the entire Louisiana state police force—225 troopers in all — guarded the streets Thursday night as civil rights leader James Farmer of New York addressed a Negro rally. The show of force was ordered by Governor John McKeithen, who said he was determined to prevent any incidents.

THREE OFFERS

The mediation offer was made by Victor Bussie of Baton Rouge, state AFL - CIO president, State Senator Michael O'Keefe of New Orleans and Camille Gravel of Alexandria, former Democratic national committeeman.

In identical telegrams to Cutrer and Farmer, the trio said "failure to find a solution which recognizes the rights and responsibilities of all parties will do great harm to the citizens of Bogalusa and our entire state."

Also on the racial scene, there was a peaceful rock throwing demonstration on the University of Mississippi campus at Oxford Thursday night.

Iowa, Illinois Communities Awaiting Crest

In Manitoba Red River Drives Families Back

DUBUQUE, Iowa (AP)—Mississippi River floodwaters covered much of Dubuque today as the pounding current increased pressure on sections of western Illinois and eastern Iowa.

The tide was scheduled to peak at swamped Prairie du Chien, Wis., where nearly one-third of the city of 5,649 population is under water.

The river sweeping southward, stopped its steady rise at Quincy, Ill., giving workers some leeway to prepare fence against a predicted April 30 crest that could run eight feet above flood stage.

The river was running eight feet over its 17-foot flood stage in Dubuque as some 1,000 volunteers sandbagged levees and reinforcements streamed in to relieve weary workers who have hauled almost 300,000 bags of sand.

Officials say the river will crest Saturday night at 26.5 feet in Dubuque, a city of 57,000 at the Wisconsin - Illinois - Iowa junction. Overflows already have covered an eight-block riverside section in downtown Dubuque.

The Red Cross estimated that floods have damaged 1,000 homes in Iowa and injured 42 persons. President Johnson declared the state a disaster area, as he had done in Minnesota and Wisconsin. Floods have evicted an estimated 3,000 Iowans and caused $15,000,000 damage.

THREE HAVE DIED

Red Cross officials said the floods destroyed 48 homes and damaged 60 in Wisconsin. Three persons have died and damage is estimated at $18,700,000.

In Illinois, the flood caused at least as much havoc in East Dubuque as it did in Dubuque across the river. Police said there were 1,000 flood workers in East Dubuque, a town of 2,000. They said 700 residents had been evacuated as floodwaters covered the lowest two storey homes at the southern end of town.

There is only one bridge open in extreme northwestern Illinois—the one connecting East Dubuque, Ill., and Dubuque, Iowa. Officials said it may close soon.

Nearly every railway with routes through the flood area has rerouted its traffic. The Milwaukee Road trains from Chicago to Minneapolis are having a 1,100-mile detour that swings as far as Aberdeen, S.D.

No damage estimate is available for Illinois, where more than 3,000 persons have been forced from their homes.

In Minnesota, where 11 have died in the floods, the river subsided a foot, and 1,000 evacuees returned to their homes. At flood's peak, some 23,000 Minnesotans were homeless. Damage has been estimated at between $50,000,000 and $60,000,000.

EMERSON, Man. (CP)—Ross Gibson sat in his mother's home, about four blocks from where the Red River was creeping up to his own two-storey dwelling.

He hadn't figured on moving, he said. But he'd seen before what the Red could do, and it seemed to be "getting too close."

He moved with his wife Alice, their eight - year - old daughter Candace and their dog Rusty. All they took were clothes.

The Gibsons are one of a handful of families backing away from the sinister rise of the Red in this community of 930 near the United States border about 60 miles south of Winnipeg.

The crest is due to hit here Saturday, and the river late Thursday was 784.63 feet above sea level, up eight inches in 11 hours. That was about 1½ feet over the permanent dike capacity.

Since flood warnings started more than a week ago, bulldozers have pushed up a mud wall to protect a motel and about 30 low-lying homes. Sandbags protect an 18-bed hospital, already emptied.

About 10 homes have been evacuated. A civil defence spokesman said most left because access to them was cut.

Flood headquarters in Winnipeg said Thursday the crest was due to pass through Drayton, N.D., 35 miles upstream, at midnight Wednesday. The river did rise at Drayton but officials said it was not certain the crest had reached there.

At Morris, a town of 1,400 about midway between here and Winnipeg, the level was unchanged in 11 hours at 760.07 feet Thursday night.

At Winnipeg, it dropped one-tenth of a foot in the same period to stand at 20 feet above average ice level.

The weather office says weather will be on the cold side for the next three days with no appreciable precipitation expected.

Lack of rain for the last two weeks has been a key factor in lessening the threat of serious flooding in the Red River Valley in Manitoba.

The Red bulls like an accordion through much of the flat farmland of the southern part of the province, cuts through the heart of metropolitan Winnipeg and empties into Lake Winnipeg 25 miles north.

Destroy Six Bridges and Ferry Disrupting Red Transport Lines

From AP-Reuters

SAIGON (CP) — About 200 U.S. Air Force and navy planes destroyed six vital bridges and a river ferry in North Viet Nam today, a U.S. spokesman reported. It was the most destructive operation mounted to date against North Vietnamese transportation lines.

Several of the bridges were only moderately damaged in raids early in the day but were reported destroyed on repeated strikes.

In addition to bombs and rockets, the planes made extensive use of "ballpup" guided air-to-ground missiles.

The spokesman said the bridges destroyed were at Phuoc Thien, 120 miles south of Hanoi; Ly Nhan, 110 miles south of Hanoi; two at Phu Son, 150 miles south of Hanoi; Som Phuong, just north of the 17th parallel, and Xom Gia, 150 miles south of Hanoi.

Air force planes also struck the ferry at Phu Qui, 90 miles southwest of Hanoi.

All the planes returned safely. The pilots reported groundfire during most of the raids was light, and no enemy planes were spotted.

Leadership Is Aim of Geo. Hees

By WILLIAM NEVILLE

MONTREAL (CP) — George Hees is going to work on the Conservative party's Quebec organization as a prelude to a full-scale return to active federal politics.

His ultimate goal: A shot at the party leadership once John Diefenbaker steps down from the post.

When that time comes, Mr. Hees is confident he can capture the leadership.

Informed sources close to the ex-cabinet minister said Mr. Hees formed these plans recently after deciding he "had no choice" but to return to the political life he gave up in February, 1963, after a policy quarrel with then-Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

This decision, the sources said, was based on "tremendous" pressure exerted on Mr. Hees, now president of the Montreal and Canadian Stock exchanges, to return to Conservative ranks and shoot for the leadership for which he has

Believe Vancouver Police Planned Two Major Crimes

VANCOUVER (CP)—The investigation of possible police complicity in two major Vancouver crimes will be left up to the city police force itself, Mayor William Rathie said Thursday night.

He announced after a police commission meeting that a final commission will be sent to Attorney - General Robert Bonner "as being the governing authority."

Both the mayor and Mr. Bonner affirmed confidence in senior officers of the force.

The internal policy inquiry is unravelling:

—A murder-suicide Tuesday in which Constable Leonard Hogue shot his wife, his six children, then himself.

—Any connection Hogue and other force members may have had with a $1,250,000 February theft of cancelled money.

—Suspicions that members of the force may have been involved in a $13,000 bank holdup in January.

Police Chief Ralph Booth outlined progress of the force's investigation during an hour-long closed police commission meeting Thursday.

The chief reported on investigations into Hogue's relationship with former city constable Joseph Percival, 37, one of two men being held in Edmonton and charged with possession of $12,000 of the cancelled money.

Hogue and Percival were close friends when they served together on the force.

It was the police chief who earlier in the day connected members of his department with the bank holdup.

He said both jobs required knowledge of police procedure.

Booth said each crime falso holdup calls sent police units on useless chases. Other similarities would be disclosed "for obvious reasons."

RCMP continued Thursday to sort out the murder-suicide at Hogue's suburban Coquitlam home. The RCMP is responsible for policing that suburb.

The 34-year-old constable shot his wife and buried them his children, aged 3 to 13, before he took his own life.

Texas Gulf Officers' Offer To Return Shares Rejected

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Claude O. Stephens, president of the Texas Gulf Sulphur Co., Inc., and board of directors is satisfied no element of bad faith was involved in purchases challenged by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Stockholders of the company apparently agree.

The stockholders gave close attention Thursday as Stephens detailed the seven-year history of a spectacular copper, zinc and silver ore discovery near Timmins, Ont., and denied the commission's charges he and 12 other officers purchased thousands of shares of Texas Gulf stock while making a news release that was "materially false and misleading."

Stephens said the 13 officers offered to return all the questioned shares to the corporation "if we unanimously rejected the offer."

Dr. R. Walter Graham of Baltimore, a stockholder with 15,000 shares, said Stephens' report was the best he had ever heard from a company president.

The 250 stockholders present applauded. They also voted unanimous approval of Graham's informal resolution giving Stephens, the board and other officers a vote of confidence.

The SEC charged in a suit filed Monday in New York City the 13 directors - and officers

Needs President As Witness To Defend Three Klansmen

HAYNEVILLE, Ala. (AP)—Three Ku Klux Klansmen were free on $10,000 bond each today awaiting trial on first-degree murder charges in the ambush death of a Detroit mother who marched for civil rights.

The three said they were innocent and had been subject to almost continuous harassment by telephone calls and letters "in recent weeks.

Their lawyer, Matt H. Murphy, Jr., criticized President Johnson for his remarks in connection with the arrest of Klan members. Murphy said he would have to subpoena the president "if I fairly hope to represent these men."

The Lowndes County grand jury returned indictments in Hayneville Thursday naming Rionzo Thomas, 41, and William Orville Eaton, 41, both of Bessemer, Ala. and Collie Leroy Wilkins Jr., 21, of Fairfield, Ala.

The indictments charged that each man "unlawfully and with malice aforethought killed Viola Gregg Liuzzo by shooting her with a pistol."

Mrs. Liuzzo, the 39-year-old wife of a teamsters union official and mother of five children, was shot to death from a passing car as she drove along U.S. 80 near Lowndesboro the night of March 25. The Selma-to-Montgomery march ended that day.

Charges were dismissed against a fourth man, Gary Thomas Rowe, 34, of Birmingham, described by the New York Times as a paid undercover agent for the FBI, working inside the Klan. Federal officials declined comment.

The cases of the three indicted on murder charges were placed on the docket for the next term of circuit court starting May 3. Conviction of first-degree murder carries a penalty of death or life imprisonment.

MARMORA (Special) — "For God's sake help us — we're not feeling".

The desperate cry came from three teenage boys clinging to their home-made raft floating in "The Cove" on the south side of the Crowe River yesterday afternoon.

An hour later Brian Mont, 13; Paul McTaggart, 13 both of Marmora and Brock Cooper, 11 of Peterborough were taken to safety soaked and chilled by the cold water of the river.

Mrs. Roy Barker heard their cries and called her son, Jack, 15, and Dave McManus who rushed in a nearby boathouse to secure a boat.

The Marmora Fire Department raced to the scene and assisted in bringing the boys to shore.

The youngsters set out in the raft for an hours' fun. Suddenly it capsized throwing all three occupants into the water.

Cooper, it is stated, went down twice before he was hauled to safety by his friends.

Authorities here say it is a miracle the trio did not drown. How the boys got back aboard the raft is still a big question.

They lost rubber boots and raincoats when the raft upset also the single paddle they took with them.

The water of the river is very deep at this point.

Except for the soaking and chilled bodies, the boys announce the worse for their misadventure.

Jack Barker and McManus were forced to carry the rescue boat a distance before they could launch it.

Mr. Bourne is reported to have been installing electric wiring in the house but was not present when the fire broke out.

Hon. Leslie M. Frost Heads $200,000 Queen's Appeal

KINGSTON — Hon. Leslie M. Frost of Lindsay, former prime minister of Ontario has accepted the honorary chairmanship of a $200,000 financial appeal for Queen's Theological College, Dr. Elias Andrews, principal of the college, announced at the 126th Theological College Convocation at Chalmers United Church here, Wednesday night.

Dr. Andrews also announced that John Black of Kingston, who is well known as a lawyer and who has been actively associated with congregational affairs in his own church, the Kingston Presbytery, and throughout the Bay of Quinte Conference, has accepted the general chairmanship of the campaign. It was approved by the 1964 meeting of the Bay of Quinte Conference held in Kingston. The appeal is being conducted throughout the conference to enable the college to increase its endowment funds and thus help increase its full time faculty in line with its responsibilities for training ministers for United Church.

STRESSES NEED

In his principal's remarks at the 124th convocation, Dr. Andrews stressed the need for increasing numbers of candidates for the ministry of the United Church, in view of the steadily increasing population of Canada and the growth of the United Church accordingly. While the Queen's Theological College has the largest enrolment in its history (57 in the college itself, and a total of 75 students in all) the number of those who have indicated their intention of continuing their studies for the ministry has not always been "a decline in candidates for our ministry which will reflect itself in the numbers graduated six years from now, unless more students who have graduated in arts or who are now in the process of graduating decide to enter the ministry" he said.

The Queen's Theological College which this year graduated 34 men for the ministry has graduated more than 800 who have served first the Presbyterian Church and since then United Union in 1925, the United Church of Canada.

Looking ahead, Dr. Andrews said that the present graduating class of 14, with indications of a similar number graduating in 1966, "the prospect of larger classes for the next two or three years is good."

Turning to the college financial appeal, Dr. Andrews said, for early autumn this year, Dr. Andrews said, "We hope that our appeal will be welcomed by the churches of this city and from all the areas of our conference, for this college richly deserves." The principal pointed out that no appeal to the conference for financial support has been made since 1925 and nothing of a significant nature in the way of support has been sought from the eastern Ontario area which the college serves directly, for over 50 years.

J. W. Holmes, Former Clerk Of City, Dies

Former City Clerk, James Wilfred Holmes died at his home, 58 Queen Street, early this Friday morning after an illness that had extended for the past six months.

A native of Hansport, Nova Scotia, he was the son of the late Captain W. and Mrs. Holmes, and was in his 81st year. Mr. Holmes was educated in Nova Scotia and came to this city where he held a fine record in the treasurer's office and in 1914 was appointed city clerk, a position he filled with distinction until 1953 when he retired from office for a well deserved rest from municipal worries.

Mr. Holmes was a kindly man in every respect of the ways respected the views of others, never became officious and always had time to answer the most trivial questions. He served under many mayors and councils and each and everyone respected his advice and wise counsel, as he was a man full of virtue and integrity and his word was his bond.

He was a faithful and devout member of Bridge Street United Church and served the congregation in many capacities and was elder of the church for many years. Mr. Holmes was also a member of the Rotary Club for many years and one of its honorary members. Fraternally he was a member of Eureka Lodge A. F. & A. M. No. 163 and was past Worshipful Master of the lodge for two terms.

In his private life he was a kindly and considerate man, always had a friendly smile and was dependable in his loving person. He enjoyed the friendship of a wide circle who will sincerely regret his death.

Mr. Holmes is survived by a sister-in-law, Mrs. Mathilda Young and a niece, Mrs. Shoemaker of California. His wife, the former Jean Young, died in July of last year.

The funeral will be held from the Finnicum Funeral Home to Cambe Funeral Home on Saturday afternoon with interment in Belleville cemetery.

RMC Cadet Will Escort Luci Johnson

NORFOLK, Va. (AP)—Put on your dancing shoes, Luci, your escort is ready to dance.

J. D. S. (Dave) Harries, cadet wing commander at the Royal Military College in Kingston, Ont., admits he's been too busy at school to learn the latest steps.

"But I'm willing to try any dance she wants to put forth."

Dancing seemed the least concern for Harries and 30 fellow cadets who will escort Queen Luci Baines Johnson and her princesses of the Azalea Festival.

Here to have a good time—final exams just ended—the cadets' first question after alighting from a RCAF plane was:

"How do you do the Watusi and the Frug?"

Tall, blond and handsome Dave Harries, 22-year-old engineering senior, was anxious to meet Luci.

Harries has read news stories and magazines avidly, trying to learn all he could about the president's daughter. And although he isn't sure he has ever seen an azalea, he's prepared on that score, too.

He visited his grandfather, a gardening authority, this week to research the azalea plant.

Harries is the son of Lt. Col. Maurice D. Harries of Grimsby, Ont. In former years azalea queen escorts have been chosen from U.S. military colleges but festival officials this year sought greater NATO participation and asked the Canadian embassy in Washington to suggest a college to provide an escort. RMC was invited and proposed Harries.

Racing Fans Spectators of Armed Robbery

LONDON (Reuters)—Crowds of horse-racing fans were spectators Thursday when four policemen leaped off a crowded train in a vain attempt to catch eight masked bandits who had stolen $19,000 ($48,000) from a mail truck.

Policemen Reginald Ball and three colleagues were strapphanging on the train to Epsom, south of London, where they were ordered to duty at a horse race.

As the train sped through the leafy Surrey town of Sutton, Ball saw the mail truck under attack. He stopped the train and with the other three police officers scrambled down the embankment. But the thieves' getaway car disappeared out of sight as the breathless quartet arrived.

The police found two battered and bleeding post office employees who had been hit over the head by the bandits.

The eight robbers, waving pick-axe handles, had squirted ammonia into the mail van driver's face, clubbed another guard beside him and made off with sacks of cash and stamps.

Thursday night police scoured the area but found no clue to the thieves' identity.

Governor-general Vanier Observes 77th Birthday

OTTAWA (CP) — Georges Philias Vanier, soldier, lawyer, diplomat and author, celebrates his 77th birthday today.

It may be his last birthday celebration as governor-general of Canada. Now on an extension of his term of office, Gen. Vanier is in good health and making plans for further travel across the country.

He has already logged almost 60,000 miles and delivered nearly 400 speeches to organizations in all parts of Canada since his appointment Sept. 15, 1959.

There has been no indication when he will step down from his third major career. Prime Minister Pearson announced last summer that the tall, white-haired soldier-diplomat would remain in office at least a year beyond the normal five-year term.

His schedule for the next few months calls for several trips.

He will open the University of Windsor April 28, visiting Toronto en route back to the capital. He will open a new institute of cardiology at Montreal May 17 and be present at inspection day of Trinity College School at Port Hope, Ont., May 25.

SHAH TO VISIT

The Shah of Iran is scheduled to visit Canada in May and will be a guest of Gen. and Mme. Vanier at Rideau Hall while here.

Mme. Vanier nearly always accompanies the governor-general on his travels. The vice-regal couple have become such a team that the nation's political leaders paid them special tribute in Parliament last summer when the extension of his term of office was announced.

Performing one of his most important ceremonial duties—reading the speech from the throne at the opening of Parliament — has made the governor-general a familiar figure to many Canadians on television.

He's an enthusiastic television fan himself and rarely misses National Hockey League games. As a native Montrealer, he is taking a special interest in the NHL finals between Montreal Canadiens and Chicago Black Hawks.

Besides television, a favorite relaxation is reading. He's an avid newspaper reader and enjoys novels and current history.

SPEECHES POLISHED

He spends considerable effort on his speeches, shaping the basic research done by his staff and polishing the wording often right to the time of delivery. He's delivered 396 formal speeches ranging in length between two minutes and half an hour during his period in office.

Deseronto Man Given $30,000 In Accident

DESERONTO — A Deseronto widower has been awarded $30,000 damages for an automobile accident that took the life of his wife.

The judgment, in favor of James Brennan, involved Ottawa radio personality Lyle Lyle and was the biggest claim contested at the current Ontario Supreme Court sittings in Belleville.

The case, won by Mr. Brennan's lawyer Robert Temple, involved an original claim of $140,000.

Legal counsel for Mr. Lyle, whose young daughter was killed in the same crash near Tweed in 1963, launched a counter-claim.

However, Mr. Justice W. D. Parker dismissed the Lyle claim and in addition, found costs in favor of Mr. Brennan.

The head-on crash on a Sunday afternoon on Highway 37, that tragically killed Mrs. Genevieve Brennan and Jennifer Lye. It sent eight others to hospital, some of them, including Mr. and Mrs. Lye and Mr. Brennan, critically injured.

Child Reported Off Critical List

The four-year-old daughter of a city bus driver, feared seriously injured in a traffic accident a week ago, today was reported off the critical list.

Jane O'Connor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerry O'Confor, was said recovering rapidly at the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto.

The girl received head injuries when she dashed in front of a taxi near her Charles Street home.

World Veterans Nominated For '65 Nobel Peace Prize; Local Men Off to Parley

Mr. J. C. Lundberg, Dominion President of the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans of Canada, has been informed that the World Veterans Federation has been nominated for the 1965 Nobel Peace Prize by the Right Honorable Phillip Noel-Baker, British disarmament expert.

The Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans in Canada is one of the major organizations of the World Veterans Federation. Mr. Lundberg, accompanied by Mr. George R. Christopher, an executive member of Unit 201 in Belleville, will leave Belleville on Monday, April 26, to attend the World Veterans Federation Conference to be held in Lausanne, Switzerland.

Mr. Lundberg will also make a stop in Rome where arrangements have been made through Mr. Robert Temple, M.P. for South Hastings, for Mr. Lundberg to pay the respects of the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans in Canada to his Holiness Pope Paul VI.

Mr. Lundberg and Mr. Christopher will be accompanied by their wives.

Both Mr. Lundberg and Mr. Christopher are with the CNR Rideau Trek.

The public statement by Mr. Noel-Baker confirming the Nobel Peace Prize nomination was released in Oslo by Colonel Bjorn Egge. In his statement Mr. Noel-Baker recipted in 1959 of the Peace Prize, recalled that 1965 marks the 20th anniversary of the end of World War II and the founding of the United Nations. He stated that it would be particularly appropriate to recognize in this year the work of the International Veterans' Organization which has for 15 years devoted itself to the cause of world peace.

He pointed out that the WVF, which was founded in 1950, has carried out effective international activities for the promotion of disarmament and arms control, for the protection of human rights, for economic and social development and for strengthening the United Nations. Its work has made it a leading international non-governmental organization in these fields.

Mr. Noel-Baker said, "It is essential in these critical times to find the means of expressing effectively the hopes of people everywhere for peace and freedom. I am convinced that the World Veterans' Federation, representing those who have known best the tragedy and suffering of war, has given and is giving voice to those hopes. Such opinion richly merits the honor of the Nobel Peace Prize."

The World Veterans' Federation is an organization grouping more than 160 associations of veterans of war victims in 50 countries with a total of 20,000,000 members. Dedicated to the achievement of international peace and freedom through implementation of the principles of the United Nations' Charter, it enjoys Category A consultative status with the United Nations' Economic and Social Council and similar relationships with UN Specialized Agencies active in its field of interest.

Oil Heating To Be Placed In New School

Higher than expected operational costs have resulted in the Bay of Quinte High School District Board to decide on oil heating instead of electric heating for the proposed fourth high school to be built in West Belleville.

Calling of tenders for the proposed new school is not expected to take place until around the end of May with a hoped-for completion date of September 1st, 1966.

Board members originally had planned to install electric heating in the new building, but operational costs were felt too high and the decision this week was to install oil heating with hot water.

AGENDA NOT COMPLETED

Much of this week's school board meeting was taken up in detailed discussion of planning for the new school with result that the full agenda was not completed. The remainder of the board agenda will be completed next Wednesday.

The board decided to have the city parks board do the grass cutting on playing fields at the Quinte Secondary and Secondary schools. Lawns at the two schools will continue to be cut by the school maintenance staff.

The board will consider the advisability of hiring a school equipment maintenance supervisor. The school equipment for which a maintenance supervisor is being discussed includes specialized machines in the school shops.

Purchase of 29 new typewriters, four of them electric, was authorized by the board. The purchase will be divided between Eames Office, O'Neill's, Underwood and IBM.

Circuit Assembly Meets at Cobourg

A delegation of 110 Belleville residents will journey to Cobourg this weekend to attend a Circuit Assembly of Jehovah's Witnesses being held in Cobourg's District Collegiate East School.

Mr. Robert Joy, presiding minister of Belleville West congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, said that the semi-annual assembly program was to provide the Witnesses of the 16 area congregations with advanced training for their Christian ministry.

Saturday afternoon a main feature of the assembly program will be a baptismal ceremony when new ministers of the group, after donning their swim suits, will be totally immersed in water as an outward symbol of what the Witnesses explain as "Christian dedication to do the will of God." Spokesman for the group said that last year more than 68,000 new ministers were baptized in this manner worldwide.

Mods and Rockers

Britain's "Mods" and "Rockers" are on the rampage again, disturbing the peace of coastal resorts from Brighton in the south to Great Yarmouth in East Anglia.

These long-haired, leather-jacketed young upstarts and their contemporaries in other lands —Sweden's "raggare" and the knife and gun-wielding toughs of the United States—are all part of the same phenomena that has to do with automation, unemployment, boredom, rootlessness, lack of recognition and opportunity. These in turn stem from another modern malady—prosperity, a contradiction in terms but nevertheless representing the concept of competitiveness and survival of the fittest which separates the wheat from the chaff on the human scene.

Those who survive are the business executives with good homes, one or two cars and security. The others are the misfits of our society who are insecure, have no prospects and no interest in trying to overcome their limitations. But they too are humankind and have rights and needs. They, too, must express themselves and must have outlets for whatever motivates them. The trouble is, their motivations may be erratic, uncertain, and have no basis in what society regards as civilized behaviour.

Thus we observe occasional eruptions of the kind we see described in the news columns, from Stockholm to London and New York and sometimes closer to home, in Toronto and Montreal. In Canada such outbursts may be related less to the activities of youth gangs than to more hazardous pursuits like bank robberies and outright murder by psychologically disturbed adults.

In Britain, still one of the most civilized nations of the world, such disturbances go hand in hand with reports of its general prosperity. The Christian Science Monitor recently featured an article on "Old Britain's new towns," in which are described the new communities that are seen as the answer to the "clutter and congestion of 20th century urban living." "Light, space and heating," say writer Melita Knowles, "are some of the elements that have induced thousands of Britons to put down roots in the new communities."

But crowding remains and young Britons express continuing restlessness. Probably it is only a passing phase. Our world is what it is, a combination of expressions of positive good and Christian principles and of darkness and evil passions. It will ever be thus. Society can only try to achieve the greatest good for the greatest number, so that the restlessness that expresses itself in modern youth may be channelled to new and positive ends.

"Inside" Profits

The U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission is suing most of the top corporate officers of the Texas Gulf Sulphur Co. It alleges that they purchased thousands of shares of the company while withholding knowledge of their rich ore find near Timmins. The Commission wants to reimburse those persons who sold their shares to the "insiders."

This suit serves to emphasize the high standard of ethics which the U.S. endeavors to maintain in transactions on stock exchanges. Such purchases by insiders are not prohibited in Canada. And indeed the Canadian attitude, while not so idealistic as that assumed by authorities in the U.S., may well be the better one, because it is practical.

In the general course of events some people are going to have a more accurate knowledge of a company's fortunes than are the members of the general public, and it would appear to be virtually impossible to devise methods of preventing them from profiting by this knowledge.

Here in Canada investors would be satisfied if securities commissions could succeed in preventing "insiders" from selling stock which they know is worthless, or nearly so, behind the smokescreen of rumors which purport to promise rich profits to the purchasers.

Letter to the Editor

Barber Answers Letter About Union

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer

Re the letter appearing in the issue of your paper April 19th signed "Maple Leaf."

We find it very disturbing that a person would hide behind the Maple Leaf to find out the facts rather than come into one of the Union Shops and ask one of the members.

That the increase in prices of haircuts was due to high union fees going out of the country to the United States could be put be farther from the truth.

Each member pays $48 per year of which 50% remains in the Belleville Local 466 bank account. The other 50% goes to the International which goes towards (1) life insurance, (2) union education, (3) Labor Council and the furtherance of labor movement. This international spends one third more than it receives for Canadian maintenance. The money in the local fund is used for sick members, meetings and general expense.

We have held the line on prices since October 1961, and during that time other industries have forged ahead in salaries to keep pace with the cost of living. In the past number of years we have lost several young qualified barbers to industrial plants or stores because they could make a living wage from the barbering trade.

We the local barbers tried standing on our own with a local association, but found that two or three men were doing all the work and losing time away from their shops doing the local's business which Mr. Ricard, our International representative now does for us, which by the way is not the internationally known Ricard.

It is not the fault of the barbers or any other Union that our American friends had the foresight to establish the international head office in their country. We too would like to see an All-Canadian union but we have neither the funds nor the experienced staff to do so.

In regard to strong-arm pressure against people who are not members, have no fear, barbers are talkers not fighters or strong arm men.

If "Maple Leaf" wishes to consult the Bureau of Statistics he will find the barbering industry is a sadly depressed state of affairs against the present day standards of economics.

Thank you "Maple Leaf" for your interest in the barbers' welfare and may we continue to serve you and other citizens with better conditions and service through the International union for a long time to come.

Paul Clare,
Local 466,
International Barbers Union.

Dear Dr. Molner: My husband was hospitalized for 20 days with what the doctor diagnosed as pneumonitis, an infection in both lungs.

Is this related to tuberculosis? Some of the tests pointed that way. X-rays were taken about twice a week to note the progress of the lung cells.

If our doctor prescribed bed rest, quietness and no exertion.

Will you please describe this disease in detail? Does it usually recur? — Mrs. J. G.

Pneumonitis is a frequent ailment, but it isn't just one disease, any more than a sore toe is always a single ailment. What ails the toe? Gout, a corn, somebody stepped on it, a fungus infection (athlete's foot), arthritis, a bunion, plantar wart, sprain, or what?

Well, it's the same with pneumonitis, which accidentally means inflammation of the lung, of lungs.

If you have pneumonia, or tuberculosis, or several other lung ailments, there will be inflammation. Or sometimes this just a transient virus which inflames the respiratory surfaces, and all that's required is some rest until normal physical defences "drive" off the virus and the case is cured.

Pneumonitis frequently clears up quickly and easily with a few days in bed and some antibiotics to subdue any secondary infections which may be the invader after a virus has inflamed the tissues.

In other cases, one cannot be immediately certain as to whether the inflammation is a sign of some more serious case such as, for example, tuberculosis, silicosis, a tumor, or one of the several varieties of pneumonia. The safe course, then, is rest plus some further tests.

Does pneumonitis recur? Not necessarily. Some particular germ may come along once in a lifetime, inflame the lungs, be conquered, and that's that. Or, to go to the other extreme, the lungs of a particular patient may be especially vulnerable to any sort of irritant, and pneumonitis may occur repeatedly, touched off by attacks which would be of no consequence to someone else.

Some people have nervous stomachs. Some have sensitive skins which are annoyed by many irritants. Some lungs—well, why try to make a list of the various portions of our anatomy which may be vulnerable?

But I think this explanation of pneumonitis can be very helpful. Don't push the panic button because of the diagnosis. But if the case is prolonged, then pay special attention to the lungs and to any factor (including fatigue, frequent colds, faulty nutrition) which may invite other attacks.

To Your Good Health

Pneumonitis Occurs Often But Isn't Just One Disease

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Are dog biscuits harmful for human consumption? I enjoy them quite a lot. What would the calorie value be for a small milk bone biscuit? If the exact figures are not available, give me a rough estimate. I suppose this sounds strange but I'm sure many other people have the same question. — M. M.

They won't be harmful if you have good teeth—such biscuits are deliberately made quite hard because dogs like things to chew.

I don't know why you like 'em, though, but I've never tried one.

There are so many sizes of milk bone biscuits and the like that I can't possibly answer the calorie question, but I'm rather sure the manufacturer can. Whether you tell him you eat them yourself, or dissemble and say that your dog is on a reducing diet, is up to you.

Reported Thoughts

Windsor Star

Occasionally politicians or others complain about being misquoted by reporters. Such complaints, however, are the exception rather than the rule. Most politicians make no objections to the manner in which they are quoted. Their disquiet is rather that they are not quoted more often, or more extensively.

The late Lord Morrison, long prominent in Labor and the wartime coalition governments, once paid a tribute to a certain reporter. He said: "He not only reports accurately what I say but what I am thinking as well." The reporter was able not only to hear his words but to follow his thoughts.

This, of course, is not unusual. A politician, especially if speaking extemporaneously may not always couch his language clearly; may not always get across in words what he has in his mind. The experienced reporter, if he knows what the speaker intended, can tidy up the language and make the sense of it more explicit.

For every politician who complains about being misquoted, there are many others who appreciate a reporter who understands the thinking behind the words uttered and clarifies what has been said.

"Now Boys, Do You Have Your Pencils Ready?"

Militant Pacifism

By Arthur Hoppe
In The San Francisco Chronicle

Pacifists will be overjoyed to see we've made another big peace overture to Vietnam. This one consisted of several tons of overtures which our planes dropped on various North Vietnamese targets, blowing them sky-high.

It was our biggest bid to date.

For, as you know, the sole reason we are now bombing North Vietnam is that we may negotiate for peace from a position of strength.

Or, as one high official explained it in the New York Times, our aim is "to do something we could stop doing to them in return for equivalent concessions."

I'm sure most Americans wholeheartedly support these peaceful bombing raids. But I fear there may be a few who fail to grasp the peace-loving concept behind them.

Thus, to clear up any lingering confusion, I turned to the noted military affairs analyst, Corporal Homer Pettibone, U.S. Army Flying Corps (retired).

Q—Corporal, about these bombings . . .

A—Peace is our only business.

Q—I know, sir, but can you explain this concept of doing something to them we can stop doing to them?

A—Certainly. It's a smashing break-through in strategy. Obviously, we cannot achieve peace unless we stop doing things to the enemy. And the more we do, the more we can stop doing and the more certain peace becomes.

Q—I see, it sounds a little dangerous.

A—Well, there is always the possibility the enemy may see through our clever strategy and steal it. In that event, they could, of course, start doing something to us that we were doing if we would stop doing what we are doing to them.

However, we have made it clear that if they do, we would do something else to them that we could stop doing if they would stop doing what they are doing.

Q—I'm sorry, but perhaps if you could give an example.

A—If they attack us, we'll bomb Hanoi to smithereens.

Q—We stand ready, then, to wage all-out peace?

A—At the slightest provocation. It is a question, as our President has said, of "determination."

Q—Determination?

A—Yes, we must prove we are more determined to achieve peace than they are to war. Unfortunately, we have the bombs to prove it with.

Q—Every bomb we drop, then, is another blow for peace?

A — Quite correct. We military men refer to this new strategy as the Doctrine of Militant Pacifism.

Q — Do you think it will work?

A — Most certainly. For it overcomes the one insurmountable obstacle which has always prevented us from negotiating a peace treaty with North Vietnam.

FQ — What is that?

A — We haven't been at war with them so now.

Q — Ingenious.

A — True. Indeed, through a vigorous application of this strategy, we can look forward to a lasting world-wide peace. Unfortunately, we aren't quite ready yet to drop peace feelers on Russia and Red China.

Q — What do we lack?

A — An adequate fallout shelter program to keep our casualties below 100 million.

Q — That's a shame.

A — Yes, as we military pacifists say, "Peace is hell."

Students Are Not Getting Fair Deal

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Last month, at the convention of the Association for Higher Education in Chicago, a necessary warning was given to hundreds of college presidents assembled there, by Logan Wilson, president of the American Council on Education.

He advised that American colleges should stop competing in the race to be "distinguished" research centres, and should spend more time on developing better teaching, and less time "in encouraging the output of needless publication."

This is, in large part, what much of the student fuss in many colleges is all about. The undergraduates feel they are getting the dirty end of the stick while tuitions are going up, and examinations are made stiffer, the quality of teaching is degenerating.

The problem was tersely and truthfully expressed not long ago by the eminent professor of English at Harvard, Howard Mumford Jones. In a letter to The Reporter magazine, Jones wrote about "a kind of academic snobbery that vastly troubles local boys here.

"If there is a junior high school in such and such a locality," he illustrated, "the locality is not satisfied to make it the best possible junior high school but it is unhappy unless it becomes a full-fledged senior high school."

Likewise, he continued, every pressure is exerted to convert a good junior college into a four-year college, giving an A. B. degree. If what was once a "normal school" and is now a state university is to "rate" it must become a liberal arts college, no matter how badly it is suited for such a purpose.

"But when everything becomes a university," Jones points out, "the university concept loses meaning . . . Men are governed by terms; and the refusal to distinguish on a simple yet elemental educational terms is the cause of the besetting sins of secondary and higher education in these United States."

The schools are engaged not in a struggle for excellence but in a race for prestige, for larger budgets, for recruiting "name" faculty members who have published a great deal, for becoming "distinguished" before they have even begun to be educated in terms of transmitting knowledge to their students.

"Raising standards" is a commendable goal, but this should not mean merely raising admission standards for students, but raising the level of teaching itself. Too often, high standards of admission are accompanied by low standards of instruction. Imparting knowledge to the student is almost the last, and least, desideratum of the university.

Every school wants to upgrade its "image." But image without substance is an optical illusion, not an achievement. The students who are rebelling on campuses throughout the nation in whatever foolish or futile ways — are really asking to be regarded as persons, and not as anonymous units in a massive processing plant called Education.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

April 22rd, 1943

Despite the fact that the district was visited with a sharp frost over the night, little damage was done to early growth, it was reported today by one grower. During the night the mercury dropped to a low of 22 degrees, ten below the freezing point, and resulted in approximately ¼ inch of ice appearing on street puddles.

Reason for the frost doing no apparent damage was because of the colder weather of the past few dr which tended to harden the plants as protection against the weather dropping below freezing. Most damage occurs following a few days of really warm weather with a sudden frost at night. Precautions were not far enough advanced to be affected by the frost, it was stated, while only a very few gardeners had seeds already showing through the ground to be nipped as a result of the frost.

Small Farmers

Calgary Herald

In an age of mechanization, the small farm, with its half - or quarter section of land, is no longer an economic viable proposition; it is the larger farm, which pays its way. The effect of this has been a gradual decline in the nation's rural population. We suggest that government financial assistance to such farmers will at best be a crutch to keep them going; it will not restore them to a state of independent economic solvency or do anything to benefit the national economy.

Russia Puts TV Satellite Into Orbit

From AP-Reuters

MOSCOW (CP)—The Soviet Union announced today that it had put its first communications satellite into orbit and had successfully carried out television transmissions between Moscow and Vladivostok, 3,700 miles east of the Soviet capital on the Sea of Japan.

Tass, the Soviet news agency, said the satellite Molniya 1 went into a "high elliptical orbit" today.

The name Molniya means lightning.

Tass said all equipment on board was operating normally following this morning's blastoff.

The capsule carried equipment both for the relay of television programs and for long-distance radio communications.

It also carried a command and measuring complex and a special system for receiving action and for correcting its orbit.

Heavy Vote Is Expected In Plebiscite

PICTON (Staff) — A heavy vote is expected on Monday's election for the liquor plebiscite in Picton. Both "Yes" and "No" committees have been well organized in preparation for the vote. Both committees have mailed letters to all voters.

Voters must reside in the town of Picton and must have been residents for two months prior to the election. All must be British subjects and 21 years of age. Since polls do not close until 8.00 p.m. and two ballots are being used returns are expected to be late. The official returns will be announced on Tuesday afternoon by returning officer F. L. Ward, Q.C.

Horse Show Will Be Held Early in June

PICTON (Staff) — Plans are now being made for the annual spring horse show, sponsored by Picton's Elevator Club and the Prince Edward Agricultural Society. As in the past it will be held in the County Centre at the fair grounds. This year, however, there will be two shows, Friday night, June 4th, and Saturday night, June 5. The Friday night show will be designed especially for the children, who will receive special tickets at a reduced admission. In the past the show has always been a sellout. All seats will be reserved and tickets will be on sale in the near future.

Plans Made To Form Cub, Scout Troops

PICTON (Staff) — Residents and interested parents in the village of Northport Wednesday night gathered at the United Church hall to make plans for the formation of a Scout and Cub movement in that village. Present for the occasion were V. Rogers, president of Prince Edward County Scout Council, who spoke on Scouting activities in the county and both he and the District Scout Commissioner, William Gestrie of Wellington, explained the procedure in setting up Group committees and the troops.

Chairman of the Group committee will be Rev. William H. Stobbart, Scout Leader U. W. Hall and Cub Leader Gordon Jackson.

Many Scout officials from various troops in the county were in attendance. Registration night for Scouts and Cubs has been set for Tuesday, May 4th, at 7.30 p.m. and the first meeting of the newly-formed Group committee will be Thursday evening, May 6th.

"My instruction were to deliver these and his note of apology to a stubborn hard-headed blonde at this address."

Concrete Arches Erected For 'Quinte Skyway' Bridge

PICTON (Staff) — Work is progressing more rapidly this week on the new "Quinte Skyway" bridge being erected at the narrow section of the Bay of Quinte, between Green Point in Prince Edward County, and Deseronto. Near the ferry landing, on the south side of the bay, workmen are erecting high concrete arches, which will rise to a height of 90 feet above the water level and allow shipping to pass to the bay to Belleville and Point Anne.

Similar supports are also being erected on the Deseronto side of the bay.

Also in this area of the county construction has begun on the new eight classroom school in the township of Sophiasburg. This school, located at the junction of County Roads 8 and 15 near the Big Island bridge, will serve a great need for adequate school facilities and will also boast a multi-purpose room which may be used as an auditorium or for recreation.

Will Rebuild Highway in Bloomfield

PICTON (Staff) — The highway running through the village of Bloomfield will be rebuilt this year. According to Reeve Henry Leavens it is expected work will start about June 1st. Last year Wellington had the Main Street of the village redone.

Widening, building new curbs and gutters along a one-mile stretch are in the proposed plans. When complete the street reverts to the village for maintenance.

Ten Homeless Following $15,000 Fire in Duplex

PICTON — Ten Picton persons are homeless following a fire which completely demolished the interior of a two-storey frame duplex at 376 East Main Street at noon on Thursday. The house which is owned by Gregory Cole, was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Cole Lalonde and their two children age 15 and 13 and Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Cole, son of the owner, and their four children whose ages ranged from seven months to four years.

Mrs. Cole was out of doors hanging clothes when the fire was discovered, her four children were also out of the house playing at the time. The Lalonde children were away visiting when the fire occured and Mrs. Lalonde was the only occupant of the house when smoke was discovered coming from the Lalonde section. The Lalonde's managed to save a few of their belongings and very little furniture - the Coles lost everything. Mrs. Cole did manage to save her purse. Both Mr. Lalonde and Mr. Cole were both working at the time. Damage is estimated between $10,000 and $15,000. Cause of the fire is not yet certain but according to Fire Chief Bell of the Picton Fire Department all indications point to faulty space heater.

County Council Members Take Bus Tour

PICTON—Tuesday and Wednesday of this week Prince Edward County council members were taken by bus on their annual county roads tour. Highlights of the "Council Tour" were visits to the new Quinte Skyway bridge site, the Melville bridge in Ameliasburg township and Huyck's Point in Hillier township. There has been discussion on building a dam at the bridge site at Melville bridge as a conservation project as water dries up in the adjacent watershed during the summer months.

A new development road is proposed for Huyck's Point some time in the future.

Susanna's Family Fare

SLIP, SLIP, SLID!

Dear Susanna: Do you have any ideas about keeping a satin covered comforter from slipping off the bed? Every morning it is on the floor. One suggestion I was given was to insert glass thumb tack on hooks into the side slats and sew loops on the comforter. This was no help to me as our bed has a spring mattress with metal rails. I have wanted a comforter for 20 years and just love it, but do want to keep it in its new condition. Please write soon. — B. M. G.

The first thing my mother always did when a new comforter came into the house was to stitch a wide double band of material to the bottom of it. This of course, was tucked well in under the mattress and the side bed clothing and there was never any problem with the comforter slipping off the bed. It's a perfectly wonderful solution.

A piece of matching satin about 36" wide, folded in half both sides of the bottom of the comforter and stitched about half an inch in from the edge looks elegant. However, it is a little costly, and since it is always tucked in anyway, a sturdy piece of cotton material will do quite nicely — you might dye it the right shade.

I think I should also pass on a suggestion received in the mail from Mrs. B. Perry, who advises that clothes pins which snap the bottom of the comforter to the bed spread or top blanket or sheet are helpful in solving this problem. Although this would be a lot less trouble, I feel it would be a much more temporary solution. Don't you?

However, sleep on it for now, and decide which one you'll undertake in the morning as you are picking up your comforter. — SUSANNA

P.S. I'm looking forward to passing on your most helpful hints.

CHAMOIS OR CHAMELEON?

Dear Susanna: So it's car washing and window cleaning time and who has seen the chamois? After much searching it turns up in a dreadful wrinkled, hard-as-board condition. What to do? Just soak it in warm water to which a spoonful of olive oil has been added. It will immerge utterly soft and fresh and usable.

You may be interested to know that I often read your column to my husband at afternoon coffee time, and since he thinks that you and your readers render a terrific service, it was his idea for me to send you this idea of his — if you know what I mean. — Mrs. H. B. Ballantyne

Glad you loud and clear. Do thank him. From all of us to him: "Bless his heart!" — SUSANNA

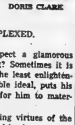
Fussy Girl Is Probably Not Giving Boys a Chance



DEAR DORIS — I have found office work in the city far from satisfying. My three sisters are all married. I spent my younger life getting a university education.

Although I usually have men friends I have never met anyone who was sufficiently interested in me, whom I could care for.

Perhaps I should try to accept the fact that life does not owe every girl a husband, and graciously face the prospect of not marrying. I have thought of leaving my present secure job in favor of going some other place and making new friends.

Several good men have shown a willingness to become serious, and I have refrained from encouraging them because I did not return their affection.

Am I too fussy and demanding? — PERPLEXED.

DORIS CLARE

DEAR PERPLEXED — Did you expect a glamorous fulfilling romance to strike like lightning? Sometimes it is the well educated young woman who is the least enlightened about real love. She takes an impossible ideal, puts his image up on a pedestal, and then waits for him to materialize.

She is then blinded to the less startling virtues of the flesh-and-blood types who want to be friends. And may dismiss them without a second glance because the first look didn't cause palpitations.

One day she wakes up to find that dating days are well-nigh over.

I think it is highly likely that you are not giving the boys a chance to measure up.

But I don't know how or when to serve wine!

How? Can you open it? Then you know how to serve wine.

When? Any time. It's as simple as that.

Put in a little cellar of Brights fine Canadian wines, like the one below. Friends drop in? You'll probably serve the sherry. With lunch or dinner? The sauterne or the claret. Celebrations? Pop the cork on the vin rosé. You take it from there.

74 Sherry—An appetizer wine, most popular in Canada. Serve with hors d'oeuvres, and the soup course.

74 Port—A delightful dessert wine. After dinner with snacks, with cheese—perfect!

Manor St. Davids Sauterne—Chilled, it does wonders for white meat of any kind—fish, fowl, or pork—and salads!

Manor St. Davids Claret—Canada's most distinctive "wine of the country". Ideal with steaks, hamburgers, red meat of any kind.

Mazel Tov—A rich, "kosher" wine. Delicious, appeals to everyone.

DuBarry Sparkling Vin Rosé—An "anytime" that's light and tingling on the tongue. Serve before, during or after any meal at all.

PLEASANT GIFT IDEA! What more pleasant or welcome gift than a cellar of Brights fine Canadian wines? You'll be welcomed at the effusive thanks!

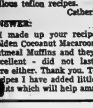
READER'S FRIDAY COLUMN



DEAR:

Hey I offer two of my favorite recipes for getting good things into the children! The cookie recipe is my favorite macaroon in the first place and has the added advantages of using whole eggs and mixing in nothing flat. The children love them and they keep well - but not long! We serve muffins often with soup or for breakfast and find the oatmeal ones a moist and different change from bran and cornmeal muffins or scones and tea biscuits. They are especially good made in those marvellous teflon recipes.

Catherine M.

ANSWER:

I made up your recipes for Golden Coconaut Macaroons and Oatmeal Muffins and they were excellent - did not last long here either. Thank you. To your recipes I have added little comforts which will help amateurs.

Salmon Loaf with Hard-Cooked Egg Sauce; Oven French Fries; Carrot Coins; Celery Curls, Baby Gherkins, Radishes; Baked Spy Apples; 10% Cream; Coffee.

GOLDEN COCOANUT MACAROONS (courtesy Catherine M.)

1 cup granulated sugar.
¾ cup unsifted all-purpose flour.
3 cups flaked or featherstrip cocoanut.
½ teaspoon salt.

Heat oven to 350 deg. Lightly grease 2 cookie sheets. In large bowl with mixer at high speed, beat eggs with sugar, just until well blended - about 1 minute. Then fold in flour and cocoanut and salt. Drop by teaspoon to make desired size and pat together a bit with spoon. Bake 10 to 16 minutes depending on size, - about 13 minutes for average size. Immediately remove from pan with broad spatula. (Emmie's Note: I made 30 and they required 13 minutes' baking time.)

OATMEAL MUFFINS (Crisp outside, moist within)

1 cup sifted all-purpose flour,
2 tablespoons sugar,
2 teaspoons baking powder,
½ teaspoon soda,
¾ teaspoon salt,
¾ cup quick-cooking oatmeal,
¾ cup vegetable shortening (room temperature),
1 egg,
1 cup buttermilk or sour milk.

Sift flour, sugar, baking powder, soda and salt together. Add oats and mix. Cut in shortening with pastry blender until size of peas. Add egg and buttermilk or sour milk and mix only until dry ingredients are dampened. Fill greased muffin pans ⅔ full and bake at 425 deg. Fahr. - 25 minutes for 10 large and 15 minutes for 15 medium. Emmie's Note: I made 15 muffins - 6 muffins were baked in a teflon pan and 9 in an ordinary greased muffin pan. The teflon baked muffins tipped out of the pan perfectly - no sticking whatever. The muffins baked in a greased ordinary muffin pan turned out all right but were coaxed a little with tip of paring knife.

Relative's Cat Torpedoes Milk Ration For Five

DEAR ANN LANDERS — We have five shoe-tearing, milk-drinking children who keep us busy and broke. We buy a gallon of milk every day, which is just about right for our family.

I have a relative who moves in for about three times a week. She is a widow and was close to my mother, so I feel an obligation to be kind to her. Aunt Nellie has a Persian cat whose name is Francesca. Wherever Aunt Nellie goes, Francesca goes, too.

ANN LANDERS

The first thing Aunt Nellie does when she comes to our house is go to the refrigerator and pour half a quart of milk into a bowl for Francesca. Usually the cat drinks about one-third of the milk and leaves the rest. It kills me to pour milk down the drain when my own kids could be drinking it.

Yesterday Francesca put her nose in the milk, turned away and left all of it. Aunt Nellie said, "The milk is probably sour. Puss is very fussy."

I am still boiling. Any suggestions? — THE CAT'S ME-OW

DEAR ME-OW — When Aunt Nellie comes to call, beat her to the refrigerator. Pour a small quantity of milk into a bowl — one-third of what she pours. This should satisfy both Aunt Nellie and Francesca. It should also reduce your irritation.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am a mother trying to raise four children to be decent, self-respecting citizens. The boys are in their early teens. The girls are 10 and 12 years of age.

What can be done about sex commercials? Where will it all end? Do personal garments such as girdles and brassiers belong on TV? And what about some of those tasteless commercials for medicine?

A girl who does a beer commercial wears a sweater that plunges to her navel. Another girl who advertises a shampoo bends over backwards so the camera can get an unusual angle of her lustrous hair. She doesn't have anything on under her blouse. Is this necessary?

Must we allow this trash to invade our homes? There is much good material on TV and I'd hate to throw out the set altogether. What can be done? — IRATE MOTHER.

DEAR IRATE — Put another piece of paper in your typewriter and write to the sponsors. Let them know how you feel about advertising offensive and that you will boycott their product until they clean up the commercials. Money not only talks — it hollers.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am a boy almost 18 and a very good driver. Dad lets me have his car one night a week. We had an agreement that if anything happened to the car while I was driving it I'd have to pay for the repairs, which our insurance policy doesn't cover. (We have $50 deductible.)

Last Friday night a nutty woman driver stopped short right in front of me and I jammed into the rear of her car. There was no way I could have avoided hitting her. Our grill was bent out of shape and a headlight was smashed. The repair bill will be $90. This means I have to come up with $50 out of my own pocket. Is this fair? — JUST PLAIN MAD.

DEAR J. P. MAD — Yup, it's fair. Anyone who drives a car should be on the look-out for nutty drivers ahead of him, behind him and on either side of him.

What happened was unfortunate, but if you were not tailgating you would not have rammed the car ahead. Consider yourself lucky it wasn't worse, Son.

When necking becomes petting, watch out! To learn how the smart girl keeps both her dignity and her boy friend, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Necking and Petting — And How Far To Go," enclosing with your request 20c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Red Women Wear Slacks And Shorts

MOSCOW (CP)—The plunging neckline may be a symbol of a new era in fashion for women in the Soviet Union.

It will be a little while, however, before it becomes apparent just how far the necklines will plunge.

Revealing dresses have long been frowned upon here, being regarded as symbols of Western decadence.

But a change is heralded at the spring fashion showings at Moscow's Dom Modeley (House of Models). Introducing the thrice - weekly showings, the commentator says that this season evening dresses are "very feminine." She goes on to say that this means they have plunging necklines.

The only difficulty is that the show doesn't include an evening dress. Until the stores begin selling them and women begin buying, it will remain a matter of speculation just how daring they'll be.

Another indication of change is the commentator's statement that women's slacks and shorts are "a great fashion" this spring. Slacks are seldom seen in public here since puritan elements insist they are naughty. However, the commentary suggests they're becoming more widely accepted.

As for shorts, they aren't worn on city streets and this is hardly likely to change. Presumably the reference to their growing popularity means that they are all the seashore or in private.

Other notes from the fashion house: Two-piece suits are in; hats ride high on the dome; ruffles, scarves and flowers are fashionable for decorations while brooches and other ornaments are out of style.

Canada's Science Fair Movement Is Growing

By JACK HUTTON

Is there any evidence that Canadian high school students have the same interest in science that is bubbling in countless schools below the border?

All the answers to that question will be unveiled in Winnipeg May 7 and 8 as the cream of Canada's science-minded students compete for top honors in the National Science Fair.

Pray nothing blows up in the prairie capital on those two days— because the best scientific brains we have to offer our next generation would go up with it.

Canada's science fair movement, now eight - years - old, is the best answer anyone has thought of to answer charges that this generation is lack-lustre naked of goals, weary before starting life or just plain beat.

TOP EXHIBITS —

A record 39 centres will be sending their top exhibits to the national competition. And the eventual winners have to be more than good. Entries have dealt with everything in the past from beta-ray spectrometers to moths, fossils — or the Milky Way.

It's only fitting that Winnipeg is the site this year. The seeds of the first national competition took root there in 1957 and have just never stopped growing.

If all this interests you, it's too late, of course, to think of entering an exhibit this year. But now is the time to start thinking about next year. Many of the exhibits in Winnipeg will be the result of at least 18 months or two years' planning.

How do you enter a local science fair. Well, if your school or someone in your area sponsors one, simply. Speak to your science teacher and he or she will invite you from there.

ADVICE —

If you don't know about any science fair in your area, you still have a chance. E. C. Leo-Scelleur, the Ottawa-based national co-ordinator, suggests that you write his office for advice. (The address: Canadian Science Fairs Council, 48 Rideau Street, Ottawa.)

A special admission committee would then contact a service club or school in your area to act as sponsor. In fact, the farther ahead you enquire, the better chance of finding a sponsor.

Don't worry about thoughts that Grade 11 or 12 students have a better chance of winning than Grade 9 students. The history of the national event proves that Grade 9 students are just as dangerous in the final judging.

The basic rules are simple. Any secondary school student may enter a local fair. If you decide to compete in next spring's event, there are four steps ahead of you.

FIRST STEP

First, you should have a basic idea of what you want to illustrate in a project. This may come from your own thinking, a science class or someone else's suggestion. Next comes the actual project, interpreting that project and making the exhibit.

Never, say the judges, think about the exhibit as the first step. "The exhibit," they claim, "is just one part of a learning and creating process." Many exhibitors fall down on this basic point.

I hope this has sparked a bit of interest in your own science fair prospects. If so, you're on the way to joining Canada's most exclusive high school fraternity-sorority — the science fair set.

SUMMER JOBS

Still thinking about a summer job with no definite ideas? Have you ever considered the following offbeat jobs?

1. Summer cottage baby-sitting. The one place parents often years to have their children supervised — and can't find help as easy to find right at your own beach.

2. Walking dogs. This isn't as crazy as it sounds. A friend I know placed an advertisement in two newspapers and made a steady pocket money each week exercising everything from spaniels to Irish setters.

Let us know if you have similar ideas you'd like us to pass on to other readers.

The Game of Love, Wayne Fontana; 2 I'm Telling You Now, Freddy and the Dreamers; 3 I Know a Place, Petula Clark; 4 Louie, Louie, The Kingsmen; 5 Mrs. Brown, Herman's Hermits; 6 Can't You Hear My Heart Beat, Herman's Hermits; 7 Stop in the Name of Love, The Supremes; 8 It's Not Unusual, Tom Jones; 9 Eight Days a Week, The Beatles; 10 S.O.S., Kenny Chandler; 11 Freeway of Love—Flip, Jan and Dean; 12 Tired of Waiting for You, The Kinks; 13 The Birds and the Bees, Jewel Akens; 14 The Last Times, The Rolling Stones; 15 Mr. Delight — Flip J.B. and The Playboys; 16 Stubborn Kind of Fellow, The Magnificent 7; 17 Count Me In, Gary Lewis; 18 Silhouette, Herman's Hermits; 19 Ticket to Ride, The Beatles; 20 Wooly Bully, Sam the Sham.

Jaycee Driving Tips

Crossings controlled by lights or by the police, allow pedestrians time to get clear of the crossings before traffic moves ahead on the 'go' signal. At uncontrolled crossings, the law requires the driver to use reasonable care to insure the safety of pedestrians. Always be on the alert for pedestrians who come out suddenly from behind stopped vehicles or other obstructions to your vision.

The white cane, the symbol of the sightless, is a reminder that you must do the seeing for the blind pedestrian as well as for yourself. The white cane carrier depends on you for his safety.

1. Drive at reduced speed when passing standing vehicles.
2. Be alert for traffic errors of pedestrians.
3. Be watchful when in the neighborhood of children and aged persons.
4. Observe signs denoting school areas.
5. Give way to pedestrians crossing at intersections. Don't block the crosswalk.
6. Be alert when darkness or weather conditions obscure your vision. The safety of pedestrians demands reduced speed under such conditions.
7. When at home park your car in the garage or driveway. Cars parked on residential streets are a definite and largely unnecessary traffic hazard.
8. When you drive, drive as you would have others drive when you walk.

HAS BACKING

The pressure was said to have come primarily from the party's grass roots, the riding-level workers with whom Mr. Hees always has enjoyed his greatest popularity and strength. Informants added, however, that several higher-ranking Conservatives, including even some members of Parliament publicly backing Mr. Diefenbaker, also have supported the move.

Close associates said he has let it been known in recent days that he is ready and willing to seek the party leadership—but only after Mr. Diefenbaker leaves it.

Mr. Hees has steadfastly refused, the sources said, to join in any public clamor for the present Opposition Leader's removal or to force a direct confrontation with Mr. Diefenbaker over the leadership.

Mr. Hees is said to feel steadfastly refused to do anything to help elect Mr. Diefenbaker.

God Is Inescapable

By CLARENCE W. CRANFORD

To say that most men want to know God, says Dr. Robert McAfee Brown, is nonsense. It is much closer to the truth, he insists, to say that most people want to get away from God; they want God to let them alone. Like Adam and Eve, they want to live their lives without God's interference, and, having disobeyed Him, they try to hide from Him. (From The Bible Speaks to You, by Robert McAfee Brown, Copyright 1955, W. L. Jenkins, The Westminster Press. Used by permission.)

But the inescapable fact about God is that He is inescapable. If men will not obey Him as King, they must experience Him as judge. This is the insistence of scripture as it calls us to look back over the history of Israel. Here we see both the blessings and the judgments of God; both His rewards and His punishments. It was because the people of Israel forgot the Lord, Samuel insisted, that God "sold them into the hand of Sisera." (I Samuel 12:9) Men cannot forget or ignore God with impunity. Kings come and go, but the reign of the Lord goes on forever.

This is illustrated in the sweep of Israel's history from Samuel to Solomon. Samuel had been a great leader, but he was old. And he was worried about the future of Israel. He had tried to give the people honest leadership. He had left them an excellent example of personal integrity. He had never taken what did not belong to him, nor once accepted a bribe. Moreover, he had tried to make the people see that God, not he, was their real leader; God, not Samuel, was their King.

But Israel was facing a new day. The people now had an earthly king. Would Saul, their newly appointed king, rule with integrity? Would he be faithful in trying to lead the people to obey God? Samuel was not sure. So he warned the people, "If you will fear the Lord and serve him and hearken to his voice . . . and if both you and the king who reigns over you will follow the Lord your God, it will be well; but if you will not hearken to the voice of the Lord; then the hand of the Lord will be against you and your king." (I Samuel 12:14-15 RSV)

Samuel had reason to be concerned. Saul soon assumed prerogatives that went beyond the political authority, for which Samuel rebuked him. Moreover, he dissipated his energies by fighting David, of whom he was jealous instead of concentrating on the enemies of Israel. When David became king he thanked God not only for deliverance from the hand of Israel's enemies, but also from the hand of Saul.

Looking back over his life as Samuel had done, David showed his sensitivity to the hand of God in history. Earlier in life, David himself had acted as if God were not looking, but the prophet Nathan had graphically reminded him that even the king cannot hide from the scrutiny and judgment of God. David learned his lesson, and as an old man, mused, "When one rules justly over men ruling in the fear of God, he dawns on them like the morning light," (II Samuel 23:3-4 RSV)

This conviction he left as a heritage to Solomon, his son. When Solomon set out to build the temple that had been a dream in his father's heart (I Kings 8:17f., he was reminded of God's hand on his life. "If you will walk in my statutes and obey my ordinances and keep all my commandments and walk in them, then I will establish my word with you, which I spoke to David your father. And I will dwell among the children of Israel, and will not forsake my people Israel." (I Kings 6:12-13 RSV)

So the story continues. Changes come, but God's word goes on. Some may wish to ignore Him, but God will not be forgotten. He speaks through dedicated lives and what Samuel called "the saving deeds of the Lord." (I Samuel 12:7) He rules best who recognizes that he himself is under the rule of God.

Sooner or later, all men, like Samuel, Saul, David, must look back over their lives. But the end of one generation is to God the beginning of another. To every age comes the warning, "If both you and those who rule over you will follow the Lord your God, it will be well; but if you will not hearken to the voice of the Lord, then the hand of the Lord will be against you."

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for April 25: "God's Hand in a New Order." I Samuel 11:1-12 through 13:4; II Samuel 23:42 through 23:5; I Kings 6:11-13.

Canada's Harrow--at Port Hope

Hailing 100 Years of Tradition and Trinity

By JOHN LeBLANC

PORT HOPE, Ont. (CP)—One of prankster William Osler's exploits, when he and Trinity College School were very young, involved locking a matron in her room and introducing smoke through a ventilation hole in the floor.

When she stuffed the opening with clothes, students poked them clear with sticks. When she sat on it, the result was severe enough to bring charges of assault and battery against the students, who in due course paid $1 fines in court.

The ringleader—whose earlier escapades had included locking a flock of geese in a classroom —surprised many by settling down to a career in medicine that eventually brought him a knighthood and the label—in the words of the Journal of the American Medical Association —of "the world's best doctor."

Perhaps it was not so surprising to those at Trinity College School, a century-old independent institution for boys modelled along the style of the great public schools of England. Young Osler was the school's first head boy—scholastic leader—in 1866, and a clergyman-teacher dabbling in medicine soon introduced him to the microscope and an interest that made him one of the great pathologists.

RUNS IN FAMILY

Since then, there usually has been an Osler at TCS, along with other sprouts destined to become distinguished in the arts, science, religion—it is basically an Anglican institution and has turned out a handful of future bishops, including one primate—business, the law, the military and other callings. It and a handful of similar vintage institutions rate as the Etons and Harrows of Canada.

As the school prepares to observe its centenary on May 1, it looks back over the long years of years to a day two years before Confederation when Rev. W. A. Johnson, parson in the village of Weston, began teaching his three sons in his study. Some parishioners wanted sons educated, too, and he took them on. Before he knew it, he had a school on his hands.

By 1868 the school had a name — it had acquired this along with some more tangible support from Trinity College in nearby Toronto—and had acquired a choice property on a hilltop overlooking Port Hope, a thriving town 60 miles east of Toronto.

Over the years the school has accumulated a notable gallery of Old Boys, as graduates are called, plus an aura of scholarliness. It also has retained the British flavor, though the latter two elements have been somewhat modified in recent decades. Canadian and American teaching techniques are coming up strongly.

STIFF COLLARS OUT

No longer do the boys wear Eton-style suits with the stiff collars, though the fashion persisted well into this century. During the First World War, the student body staged a protest march. Everyone was "gated" — confined to the grounds—for the rest of the term, but next year the Etonuniform was dropped. Flannels and sports jackets are in now.

Cricket is still going strong—a picture of W. G. Grace, the whiskered Hickey Mantle of Victorian Britain, decorates the busy library—but is matched now by hockey, basketball and football. The football is mainly Canadian style, though rugger hangs on.

Scholastically, the British format prevails. Teaching is done by masters, students are grouped into "houses" and classified in forms from first to sixth, corresponding to Grades 6-13. But the end result comes out Canadian-style and a surprising 94.3 per cent of graduates go on to university.

The impression of exclusiveness is not diminished by the fact that tuition fees are $2,300 a year ($2,150 for juniors) plus some extras. However, entry isn't confined to the sons of the wealthy. Hefty endowments provide a variety of scholarships and bursaries, so that a way can usually be found for a boy who has the makings but not the money. One out of seven attends with some kind of aid.

"I'd say the majority of parents must make some sacrifice to keep their sons here," says Angus C. Scott, the 39-year-old headmaster.

OLD AND NEW MEET

The headmaster typifies Trinity's bridge between the traditional and the modern. A native of Hamilton, he was educated at University of Toronto, Cambridge and Harvard (serving a wartime spell in the Royal Navy's Fleet Air Arm along the way), and has brought something from all of them.

He has been giving a lead in getting away from what he calls too much spoon-feeding of students in classrooms and in placing more emphasis on research by the individual student. The general trend in Trinity law is to look on the classroom—at least in certain subjects—as a place for discussion rather than the dispensing of facts.

"It's part of my theory that education is a process of discovery and that the road to discovery can be a fascinating one," he says. For that reason, the library is developing into the scholastic hub of the school as the youngsters dig out their own information.

The schoolrooms are a mingling of the old and the new. The language laboratory has the latest in electronic teaching gear, with a master presiding at a console of switches. The history class is abreast of the headlines —Viet Nam, Rivard, segregation, blculturalism. In the study halls, TCS clings with fond retrospect to battered desks bearing generations of carved initials.

THREADS CONTINUE

Tradition and the thread of family continuity run strong. The list of current students is dotted with asterisks indicating that boys are following brothers, fathers, grandfathers and in some cases great - grandfathers into the school.

They come from all over. The present crop represents all provinces except New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, plus the United States, the West Indies, Pakistan and Brazil.

The list of Old Boys contains some formidable names. Hall-fax-born Mr. Justice Roland Ritchie of the Supreme Court of Canada is one, and will be back to deliver the centennial address on Speech Day, June 5.

Most Rev. C. L. Worrell, an Anglican primate of Canada, was another. Among the bishops, too, was Rt. Rev. C. H. Brent, archbishop of the Philippines and senior United States Army chaplain in the First World War, who was a leader in the Anglican ecumenical movement.

Poet Archibald Lampman was a head boy, and a sampling of lesser scholars includes Charles Ritchie and J. K. Starnes, ambassadors to Washington and Bonn, respectively; painter Lawren Harris; Toronto - born Sir Ted Leather, who had a long career in British business and the Commons at West minster; Victoria - born Brig-Gen. Sir Godfrey Rhodes, who had a noted career with the British Army and organized the trans-Iranian railway service in the last war.

An exuberant student of the 1930s—George Rees — may not have sparkled scholastically but did all right otherwise. Like a good proportion of the TCS graduates, he followed through to military college. A high percentage of Old Boys have served in war—54 in the Boer War, 887 in the First World War and 562 in the Second World War, the latter figure equal to 96 per cent of all those who left the school in the 20 years preceding the outbreak.

Admiral Percy Nelles, Canada's Navy commander at the start of the war, was one. So was Capt. J. M. S. Patton, first Canadian to win the George Cross for gallantry. Two flew in the Battle of Britain.

Young Osler was the school's first head boy—scholastic leader—in 1866, and a clergyman-teacher dabbling in medicine soon introduced him to the microscope and an interest that made him one of the great pathologists.

RUNS IN FAMILY

Since then, there usually has been an Osler at TCS, along with other sprouts destined to become distinguished in the arts, science, religion—it is basically an Anglican institution and has turned out a handful of future bishops, including one primate—business, the law, the military and other callings. It and a handful of similar vintage institutions rate as the Etons and Harrows of Canada.

As the school prepares to observe its centenary on May 1, it looks back over the long years of years to a day two years before Confederation when Rev. W. A. Johnson, parson in the village of Weston, began teaching his three sons in his study. Some parishioners wanted sons educated, too, and he took them on. Before he knew it, he had a school on his hands.

By 1868 the school had a name — it had acquired this along with some more tangible support from Trinity College in nearby Toronto—and had acquired a choice property on a hilltop overlooking Port Hope, a thriving town 60 miles east of Toronto.

Over the years the school has accumulated a notable gallery of Old Boys, as graduates are called, plus an aura of scholarliness. It also has retained the British flavor, though the latter two elements have been somewhat modified in recent decades. Canadian and American teaching techniques are coming up strongly.

STIFF COLLARS OUT

No longer do the boys wear Eton-style suits with the stiff collars, though the fashion persisted well into this century. During the First World War, the student body staged a protest march. Everyone was "gated" — confined to the grounds—for the rest of the term, but next year the Etonuniform was dropped. Flannels and sports jackets are in now.

Cricket is still going strong—a picture of W. G. Grace, the whiskered Hickey Mantle of Victorian Britain, decorates the busy library—but is matched now by hockey, basketball and football. The football is mainly Canadian style, though rugger hangs on.

Scholastically, the British format prevails. Teaching is done by masters, students are grouped into "houses" and classified in forms from first to sixth, corresponding to Grades 6-13. But the end result comes out Canadian-style and a surprising 94.3 per cent of graduates go on to university.

The impression of exclusiveness is not diminished by the fact that tuition fees are $2,300 a year ($2,150 for juniors) plus some extras. However, entry isn't confined to the sons of the wealthy. Hefty endowments provide a variety of scholarships and bursaries, so that a way can usually be found for a boy who has the makings but not the money. One out of seven attends with some kind of aid.

"I'd say the majority of parents must make some sacrifice to keep their sons here," says Angus C. Scott, the 39-year-old headmaster.

OLD AND NEW MEET

The headmaster typifies Trinity's bridge between the traditional and the modern. A native of Hamilton, he was educated at University of Toronto, Cambridge and Harvard (serving a wartime spell in the Royal Navy's Fleet Air Arm along the way), and has brought something from all of them.

He has been giving a lead in getting away from what he calls too much spoon-feeding of students in classrooms and in placing more emphasis on research by the individual student. The general trend in Trinity law is to look on the classroom—at least in certain subjects—as a place for discussion rather than the dispensing of facts.

"It's part of my theory that education is a process of discovery and that the road to discovery can be a fascinating one," he says. For that reason, the library is developing into the scholastic hub of the school as the youngsters dig out their own information.

The schoolrooms are a mingling of the old and the new. The language laboratory has the latest in electronic teaching gear, with a master presiding at a console of switches. The history class is abreast of the headlines —Viet Nam, Rivard, segregation, blculturalism. In the study halls, TCS clings with fond retrospect to battered desks bearing generations of carved initials.

THREADS CONTINUE

Tradition and the thread of family continuity run strong. The list of current students is dotted with asterisks indicating that boys are following brothers, fathers, grandfathers and in some cases great - grandfathers into the school.

They come from all over. The present crop represents all provinces except New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, plus the United States, the West Indies, Pakistan and Brazil.

The list of Old Boys contains some formidable names. Hall-fax-born Mr. Justice Roland Ritchie of the Supreme Court of Canada is one, and will be back to deliver the centennial address on Speech Day, June 5.

Most Rev. C. L. Worrell, an Anglican primate of Canada, was another. Among the bishops, too, was Rt. Rev. C. H. Brent, archbishop of the Philippines and senior United States Army chaplain in the First World War, who was a leader in the Anglican ecumenical movement.

Poet Archibald Lampman was a head boy, and a sampling of lesser scholars includes Charles Ritchie and J. K. Starnes, ambassadors to Washington and Bonn, respectively; painter Lawren Harris; Toronto - born Sir Ted Leather, who had a long career in British business and the Commons at West minster; Victoria - born Brig-Gen. Sir Godfrey Rhodes, who had a noted career with the British Army and organized the trans-Iranian railway service in the last war.

An exuberant student of the 1930s—George Rees — may not have sparkled scholastically but did all right otherwise. Like a good proportion of the TCS graduates, he followed through to military college. A high percentage of Old Boys have served in war—54 in the Boer War, 887 in the First World War and 562 in the Second World War, the latter figure equal to 96 per cent of all those who left the school in the 20 years preceding the outbreak.

Admiral Percy Nelles, Canada's Navy commander at the start of the war, was one. So was Capt. J. M. S. Patton, first Canadian to win the George Cross for gallantry. Two flew in the Battle of Britain.

MR. MELTZER ON REAL ESTATE
"What's Your Problem?"

By BERNARD C. MELTZER

When one purchases a house there is an implied warranty, even if it is not contained in the written agreement, that the house is usable. If it is not, the seller or his agent, is duty bound to reveal this vital fact.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: We bought a bargain house and I am frightened that I may end up in jail because of it. The house was in very poor condition, but my husband, a retired carpenter, thought he could fix it up for one.

No sooner did we get the deed than a building inspector called on us and said that the house we had bought was structurally unsound and unfit for human habitation. It had been condemned six months previously and if we didn't tear it down in the next 90 days we would be hauled into court, fined, put in jail, or both.

We went to see the man who sold us the house. He just shrugged his shoulders, and said it was no longer his concern—that when we bought the house we bought the problems. All our savings went into buying this house. Does this mean our life's savings have gone down the drain? — H. O. V.

ANSWER: If you act promptly you should get your money back. The owner knowingly sold you a house which was condemned as unsound and unfit for human habitation. He deliberately withheld this vital fact. He knew that the house had to be demolished—yet he sold it to you as a place in which to live.

If you present this answer to the man from whom you purchased the house and advise him you are prepared to seek legal recourse, he probably will recognize his vulnerable position and return your money. If he doesn't—immediately contact an attorney who will establish the basis of this fraudulent sale.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I see that you give advice to people who have problems about houses and I have a problem in my house. I am a teen-age girl. My nine year old brother opens my mail and spreads the news throughout the whole neighborhood about my girlfriends and boyfriends.

My parents are no help because they think it is cute. I know it is against the law to open other persons' mail but is there anything I can do besides having this "pre-teen-age" delinquent arrested. — K. W.

ANSWER: Your simple question required considerable research. I won't presume to explore the involved legal aspects of your problem—but I am advised by a post office authority that a simple solution is to install your own lock mailbox. Anyone (including nine year old brothers) who tampers with locked mailboxes is inviting the wrath of the post office department and possible dire consequences.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: What does one do with a useless building lot? We are a young couple with more enthusiasm than common sense, who found a lot on which to build our first house.

Since it was not by the public sewer or water, our plans called for a private disposal system. When the percolation test was made the ground was found to have virtually no absorption. The township refused to issue a building permit.

We are stuck with a lot we can't use and can't sell—and we can't afford to buy another. Is there anything we can do? — Mrs. H. C. K.

ANSWER: Unfortunately, at this stage there is not much you can do. Until public sewage is brought in, your lot cannot be used. Since this will probably be at a considerable time in the future, I recommend that you sell the lot at the best price it will bring.

Enthusiasm is wonderful but dangerous, as you have learned. Young couples — and older couples for that matter—usually do not have the background that makes for real estate common sense and need advice.

One of two things could have saved you from this dilemma. You could have had the ground tested by a registered engineer before purchasing. Better yet, you could have inserted a clause in the agreement of sale voiding the purchase agreement if subsequent tests showed the lot to be unsuitable for building due to poor percolation, poor support, improper zoning, or any other condition that might inhibit a property owner from building.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I follow your column faithfully and I am writing this letter in behalf of the Senior Citizens Group of our church. Our senior citizens are all grown and the children we live in are too big for our needs and the upkeep is too expensive.

As a group we would like to have a small community of modest homes built. We have talked to realtors about this—but they always want to sell us land. Bankers only want to talk about mortgages and builders keep talking to us about profit markets. With your broad knowledge of real estate, we are appealing to you for advice. — M. L. P.

ANSWER: Your undertaking is very complex. It has two main parts. Getting rid of your present houses and building the community you desire.

The only person with the experience and background to solve your problem would be a housing consultant. He would undertake this task for a fee.

He will advise you on how to dispose of your present houses and how to put "the package" together, with its involved problems of selections, design, financing and construction.

This type of person or organization is not common. Inquiries among bankers in your community — your planning or housing agencies — I am sure will help you locate one who is suitable to your needs.

fighter-bombers also were active over North Viet Nam during the day. The Skyraiders bombed and strafed military buildings about 30 miles north of the border.

They attacked targets near Quang Khe, then patrolled Highway one looking in vain for military traffic.

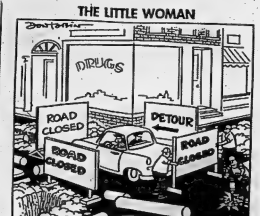
In the ground war, marauding bands of Viet Cong were active in the Da Nang area. One group mined a train about seven miles to the northwest while another poured small arms fire into a South Vietnamese army radio station about five miles to the northeast.

Other guerrillas probed government positions five miles south of Da Nang and U.S. helicopters were called out.

The Viet Cong entrenched only 30 miles from Da Nang, sent six battalions of government troops into retreat after a bloody battle Thursday.

An American special forces officer was killed in a ground operation 150 miles west of Saigon today.

A U.S. spokesman also announced that an American air force officer was killed Thursday when the fight observation plane he was flying crashed taking off from a training centre airstrip at Phu Cat, 270 miles northeast of Saigon.



The U.S. Navy reported that a South Vietnamese junk had picked up alive an American seaman who was lost overboard from the 7th Fleet destroyer Black April 19.

The seaman was suffering only from exposure, sunburn and fatigue.

TACOMA, Wash. (AP)—Two 12-year-old boys in grade VI at Ruston Elementary School caught on fast when the class was given a lesson in cheque-writing. The ambitious young penmen now are in the hands of juvenile authorities.

Reserve Force Reorganization Now Complete

OTTAWA (CP) — Reorganization of the navy, army and RCAF reserve forces has been virtually completed, officials say.

It will mean an annual saving of about $17,000,000 in the defence budget with operating costs of the reserves this year estimated at $19,410,000.

The army militia was ordered to pare down last summer to a strength of 30,000 reservists from 45,000.

The annual saving from the reduction will be $8,716,639.

Reorganization of the naval reserve has been essentially completed with an annual saving of $1,882,000 as they cut their numbers to 2,925 personnel in 18 divisions from 5,265 in 20 divisions.

The RCAF auxiliary has slimmed down to 860 personnel in 10 units compared with the former establishment of 2,200 personnel in 39 units for an estimated annual saving of $6,400,000 and an actual saving in the first year of $1,633,138.

covered up the rich ore strike near Timmins while purchasing additional shares of stock.

As the stockholders were meeting in Houston, the resignation of Herbert W. Klotz as assistant commerce secretary was announced in Washington.

Klotz was mentioned in the securities commission's suit but was not charged. He had obtained an option on 2,000 shares of Texas Gulf stock but denied he had any contact with officers of the company. He also denied knowledge of the ore discovery.

Commerce Secretary John T. Connor said President Johnson had accepted Klotz's resignation.

Stephens said normal secrecy and security measures were taken after the first test was drilled in early November, 1963, at the Kidd Creek mine site near Timmins.

He said the company held rights to only one 100-acre tract and suspended further drilling until three adjacent tracts of similar size could be acquired.

Miss Olive Delaney, Chief Librarian at the Corby Public Library, assists some children with a school assignment in the Children's Library. Michael Starr Named PC House Leader

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Diefenbaker announced Thursday the appointment of Michael Starr, former Conservative labor minister and MP for Ontario constituency, as Conservative House leader in the Commons.

He replaces Gordon Churchill, former trade and defence minister, who for Winnipeg South Centre.

No reason for the switch was contained in Mr. Diefenbaker's brief announcement, but it was learned Mr. Starr's appointment was to recognize his growing stature in the party while relieving Mr. Churchill for other duties.

Mr. Churchill, one of Mr. Diefenbaker's closest advisers, has been the Opposition leader's chief consultant on strategy. The move to relieve him of the House leadership duties may therefore be connected with the Conservative party's preparations for any forthcoming election.

15,000 Residents Sharing Wonders of 70,000 Volumes To Be Had at Public Library

Would you like to ride the Spanish Main with Captain Morgan or travel to exotic lands, or win the U.S. Open with Ben Hogan, or even find the recipe for grape wine — and all for a nickel?

Impossible! No, not impossible at all, it's easy. Just drop in at the library today and the world is at your finger tips.

Some 15,000 Bellevillians are library members and share the wonders offered by the 70,000 volumes available.

At the head of this giant knowledge factory is Miss Olive Delaney, Chief Librarian since 1942. Since her term began, the number of volumes has risen over five times, and extension to the old building was added and a branch library was built.

"We try to stock books with literary value as opposed to mere sensationalism," Miss Delaney says. "Periodically a book such as "Fanny Hill" creates a big stir. We try to buy what the public wants, but we are spending their money and think they should get something of value for it.

"Anyone can buy those books in pocket versions anyway. I think a book is worth having if it's going to be in demand again after the first reading. If it is simply read for its sensational-ism contents and never looked at again, then the public wouldn't be getting value for their money if we bought it.

"Pierre Burton's 'Comfortable Pew' is the rage now. It is a good book. We have four copies circulating and still have 35 reservations for it."

FORMED IN 1905

Belleville's library has been a going concern since its inception in 1908. The building was originally constructed by the Merchants' Bank of Canada. The Merchants' Bank moved to the northeast corner of Front and Bridge, where the Bank of Montreal now is, and the late Senator Henry Corby bought the building. He remodelled it and presented it to the city for use as a public library.

The Corby Public Library succeeded one organized November 21, 1870, known as the Mechanics Institute and which became The Belleville Free Library in 1902.

Today, the library is supported by grants from the city council, the government and the Corby estate. Nine full-time employees and 15 part-time helpers operate the main library and the branch library.

The Library Board, chaired by W. G. Anderson, consists of 10 persons — the officers, Mayor John R. Ellis, acting as ex-officio, and appointees from the city, the Board of Education and the Separate School Board.

Miss Delaney comments, "Many people complain that today's youngsters don't read books, but we certainly notice a drop in circulation when the children are busy writing examinations."

In 1959, a large extension was added to the original library building. The extension included the children's library, composed of 20,000 volumes, a small auditorium, a stack room and a large area for displaying the books.

The east end branch opened June 1, 1964. In the branch library alone, 38,435 books were borrowed before the end of 1964, and 65 per cent of that total were borrowed by children.

The library decides which books it will buy by reading reviews and by public requests. If a book is ordered, it comes in the order room where the invoices are checked off and the price and publisher of the book are written inside.

Then the book is sent to the catalogue room where it is given a classification number and a file card. Next, it is fully prepared for circulation: the plastic covers are put on along with the card holder and the library stamp. Finally, the book is put on the shelf, and its card is placed in the card catalogue for public use.

Besides lending books, the library, in co-operation with the Belleville and District Film Council, circulates films and projectors to churches and service clubs in the area.

The library auditorium is often used for art exhibits, and recently, the "Music at 7.30" program has been operating. The new program invites people to the auditorium every second Saturday at 7.30 p.m. They often bring their own records and enjoy an evening of listening to music.

"We just started the music program one month ago," Miss Delaney said, "and we already have 17 persons enrolled. It is very informal and everyone is welcome. We're hoping the group will continue to grow."

HELP OTHER LIBRARIES

The Corby Public Library is also active in the Ontario Government program called the Lake Ontario Regional Library Co-operative. The program designed to bolster the libraries of smaller centres in Ontario.

Belleville, Kingston and Peterborough are considered resource libraries in this district. Small libraries such as Tweed, Brighton and Stirling, can request certain books on loan from the resource libraries. The program is conducted by the Public Library Branch of the Provincial Department of Education, and any expense incurred under the program is covered by them.

Belleville is fortunate to have the library it has, and even more fortunate that the people of this city recognize its value and are making good use of it.

Que. Education Minister Says Province Will Deal Directly With Other Govts.

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec intends to negotiate directly with foreign countries on matters the province will be called on to apply, Paul Gerin - Lajoie, Quebec education minister, said Thursday night.

Addressing a delegation of French, Belgian and Swiss university representatives, the Quebec government's constitutional expert said the province will fill this role "because of its function as the collective instrument of French - Canadians."

Prime Minister Pearson told an Ottawa press conference earlier Thursday he is sure that Mr. Gerin - Lajoie will agree that the government of Canada makes treaties with other countries and other countries deal with the Canadian government.

"The federal government is completely powerless to assure the working out and application of agreements it concludes with other countries if these fall within the sphere of provinces," Mr. Gerin-Lajoie said in his speech.

"It is not only for constitutional and for internal political reasons that Quebec has decided to negotiate agreements directly with foreign countries but also for reasons of efficiency," he said.

Mr. Pearson's comment was in reply to a question about similar statements made recently by Mr. Gerin-Lajoie.

The Quebec cabinet minister said a "people can no longer entrust to another the duty of fixing its priorities for the education of its youth and the expansion of its culture."

He said the federal government showed little interest in Quebec's ties with the French-speaking world until a few months ago and "the federal administration is not at all familiar with the mentality, the work methods, the language, the leaders, the teaching institutions and the culture of Quebec."

Mr. Gerin-Lajoie said the recent signing of an agreement between Quebec and France on an exchange of students, teachers and researchers illustrates the determination of Quebec to collaborate with other members of the French-speaking world "and to make known its real face to the modern world."

He said Quebec intends to negotiate agreements with foreign countries not only within exclusively provincial fields but also in areas of common interest with the federal government.

"In the fields which surpass in a number of ways the division of powers, such as the research sphere, Quebec as a member of the Canadian confederation wants to be present as a partner in the elaboration of policies and programs," he said.

Mr. Gerin-Lajoie said the reason for this Quebec initiative is that the province will be responsible, in a large part, for applying research agreements and largely the beneficiary of their results.

Tried to Toss Pearson Out Of Restaurant

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson recalls the battle of Ypres by connecting it with the day when a headwaiter tried to toss him out of a London restaurant.

Mr. Pearson told the story at a press conference after noting the 50th anniversary of the First World War battle where Canadian soldiers stood firm in the face of the first gas attack launched by the Germans.

The future prime minister was a private in the Canadian Army at the time, although he later became a pilot with the Royal Flying Corps.

Mr Pearson said he was in London on leave with another soldier shortly after arrival in Britain. They tried to go into a post restaurant and were told to leave by the headwaiter because the restaurant served only officers.

At this point, Mr. Pearson said, an Englishman recognized them as Canadians and rose from his table to push the headwaiter aside.

"These are two of the men who held the line at Ypres," the Englishman said in a voice heard throughout the dining room as he invited the two Canadians to join him.

Mr. Pearson said with a grin that the incident was a "bit frightening" for him because "we were just off the troopship and it was the only time we had withstood were the temptations of London."

Freeway Still Highway 401 Says Dept.

TORONTO (CP) — The Macdonald-Cartier Freeway is still Highway 401 as far as the Ontario department of highways is concerned.

An official of the department's legal branch said here Thursday there has been no order-in-council or other legislation changing the designation in the regulations since Premier Robarts announced the renaming of the highway Jan. 11.

Crown Attorney Haworth Atkinson of Prescott is considering an appeal against a magistrate's ruling that traffic violation charges must be made out in the new name.

Mrs. MacMillan Expected Preferential Treatment From TSE, Inquiry Told

TORONTO (CP)—Donald G. Lawson, partner in the Toronto investment firm of Moss, Lawson Co., told a royal commission inquiry Thursday that the wife of the president of Windfall Oils and Mines Ltd. expected preferential treatment from the Toronto Stock Exchange. Mrs. Lawson said she was the "darling of Timmins."

Mr. Lawson said that Viola MacMillan, promoter - financier of Windfall, expected preferential treatment from the exchange when she was negotiating a sale of certain mining claims last year.

The royal commission is investigating the circumstances surrounding the rise of Windfall stock on the Toronto exchange to $5.60 from 56 cents last July and its subsequent collapse to 80 cents.

The rise followed rumors that Windfall had struck ore near the giant Texas Gulf Sulphur Co., find in the Timmins area. The stocks fell to 80 cents overnight after it was announced no ore had been found.

Mr. Lawson said that Mrs. MacMillan was not pleased about a deal the stock exchange approved in which some mining claims she held near Timmins were sold to Windfall.

Mrs. MacMillan bought the property for $100,000 and 750,000 Windfall shares. She then sold it toWindfall for $100,000 cash and 250,000 shares, 80 per cent escrowed.

Escrowed shares are held by the stock exchange and released to the owner when the exchange is satisfied money has been spent on the development of the property.

Asked whether Mrs. MacMillan was happy about the final agreement, Mr. Lawson said: "I would say no. . . She took the position she was entitled to preferential treatment (from the exchange)."

Mr. Lawson's firm, acted as agent for two companies—Yellowknife Surveys and Golden Shaft Mines — which bought shares from the Windfall treasury. Both companies were controlled by the MacMillans.

Many View Red China As Latter-day Germany That Must Be Defied Now

By ARCH MacKENZIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

What are China's objectives? Argument about this point lies near the heart of the debate now waxing hot in the United States on Viet Nam.

Supporters of President Johnson's policy—offering negotiations but also steadily tightening military pressure — see China as a latter-day Germany which must be defied now.

The voices calling for a softer American line tend to regard China as simply moving back into her old and logical role as the prime mover in Asia.

The official U.S. view was expressed by Defence Secretary McNamara when he said: "The choice is not simply whether to continue our efforts to keep South Viet Nam free and independent but, rather, whether to continue our struggle to halt Communist expansion in ASIC."

One of the most articulate critics of American Viet Nam policy is Hans J. Morgenthau, professor at the University of Chicago and a political adviser in the state and defence departments.

He says the Truman doctrine of militarily containing communism, which worked well enough in Europe, was a dead loss when the Johnson Foster Dulles applied it to the Middle and Far East.

"The issue China poses is political and cultural predominance. The U.S. can no more contain Chinese influence in Asia by arming South Viet Nam and Thailand than China could contain American influence in the Western Hemisphere by arming, say, Nicaragua and Costa Rica."

There is no way the U.S. can win its war in Viet Nam, says Morgenthau, and if the U.S. should face up to Chinese preeminence on the Asian mainland, He sees the invasion of Tibet as the sole exception in Chinese history to a pattern of joint church service of the two lodge organizations is being held at Victoria Ave. Baptist Church.

Winchester Man Grand Master Black Chapter

Mr. W. J. L. Boyd of Winchester in the St. Lawrence Valley, was named Grand Master of the Grand Black Chapter for Ontario East as delegates concluded their two day convention in Belleville yesterday.

The new Grand Master steps up from the role of deputy grand master with H. A. Slinson of Smiths Falls being named to the role of deputy.

The new officers were duly installed just prior to the break up of the annual convention held this year at Tops Motel.

Today, many of yesterday's delegates will remain over in the city to attend the LOL district convention being held at the Tops Motel today and Saturday. At the same time LORA district delegates are holding their convention at the Sun Valley Motor Inn. This afternoon a joint church service of the two

Also says Morgenthau "plays almost the same key role in the eyes of the modern appeasers that Geoffrey Dawson of the Times of London played in the Anglo-British group in England before 1939."

Contrary to Morgenthau's belief that China, a distant object of Chinese history "is the timelessness with which the Chinese people have resumed the task of conquest whenever an opportunity offered."

So, in his view, the sensible course is to continue an American role as a Pacific power, stick loyally to allies and hope that new blood and time will soften the hard line of China's leaders.

Other opinion suggests that China has been extremely cautious through the years, except in the Viet Nam war, anxious to avoid setting off any reactions which she might not be able to control.

NEW OFFICERS for the Grand Black Chapter of Eastern Ontario were elected yesterday at the conclusion of their two-day -convention in Belleville. The new Grand Master, W. J. L. Boyd of Winchester (right) receives congratulations from Earl Keene, Belleville, assistant Grand Treasurer, and Deputy Grand Master Harry A. Stinson of Smiths Falls.

Balcer Says Tories Resist New Quebec

MONTREAL (CP) — "The main thing wrong with the Conservatives," says the party's former Quebec leader, Leon Balcer, "is that they are not only ignoring the new Quebec spirit, but worse, they are resisting it."

Mr. Balcer, who quit the party April 7 to sit in the Commons as an independent, made the statement in an exclusive interview with Gazette reporter Bill Bantley.

Asked what he would do if he were in the place of Opposition Leader John Diefenbaker, Mr. Balcer came up with a six-point formula:

—A "new, attractive, positive" constitution for Canada.

—Greater recognition of "the French fact" in the federal civil service.

—Federal - provincial conferences prior to the introduction of any legislation on joint programs.

—Restoration of the Conservative party as the party of provincial rights.

—A real reform of parliamentary procedure.

—Acceptance of O Canada as Canada's official national anthem.

Mr. Balcer indicated that the door was still open to his return to the Conservative party, by two conditions—the replacement of Mr. Diefenbaker as leader, and a revision of party policy in keeping with his own thinking.

Negro Throws Fire Bomb In Cathedral

NEW YORK (AP) — A man hurled a fire bomb at the main altar of St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Cathedral Thursday night and less than nine hours later police arrested a 23-year-old Negro.

The man, described as having no professed religion, was identified by police as David L. Malone, a Negro who formerly lived in Houston, Tex. He was arraigned today before a judge, desecrating a church and felonious assault.

Mrs. Emma Gomez Reyes, 47, of Elmhurst, Queens, suffered serious burns when the bottled gas bomb, known as a Molotov cocktail, exploded in flames at 6:30 p.m.

A Molotov cocktail is a bottle filled with gasoline or other inflammable liquid, with a rag wick. It is ignited at the moment it is thrown and explodes upon impact.

There were about 100 persons inside the famed Gothic church.

SPORTS SLICES

By Geo. H. Carver,
Sports Editor

This department's grinied vice-president-in-charge-of-boring stumbled into the sports biz the other day, a tear sklling down his soup-stained ascot.

"They missed the boat—they missed the boat," he kept repeating to himself.

"Who missed what boat? Noah's kangaroos, Robinson Crusoe's basketball team or the handmaidens of Christopher Columbus' real estaters?" someone asked.

The VPB shook his greying thatch sadly. "I'm speaking about the guys who staged that Chuvalo-Neilsen waltz in Toronto the other night, and took it on the financial button."

"They shoulda gone home with two carpet-bags choked with loot instead of bottom-scraping their private exchequers," moaned the Methuselah of the matrices. "They sure missed the boat."

"How, how, how?" chorused the bevy of composing room back-benchers.

The VPB pointed a finger at Woodsy, their ring-leader, the Einstein of the galley slaves, and fixing him with a steely look, said:

"With the Maple Leaf fans still reeling from the shock of defeat at the hands and bodies of the Canadiens, they should have promoted a five-or-less rounds hassle between Punch Imlach, the Leafs top burper and Toe Blake the sphynx of the Habitants."

Without waiting for comment on this verbal gem he added, "the overflow would have extended to Oakville on the east to Whitby on the west."

"In fact," he went on, "Blake suggested such an encounter—and Mrs. Imlach took up the challenge. When she heard of the Blakian offer she told her spouse, "Don't waste your time—I'll take him on you."

"This hassle," he said, "with Andy Bathgate and Frank Mahovlich in Blake's corner, and the missus and King Clancy doing the towel waving for Punch, would have been the jousting of the century."

"It would have been the goose that laid the golden egg instead of a turkey that produced nothing but a workout for Chuvalo—a black eye for Neilsen who could tell his wife he refused to switch his brand of cigarettes, and a financial headache for the arrangers."

"And that's not all," said the VPB picturing the scene on his mental screen, "they could have had a semi-final that would almost match the main bout for excitement and action."

"Such as what?" asked Woodsy in his native Sudanese.

"Such as," the VPB echoed, "throwing Ted Scarface Lindsay in there for a battle to the death with the named champion of the NHL corps of whistle-blowers. This would have been a fitting fighting climax to Lindsay's illustrious stitch-collecting hockey career."

"How about a preliminary between Gomar Lyle Thompson and Claude D. Tice with no expletives barred," suggested a slave shortly before he fell unconscious from a well-planted punt to the sacro-iliac.

"I'm coming to that," the VPG filtered through his cavities. "They could throw the bout open to Bobby Hull and a representative of the Anti-Hull Klan, but I doubt if it would happen. Bobby would win by default."

"Yes," sighed the VPB, "they sure missed the boat. They swapped a golden goose for an ezglaying turkey and in the doing wrote fini. I think, to a repetition of such admission-charged workouts in Toronto."

"Chuvalo and Patterson would draw in Toronto," thought the VPB, "but after their great showing in New York it is doubtful the Madison Square Garden boys would let a plum like that get away from them."

"Besides Patterson and his manager failed to show at the Toronto embroglio because they stated they argued long into the night as to which plane to use, Patterson's personal job or a commercial aircraft. By the time the air was cleared the fight was over."

"Funny, too," he gurgled, "because the longest speech ever recorded by Patterson is his first prayer."

Wharram, Pilote Kingpin Hawks' Win

By JERRY GLADMAN

CHICAGO (CP) — If there was a turning point in Thursday night's Stanley Cup final game it had to be before the opening whistle when coach Billy Reay decided to use Pierre Pilote and Ken Wharram.

KENNY WHARRAM

Both players figured prominently as Chicago Black Hawks defeated Montreal Canadiens 3-1 in the third game of the best-of-seven series to leave the Canadiens with a 2-1 lead going into the fourth match here Sunday night.

Pilote, the veteran defenceman and team captain who missed the first two games of the series in Montreal because of a shoulder separation, started the play that led to the Hawks' first goal by Phil Esposito.

He passed down the right side from just inside the blueline to Chico Maki, who fed a long pass to Esposito standing unguarded at the goal mouth.

Wharram, making his first appearance of the series as right winger on Chicago's scooter line, scored the winning goal, beating Montreal goaltender Gump Worsley on a picture play.

Wharram had missed the opening two games wit hbruised knees and was a doubtful starter even as late as Thursday afternoon.

MAKI SCORED TOO

Maki got the other Chicago goal, his third of the playoffs, firing the puck into the empty Montreal net after coach Toe Blake had taken Worsley out in favor of a sixth attacker in the dying minutes of the game.

John Ferguson was the only Canadien to beat goaltender Glenn Hall, deflecting a drive from the point by defenceman J. C. Tremblay.

The loss was particularly disappointing for the Canadiens, who for the third successive game tied up high - scoring Bobby Hull and limited the blonde winger to an assist.

The Hawks completely bottled up the usually fast-skating Canadiens, checking with authority and never relaxing.

"We missed too many chances," said Blake. "We missed our chances, and that was the ball game."

Esposito's third goal of the playoffs that gave the Hawks a 1-1 tie in the second period enraged Worsley, who claimed the Chicago forward kicked it into the net.

GOALS SIMILAR

Montreal's goal came on a similar play. It was Ferguson's second tally of the series and his third of the playoffs.

Reay said he is not thinking about a seven-game series—"just the next game is my only concern. The win tonight gives us a big boost."

PIERRE PILOTE

The game was the best of the series and had several exciting moments.

An outbreak of fighting occurred late in the game and resulted in roughing penalties to Chicago's Matt Ravlich and Eric Nesterenko and Montreal's Tremblay and Ted Harris.

Tremblay also received a 10-minute misconduct at the skirmish.

Referee John Ashley assessed 19 minors with the Canadiens taking the edge 10-9.

Worsley became involved in a battle with the end zone fans following the outbreak of fighting with 23 seconds remaining. He said he had been "pelted with empty beverage cups, coins and a slat from a stadium chair but that's when I blew up."

He made threatening gestures at the fans but couldn't get at them because of the glass partition surrounding the end of the rink.

'Missed Chances'-Blake

Winning Goal Near-Perfect Play

By AL McNEIL

CHICAGO (CP) — A picture goal, a disputed goal and missed scoring opportunities were the topics expounded by opposing coaches at opposite ends of the Chicago Stadium Thursday night.

In Montreal Canadiens' quarters netminder Gump Worsley claimed a Chicago goal had been kicked in and coach Toe Blake said his club missed too many scoring chances.

The Black Hawks had just completed a 3-1 win for their first victory against two losses in the best-of-seven Stanley Cup final.

Wharram, who sat out the first two games with injured knees scored from a dead-on pass by Stan Mikita early in the final period to break a 1-1 stalemate.

BEST I'VE SEEN

"Wharram always gives a tremendous effort," Reay said. "But his deciding goal was one of the best I've seen all year. His movements were near perfect . . . It was a picture goal."

Reay said Pierre Pilote, who is suffering from a shoulder separation, and received treatment overnight at a local hospital and had appeared at game time sufficiently fit to take his turn on the ice.

"I didn't know until game time Pilote would be able to play," Reay said. "He re-injured his shoulder in the first period, but special medication will bring it around and I expect him back for our game here Sunday."

Blake was not in an expansive mood.

"We missed too many chances . . . that's it . . . that's all I want to say about it," Blake told reporters.

"We missed our chances and that was the ball game."

Blake refused to discuss Chicago's first goal, credited to Phil Esposito. "I was on the bench. I didn't see it," was his blunt reply.

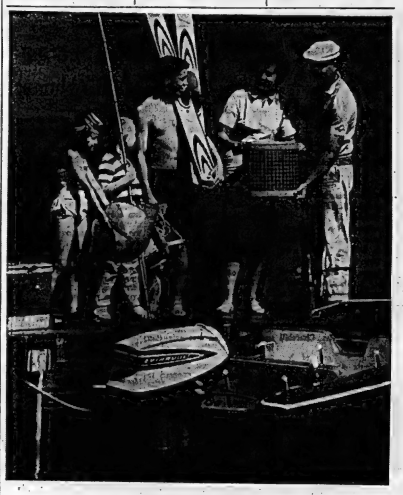
CLAIMED KICK

But Worsley, who had beaten the Hawks twice in Montreal, claimed Esposito kicked the puck into the net.

"He kicked it in," Worsley said. "I asked (referee John) Ashley to check with his linesman and he did and then he came back and told me it went off a skate, but he hadn't seen it personally."

Montreal players were unanimous in their criticism of Chicago fans who littered Stadium ice with debris.

Worsley claimed he was struck with empty beverage containers, coins and finally a slat from a seat, before he attempted to retaliate with his stick in the final seconds of the contest.



The Montreal goaltender had attempted to get at the taunting fans seated in the end zone directly behind his net. He was unsuccessful because of the plate glass which tops the boards.

Jim Roberts, Montreal's penalty-killing forward, said some Montreal players had been cut by thrown coins.

make it an Evinrude 40

In every field, there's one product that stands up best. It's usually called the 'workhorse'.

In outboards, this is it! The Evinrude 40.

You want to fish. The kids want to ski. How about pleasure boating and a family picnic? And you've got only one outboard. It has to troll. Quietly. It has to tow. Fast. It has to cruise with this sizeable load all day and tomorrow, too.

Evinrude spends almost as much time inspecting and testing these motors as building them. The result is the kind of reliability that keeps them out of repair shops and running year after year.

There's a choice of push-button Selectrie shift, electric starting, or manual. Every Evinrude 40 (and there are three to choose from) has thermostat-controlled engine cooling and the Cruis-Throttle fuel saver, and automatic prop-saving slip clutch.

Koufax Beats Mets With 4-Hitter

No Sunday Pitcher

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Sandy Koufax showed Thursday night that he's not just a Sunday pitcher.

Koufax, the arthritic-elbowed southpaw, pitched a four-hitter and gained his second complete game victory in as many starts in Los Angeles Dodgers' 2-1 triumph over New York Mets.

SANDY KOUFAUX

His performance came with only four days rest, marking the first time Koufax has tried to pitch in regular rotation with damaged elbow.

When it was discovered earlier this month that the 29-year-old left hander had an arthritic condition, Dodger officials believed he might be able to pitch only once a week—simply a Sunday pitcher.

He started out that way last Sunday in beating Philadelphia Phillies 2-0. In less than 48 hours though, Koufax had decided he could pitch before the week was up.

Following his trial against the Mets, it appeared he was ready to continue in rotation. But it depended on how the elbow reacted today.

"It's the day after I pitch that it locks," Koufax explained.

WERE ALL SINGLES

All of the hits the Mets got were singles, two by Billy Cowen. Koufax walked only one batter—Roy McMillan in the seventh inning—while striking out nine. The lone run off him was unearned, a result of Maury Wills' seventh-inning error, leaving him with a 1-0 earned run average.

In the only other National League game Thursday, Chicago Cubs nipped Cincinnati Reds 3-2.

Despite Koufax' stingy pitching, the Dodgers had to go until there were two out in the ninth to defeat Jack Fisher.

Wes Parker led off the inning with a double but was out trying for third on Willie Davis' bunt. Willie then moved to second as Tommy Davis grounded out and scooted home with the winning run on John Roseboro's single to right field.

Ron Swoboda singled across the Mets' run with two out after McMillan walked and raced to third as Mets let Joe Christopher's grounder get by him.

The Cubs edged the Reds on Billy Williams' run-scoring single in the eighth inning. Glenn Beckert scored Chicago's first run in the first inning, opened the eighth with an infield single, was sacrificed, to second and came in on Williams' hit.

John Edwards had tied the game 2-2 with a solo homer in Cincinnati's half of the eighth.

Auto Club To Man Check Points

During the week of April 24-30, the motor sport enthusiasts of Canada and the world, will be following closely the day by day progress of more than 75 entries involved in the 1965 Shell 4,000 Car Rally - Montreal to Vancouver.

Several entries from Europe, the far East, Japan, U.S.A. and Canada will navigate over some of our country's most interesting roads. This will be a test of driver and navigator as well as car.

The Quinte Auto Sport Club of Belleville will be manning two check points for this event. Although the actual locations will be kept secret until the start, the general directions are to the West and to the North East of Belleville. The people manning each check point are required to check each car in and record their time by means of a punch clock.

Most Sports Club across Canada assist each year to ensure that this event is a success by manning the various route controls and time controls.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP)—Jim Whidden has seen enough of Niagara Falls Flyers.

Whidden is the goalie for Garson - Falconbridge Native Sons who were overpowered 13 - 0 Thursday night as the Flyers wrapped up a Memorial Cup best - of - seven eastern hockey semi - final series in straight games.

The Garson goalie was peppered by 29 shots in the Ontario Junior championships.

Bernie Parent, in the Flyers' net, was called on to handle only 12 shots fired at him by the Native Sons.

In the four - game series, Whidden saw 45 pucks whiz by him, including 18 in the first game last Saturday. The native Sons managed only five goals against Parent, who racked up two shutouts in the four games.

Niagara Falls will now oppose Lasalle Maroons, winners in a two-out-of-three series earlier this week, in a best-of-seven eastern Canada final. The series will open in Montreal Saturday with the second game Sunday, also in Montreal.

SERIES BALANCED

The Flyers showed the balance that won them the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A championship and league title as all three lines accounted for four goals Thursday. The hill goal was netted by defencoman and captain Dave Woodley.

Aparicio Paces Orioles

Fiery Cuban Helps Twins Blast Yankees

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Baltimore Orioles' Luis Aparicio remains undisputed president of the Latin American shortstop's association today despite a short revolution staged by Minnesota Twin insurgent Zoilo Versalles.

Versalles, the fiery Cuban whose spring training squabble with manager Sam Mele resulted in a $200 fine, had challenged for the top spot with three hits including an inside-the-park home run, and three runs batted in as the Twins thumped New York Yankees 7-2 Thursday.

It fell to Aparicio to match the performance in the only other American League game played Thursday and Luis went one better.

Aparicio ripped four hits including a homer, drove in four runs and scored three as the Orioles walloped Washington Senators 18-4.

Luis, who celebrates his 31st birthday Sunday, also helped topped Versalles' speed, swiping two bases to Zoilo's one. Both shortstops had plenty of help, Tony Oliva slugging two home runs for the Twins and Curt Blefary and Brooks Robinson tagging two-run shots for the Orioles.

Versalles knocked out New York starter Al Downing in the second inning with a bases loaded single which delivered two runs. He was on second with a double with Oliva connected in the seventh and then his homer touched off the Twins three-run ninth.

Jim Kaat was the winner with a five-hitter, his first victory over the Yankees in five years and only his second in 14 lifetime decisions against New York.

The Orioles scored four runs in each of the first two innings and completed the rout with seven runs in the eighth, six of them unearned.

Aparicio ignited the eighth inning rally with his first home run and drove in two more runs later in the inning with a double.

Won't Name Players

Will Buy, Not Trade--Emms

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP)—Hap Emms, General manager of Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League, said Thursday the Bruins will probably buy some new talent in the near future.

"I'd rather pay cash for the players we want," he said in an interview here. "After all, there isn't much percentage in giving your better players for somebody else."

Emms, owner of Niagara Falls Flyers of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A League, was named general manager of the Bruins several weeks ago by owner Weston Adams.

The flyers won the best-of-seven eastern Memorial Cup semi-final series 4-0 over Garson-Falconbridge Native sons.

If the Flyers win the eastern junior playoffs, it will mark the second time in the last three years they have played in the Memorial Cup finals.

"I've spoken to Mr. (Stafford) Smythe, president of Toronto Maple Leafs, but we haven't made any deals yet," Emms said. He declined to say whether the Leafs are interest him.

Emms, opposed to junior clubs' playing on Sunday, said he will attend Boston's Sunday games.

"Naturally I'll attend the Bruins' Sunday games. After all I used to play professionally on Sundays. But I just didn't like the juniors playing on Sunday."

Boston's scouting system will be drastically revised, Emms said, but Harold Cotton will still be in charge.

City Bantams Ousted at Georgetown

Belleville Oddfellow Bantams were knocked out of the Georgetown Hockey Tournament's "B" section on Thursday — without having lost a game.

Battling against Port Huron, Michigan, the Belleville boys collected a 4-4 tie in the first game. Their total-goals series yesterday morning.

Meeting again in the afternoon, the teams played a 0-0 deadlock, leaving them still tied.

A sudden-death five-minute overtime period was played and since neither club scored, the second inning with a bases shots-on-goal basis.

Port Hurog got the nod with the only shot of the overtime, that coming from outside the Belleville blueline.

"It was a heart-breaker for our kids, especially since they played so well", said coach Floyd Crawford this morning. He said that the Oddfellows had an edge in play throughout both games.

Belleville suffered one setback before they got on the ice. Defenceman Greg Burkitt was ruled ineligible to play in the tournament because of a mixup in his playing certificate.

In the 4-4 battle, Dennis MacCormack potted two of the Belleville markers and Bill Murdoch netted the other pair.

Crawford paid tribute to the tournament, "It's loaded with good hockey players and teams and our boys were very good", adding "but that share is a tough way to lose a series."

CHIEF CONVICTED

TORONTO (CP) — Raymond Walsh, former police chief of Mount Forest, Ont., was convicted Thursday of impaired driving and fined $150 or 15 days. Walsh's car mounted a safety island here Feb. 8, injuring four persons.

Softball Sked Ready for Loop Approval

The Belleville and District Softball League will hold what is expected to be its final preseason meeting at Club Canada Sunday afternoon, at two o'clock.

The seven clubs have all officially filed entry and the season will open in less than a month, on May 17.

Returning from last season are the defending champions, Belleville Ells Juniors, Tweed Lombanks, Belleville Fraternal Motors and Trenton Commercial Printers. Three new entries are: the OASA Intermediate "B" champions, Bloomfield, Madoc and Stirling.

Main item on Sunday's agenda will be the approval of a schedule.

Secretary Cliff Belch said yesterday that he has an 18-game schedule completed and will offer it to the clubs Sunday.

"If there are any changes to be made, we want the clubs to say so now, not after the schedule is under way", Belch said, "so it is most important that all teams be represented at this meeting."

Meanwhile, on Monday night, Al Kelleher, President of the Belleville and District Umpires' Association, has called a meeting for all umpires. It will be held at the CNRA Park ball diamond, at 6:45.

Chelsea Suspends Eight

LONDON (AP)—The tough manager of Chelsea's pennant contending English Soccer League team dropped a bombshell Thursday night by suspending eight of his regulars from the team's final two games because they stayed out late.

Chelsea, the surprise of the English soccer season which ends next week, is in third place only two points behind leading Leeds United. The young team winds up its season with key matches against Burnley Saturday and Blackpool Monday.

Manager Tommy Docherty is considered a strict disciplinarian. Still his action against the eight created a sensation.

"I have prejudiced our English Soccer League championship chances because I believe in sticking by a principle," said Docherty.

The eight suspended are: Terry Venables, Chelsea captain and England inside-forward; Barry Bridges, centre-forward for England; Eddie McCreadie, Scotland's left back; John Hollins, England under-23 halfback; Bert Murry, England under-23 winger; Marvin Hinton, fullback; George Graham, Scottish under-23 inside-forward; Joe Fascione, a forward who played on a junior Scotland team.

Balding Quits Circuit

TORONTO (CP)—Al Balding 41, first Canadian golf pro to tackle the American professional tour on a full-time basis, has suffered severe case of bursitis and is quitting the circuit.

Bursitis, an inflammation, is in his right shoulder to the extent that he cannot raise his arm.

The ailment seems to stem from a freak accident in 1948 when he leaned against a hot pipe while showering and damaged his shoulder and back as he lurched away.

Then 24, Balding lately took up golf and went on to become one of the best-known Canadians in the game.

Mr. Ahearne Willing to Bet

Olympics Body to Recognize E. Germany

By ROD CURRIE

LONDON (CP) — John F. (Bunny) Ahearne, president of the International Ice Hockey Federation, says he's willing to bet the International Olympic Committee will grant "full recognition to East Germany this year."

Such a turn of events could bring havoc to plans for the 1968 winter Olympics scheduled for Grenoble, France, and could conceivably force the IOC to find a new site for the games.

Ahearne, who attended last week's IOC meeting in Lausanne, Switzerland, said in an interview Thursday that the matter will come up again at the Olympic meeting in Madrid in October and "I have a very strong feeling" East Germany will get the nod.

In recent olympics, East and West Germany have been represented by a combined team, thus getting around the ban on travel by East German teams to NATO-member countries.

In the past, France, a NATO member, has admitted only those East Germans given travel permission by the Allied Travel Bureau in West Berlin.

This office usually grants visas to individual athletes—such as the two East German skaters who competed in the world championships in the United States this year — but not to teams.

UPSET CANADIAN BID

This practice was one of the factors upsetting Canada's bid for the 1967 world hockey championships, since the IIHF already recognizes both East and West Germany and there was the possibility that as a host, Canada would have to bar the East Germans.

Canada proposed to solve the problem by splitting the tournament — holding the championships in Canada and the "B" round in Europe—but the IIHF voted to give the games to Austria, where there would be no such problem.

If France refused to guarantee entry to the East German hockey team, or it was decided to hold the games somewhere other than France, then the IIHF would have to reconsider its position.

Of the four countries bidding against France for the 1968 games—Canada, U.S., Norway and Japan—only Japan is a non-NATO country.

The IOC has already threatened to remove the games from Grenoble unless the French government gives a pledge to grant entry visas to all qualified competitors.

ROWLAND RETIRES

WINNIPEG (CP) — Corner linebacker Gordie Rowland, five times a Western Football Conference all-star, announced Thursday he's retiring from football. He said goodbye to Winnipeg Blue Bombers after 11 seasons. Rowland was 173 pounds at his heaviest. Ahearne Passes The Buck

LONDON (CP)—J. F. (Bunny) Ahearne, chief of world amateur hockey, said today there is "absolutely nothing I can do" to help Larry Regan of Ottawa get permission to operate a hockey school in Austria with National Hockey League players as instructors.

"I haven't got that kind of authority," Ahearne said in an interview. "The law that affects Regan's plan was adopted by a vote of the International Ice Hockey Federation last March. The vote was unanimous—for that includes the Canadian delegates."

Regan, a former NHL star, proposed to stage the school at Innsbruck using six NHL players — three from Detroit Red Wings, including Gordie Howe, and three from Toronto Maple Leafs.

Other Version of Harlow Will Be Ready in June

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — In the interests of fair play, it is only right that we pay a visit to the Joseph E. Levine production of Harlow.

Last week we observed the electronovision Harlow, which was speeding along with Carol Lynley as Jean. That version is in the can, as the Hollywood expression goes, and will be greeting movie customers next month.

The other version is taken from the best - selling book which Levine bought and then disowned, declaring that his movie wouldn't dish out the same dirt. The enterprising Bostonian aimed his Harlow at the box office with deliberate speed, but he won't be able to beat the other one, which was made and shot in living scenes with electronic cameras.

Joe has had another problem: Carroll Baker. She returned to the film this week after a fortnight's absence. Her ailment was attributed to chills, but cynics in the crowd figured she was suffering from cold feet.

The Levine Harlow was shooting this week at Paramount.

DRESS TEST

Miss Baker was rehearsing a scene in which she raced from a stage mansion, holding up the torn front of her dress, after spurning the producer's advances. She tried her agent, played by Red Buttons, who had put her up to the stunt in order that she could break her contract.

She stopped by for a brief hello.

Interviews were taboo, an aide said. The silent sex symbol retired to her dressing room.

Director Gordon Oliver remembered as a boy as mail clerk, office boy at the old Hal Roach studio when Harlow was still for the Laurel and Hardy comedies. "She was a great gal," he said. "The crew loved her."

Oliver spoke confidently of making the June 23 opening which Levine has promised for his Harlow. The director admitted the other version "will make a few kopeks," but he figures it won't hold a candle to the Baker vehicle.

Doubts NHL Will Move H.Q.

MONTREAL (CP) — David Molson, president of Montreal Canadiens, says he is prepared to go along with moving National Hockey League headquarters out of Montreal if that is the general desire of NHL governors.

He said, however, he doubts whether the proposal, put forth recently by Toronto president Stafford Smythe, will be approved by or even submitted to the next governors meeting.

Molson, interviewed in Chicago by the Montreal newspaper La Presse said the presence of NHL headquarters and president Clarence Campbell in Montreal is, in some ways, "harmful" to the Canadiens.

There is an erroneous impression in some quarters that, "because we can call him without spending a cent, we spend the day talking to Mr. Campbell."

The Montreal president, in Chicago for the Stanley Cup finals between Canadiens and Black Hawks, added that, if the league decides to move its head office, he favors shifting it to a city not having an NHL franchise.

At the Belle

Jerry Lewis is Hospital Orderly in Comedy "The Disorderly Orderly."

Jerry Lewis has one of the maniest roles of his career in the new Technicolor comedy for Paramount, "The Disorderly Orderly", now showing at the Belle Theatre.

Jerry plays a hospital orderly whose fumbling backwardness qualifies him more mental patient than an attendant in a hospital. He camera the dignified surroundings topsy-turvy when he is turned loose in hospital corridors and wards.

"The Disorderly Orderly" is perhaps the funniest Jerry Lewis comedy to date, and it follows close on the heels of his last hilarious comedy, "The Patsy." In this his first motion picture, Lewis is given ample opportunity to display all the facets of his comedy talents which has created a fan following of international proportions.

The film which re-united Lewis, Director-writer Frank Tashlin and producer Paul Jones, is in glorious Technicolor for Paramount.

Along with Jerry Lewis, the cast of "The Disorderly Orderly" includes such top names as Susan Oliver, Glenda Farrell, Everett Sloane, Karen Sharp and cameo roles by such outstanding performers as Jack E. Leonard and Barbara Nichols.

The enjoyment of the Jerry Lewis Picture is enhanced with the exhibition of three-fine short treats, making a complete Color program.

Dick Van Dyke Show in Last Year of Production

NEW YORK (AP) — When CBS' Celebrity Game was young, host Carl Reiner signed off the show by reading obediently from the cue cards the usual invitation to tune in next week. At which point, he ad libbed: ". . . Except you know who."

Like Dave Garroway's "peace" and Garry Moore's "be very kind to each other," this has become Reiner's standard farewell and has been an enormous stimulus for audience mail. Many a viewer is certain he knows the identity of the star who Reiner will not permit on the show.

"I did it on the spur of the moment," Reiner said. "And by now the audience has named about every star who has not — yet — appeared on the show."

Carl has been on a New York holiday before plunging into another season overseeing production of his brainchild, The Dick Van Dyke Show on CBS.

"It is the last season, definitely," Reiner said. "Dick has a very important picture career ahead of him, and Mary Tyler Moore also has a big picture contract. But I've got some ideas about another series. . . ."

Eric Fleming and Sheb Wooley will leave CBS' Rawhide at the end of this season, leaving Clint Eastwood as the program's single star . . . Bing Crosby, his comedy series finished, will make eight appearances as host of ABC's Hollywood Palace next year.

Gordon To Make Budget Speech Monday Night

Final Draft Completed Before Easter Recess

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's best-kept annual secret will be unveiled when Finance Minister Gordon rises, to the usual desk-thumping encouragement of Liberal backbenchers, and delivers his third budget speech Monday night.

In 90 minutes, or perhaps less he will present the results of months of work, affecting virtually every person in Canada.

Only about half a dozen persons have advance knowledge of what he will say.

With the secrecy of a military invasion, the budget is brought to fruition with painstaking precautions.

The final draft of this budget was completed "before Easter, but minor changes in the speech were inserted this week. This was a polishing job, not affecting the meat of the matter.

Besides Mr. Gordon, the budget's entire contents are known only by Prime Minister Pearson, Deputy Finance Minister R. B. Bryce, two or three senior officials in the finance department and the parliamentary secretary to the minister, Larry Pennell (Grant-Haliburton-Muskoka). Revenue Minister Benson would certainly know about the tax-change sections of the speech; if not all of it.

RECALLS FUSS

Mr. Gordon is responsible for the secrecy. He is reported to be ultra-cautious about it after the rhubarb that resulted from his first speech when it was disclosed that outside consultants were involved in its preparation.

In last year's speech, he made a point of assuring the Commons that no outsiders were involved.

This budget has been under preparation for months. The minister set the end of 1964 as the deadline for receiving submissions from interested organizations—and by that time he had received, and duly noted, most calling for tax cuts.

High-level planning sessions followed. The way in which notes were taken were collected and burned. When paper was used by typists, it was carefully destroyed.

As the budget draft was being typed, the work was divided among some 10 secretaries—all Ottawa women—in such a way each did scattered pages from the text so none would have a complete picture.

STUDIED TRENDS

The cabinet is given a rough outline of what to expect, but no more.

The speech is ready for presentation after the minister and his officials have made a thorough study of the economy, the views of interested organizations, the probable trends in the near future and the likely effects of dozens of various recommendations.

Among the decisions:

Should the government aim

Only KKK Balks at Mediation

BOGALUSA, La. (AP)—City officials have agreed to meet with the all - Negro Bogalusa Civic and Voters League, altering an earlier stand that the civil rights organization doesn't represent the Negro community here.

"I'm perfectly satisfied by the action taken by the mayor and his council," said leader President A. Z. Young.

Announcement of the city's about-face came at a press conference early today by the three volunteer mediators who came here to try a fresh approach to settling racial differences that have sharply divided Bogalusa, a paper mill town of 22,000.

Even as the mediation team of a labor leader and two politicians—met with city officials and civil rights group, the Ku Klux Klan secretly distributed handbills throughout Bogalusa.

"We have never appreciated outsiders telling us how to run our city. Outsiders have often caused trouble in our city," said the handbills.

Lawyers for the city and the civil rights group will meet with the mediators sometime next week to set the ground rules for the racial negotiations.

Later, Mayor Jesse Cutrer, reached at his home, said the community affairs committee, consisting of 25 business and civic leaders, had unanimously approved and endorsed the position taken by himself and the council.

"We're saying we recognize the Voters League and will talk and discuss problems, but we also point out there are other Negro organizations in the city," said Cutrer.

Elsewhere, there were these developments:

US Navy To Use A6 Jets

SAIGON (AP) — The U.S. Navy is bringing in its powerful A-6 Intruder jet attack bomber for strikes against Communist North Viet Nam, a 7th fleet spokesman said today.

The announcement came as a military spokesman reported that six U.S. Air Force B-57 Canberra jet bombers blasted an anti-aircraft site and a truck convoy Friday night in North Viet Nam. He said the planes returned safely.

The Intruders will arrive aboard the carrier Independence, which is to arrive for duty off Viet Nam "within the next couple of months," the fleet spokesman said.

Although the Intruder isn't a supersonic warplane like the F-4 Phantoms and the A-4 Skyhawks, it is specifically equipped for attacks on targets obscured by weather or darkness. This will be an asset during the approaching summer monsoons.

In addition, the Grumman-built Intruder is considered able to carry a heavier and more varied load of bombs and armament than any of the navy's other carrier-based aircraft.

The twin-engine, 600-mile-an-hour "Intruder carries a pilot and a bombardier-navigation specialist.

Cmdr. Boyd Muncie, 42, of San Diego, Calif., said today reports of Soviet anti - aircraft missiles around Hanoi do not worry him. "We have methods to destroy the Sam H, which has been in existence a good many years," he said.

In East Berlin, Gen. Heinz Hoffmann, East Germany's defence minister, said Friday that Soviet ground-to-air missiles and jet fighters are in Viet Nam now.

A U.S. marine corps enlisted man was killed and another wounded early today when a grenade exploded accidentally in the Phu Bai marine installation northwest of Da Nang air base.

Saigon press reports said today three American frogmen killed in a country area 340 miles north of the capital were slain by Viet Cong guerrillas while carrying out a harbor survey.

South Korea suffered its first combat fatality in South Viet Nam Friday. An army sergeant was killed and two other Korean soldiers were wounded when a Viet Cong land mine exploded. The Koreans are taking part of an engineer force building and improving highways.

Alleged Slayer Is Committed To Hospital

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Lasslo Lutar, 34, of Windsor, accused of murder in the death of a 16-year-old youth here, was ordered committed to the Ontario Hospital at Penetanguishene Friday on the recommendation of a psychiatrist.

Dr. Robert Mason told the court Lutar, charged with capital murder Monday of Steven Kostyak, 64, of Windsor, is "very seriously mentally ill."

"Ole Man River" "Still Keeps Rollin' Along"

DUBUQUE, Iowa (AP)—The Mississippi River, its high water mark achieved in Wisconsin, continued its destructive rush past Iowa and Illinois communities today.

The river crested Friday in Prairie du Chien, Wis., at an estimated 25.3 feet — 7.3 feet above flood stage. It was difficult to tell the exact river level because the flood gauge was under water.

Dubuque residents braced for a record 26.7-foot crest expected Sunday and watched in fear as two tall tanks filled with inflammable material threatened to topple.

Governors of Illinois and Minnesota asked federal disaster funds for their flood - stricken states.

Floodwaters killed at least 12 persons in Minnesota.

The waters forced some 23,000 persons from their homes during a nearly month-long siege. Waters continued to drop in that state today.

Aims to Promote Teaching 'Why' of Canadian History

OTTAWA (CP) — A new approach to the teaching of Canadian history is to be studied by the Canadian Association for Social Studies.

J. T. Copp of Montreal, the association's research director, said at the annual meeting Friday he plans to complete research into the "problem" method of teaching history later this year.

Prof. Copp, who teaches at McGill University and Loyola College, has already begun his study of the method which has been in use in the United States and Europe for nearly a decade. Basically, it is designed to teach the student the "why" of history as well as the "what."

The teacher uses a historical incident or problem to discuss the various political, social, economic and other reasons behind what occurred.

Prof. Copp thinks the method can teach students to think about why historical incidents happened instead of simply memorizing them. It is also designed to promote spirited class room discussion.

The Montreal history professor has selected four problems which he intends to develop further for use by teachers across the country.

The first topic is Confederation 1867: What kind of Canada?

Part of studying this "problem" will be concerned with explaining and discussing the reactions to Confederation of the provinces and of the French- and English-Canadians.

Prof. Copp also plans to produce material in "problem" discussion form on the conscription crisis of 1917, the Winnipeg general strike of 1919 and the French-Indian Wars of the 17th century.

France Shuns SEATO

PARIS (AP)—France served notice Friday that it intends to adopt an empty-chair policy in the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization (SEATO), a Pacific counterpart of NATO.

Authorized government sources announced no French warships will take part in naval manoeuvres of the eight-country alliance opening in the South China Sea May 1.

The French decision to stand aside from the manoeuvres, dubbed Seahorse, followed by only three days an announcement that France will send an observer rather than a ministerial representative to a meeting of the SEATO foreign ministers in London May 3.

The French moves appear clearly to underline President de Gaulle's rejection to U.S. policy in Viet Nam.

But highly - placed French government sources said that, as of now, France has no intention of formally withdrawing from SEATO.

"Instead, they said, "France intends to pursue the empty-chair policy—not taking part physically in alliance activities, but still technically remaining a member.

Rusk Says Views Of Professors 'Nonsensical'

Amazed at 'Gullibility' Shown by Educated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The state department is trying to find ways to boost public-support for the United States' Viet Nam policy and to dispel what secretary Dean Rusk calls nonsensical views of the war there.

Prime targets of the campaign are the professors and students who, have been outspokenly critical — sometimes with demonstrations—of the use of American military force in the Southeast Asian conflict.

Rusk spoke bluntly Friday night to the American Society of International Law, whose membership includes many university professors. A one-time college teacher himself, Rusk said:

"I continue to hear and see nonsense about the nature of the struggle there.

"I sometimes wonder at the gullibility of educated men and the stubborn disregard of plain facts by men who are supposed to be leading our young to learn—especially to learn how to think."

U.S. officials indicated, meanwhile, they are considering issuing another official "white paper" to explain the government's view on Viet Nam. The state department also is planning to send more speakers around the country in response to mounting requests for government spokesmen to discuss Viet Nam.

The officials listed four points they hope to get across more clearly.

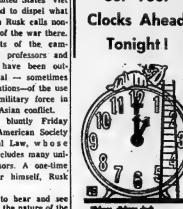
CRITICIZES PRESS

First is what they call the facts about North Vietnamese intervention in South Viet Nam. They said headlines daily speak of U.S. bombing raids on the North, but seldom give much display to slaughter of South Vietnamese villagers by Communist Viet Cong terrorists.

The argument that North Viet Nam is not intervening because Viet Cong—not North Vietnamese—all theoretically one country also will get state department rebuttal.

Second, U.S. officials intend to stress that it is in the U.S. national interest to help South Viet Nam.

Third, the state department wants to underline that the U.S. stands ready to make peace immediately if the Communists show readiness.



And fourth, it will note U.S. preference for developing resources to economic development in Southeast Asia rather than to war.

In other developments:

—U.S. officials said Friday it could require up to 300,000 American troops to help South Viet Nam stem a full-scale invasion by China.

—The same officials said there is evidence China or the Soviet Union are moving toward an intervention of this scope in Southeast Asia.

Red River Overflow At Emerson

EMERSON, Man. (CP)—Residents of this border community went to sleep Friday to the hum of pumps, battling the flooding Red River as it spilled its overflow into the business sector.

To them, the sound is not a new one. The Red has rampaged before, but the 100 residents are prepared.

Meanwhile, there was word Friday to indicate that in the Red River valley as a whole the flood threat had eased somewhat as the flood crest approached Manitoba through North Dakota.

Flood control officials again revised downward the crest forecasts for the province and said peak levels would not be as high as previously anticipated.

Flood control headquarters at Winnipeg attributed this to a lack of heavy precipitation recently, reduced flows in tributaries of the Red, and a heavy carry-off of water by the Red at a low flood level.

At Emerson the Red stood late Friday at 785 feet above sea level—one foot below the anticipated crest, expected late tonight or Sunday.

Provinces Can Negotiate With Foreign Powers But Cannot Sign Pacts--Martin

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal government is concerned over Quebec's claims to international treaty-making powers, Friday night issued a three-page policy pronouncement that the provinces may negotiate but not sign pacts with foreign governments.

External Affairs Minister Martin conceded there is a "lack of harmony" between treaty - making and treaty - implementing powers but said "there is no doubt that only the government of Canada has the power or authority to enter into treaties with other countries."

His statement, an expansion of remarks made recently by himself and Prime Minister Pearson, was an apparent reply to speeches during the week by Paul Gerin-Lajoie, Quebec's education minister.

The external affairs minister said "once it is determined that what a province wishes to achieve through agreements is the field of education or in other fields of provincial jurisdiction falls within the framework of Canadian Foreign policy, the provinces can discuss detailed arrangements directly with the competent authorities of the country concerned.

"When a formal international agreement is to be concluded, however, the federal powers relating to the signature of treaties and the conduct of over-all foreign policy must necessarily come into operation."

Mr. Martin, in his home riding of Essex East in Windsor, Ont., issued the statement through his office in the capital. The fact the government found it necessary to issue it at all indicated its concern with Mr. Gerin-Lajoie's remarks.

The latest political controversy between the Pearson and Lesage administrations was set off by the signing in February of an agreement for a student exchange between Quebec and France. Each government interprets the signing differently.

The federal governments calls the agreement an "entente or understanding" and on March 1 Mr. Martin said "standing alone, these agreements between France and Quebec could not have been regarded as agreements subject to international law."

In addition, the agreement was assented to by the Canadian and French governments by an exchange of letters.

Quebec's viewpoint was indicated Friday by Premier Lesage when he was asked to comment on the prime minister's statement that the provinces should go through Ottawa in any negotiations with another country.

"I can't see how Mr. Pearson can say that Quebec is not qualified to sign international agreements when they are just signed one with the government of France."

The federal and Quebec positions also appear to differ over the jurisdictions within which a province may negotiate.

Mr. Gerin-Lajoie said Thursday Quebec intends to negotiate not only in areas falling exclusively within provincial jurisdiction but in those of common interest with the federal government.

"In the fields which surpass in a number of ways the division of powers, such as the research sphere, Quebec as a member of the Canadian Confederation wants to be present as a partner in the elaboration of policies and programs," he said.

Mr. Martin's policy statement mentions only "fields of provincial jurisdiction" as areas where a province may negotiate with a foreign power.

North Hastings Potato Growers Form Group

BANCROFT — The formation of the North Hastings Potato Growers' Association was completed last week at a meeting here. This new group evolved from a series of meetings initiated by the Hastings County Agricultural Committee when it presented the possibilities of ARDA at public gatherings in the north end of the county. The first growers' meeting was held in Bancroft on March 4th when a temporary group was formed. The actual organization came on April 15th when basic details were arranged.

The first president is Gene Lockhart of Ormsby, vice-president is Gordon Davis of Greenview; and C. H. Gunter of Cox Hill is secretary-treasurer. Paid-up membership as of this meeting totals 21. About half the members will be in the seed potato area and the rest in commercial production. Plans include regular growers' meetings as the season progresses. Coupled with this will be a program of 4-H Potato Clubs. This junior work is already under way. For the senior people, the first step is a soil test program to be carried out immediately. Other growers in the area wishing to join may contact the secretary.

Farm Accident Survey Started

STIRLING—Hastings County is conducting a farm accident survey from April 1965 to the end of March 1966. This will be conducted on a township basis. Each councillor has been asked to report accidents each month to the township clerk, who is the recorder. The reports are collected for the county at the Ontario Department of Agriculture office, Stirling.

All farmers are being asked to report all and any accidents which mean a loss of $25 in time, material or bills to the nearest township councillor. The councillor has the basic report form which will oversee ally bring the information into the county picture. This system should give the most complete picture representative of Hastings County.

Will Discuss Bourguiba's Israel Plan

TUNIS (Reuters) — President Habib Bourguiba's proposals for a compromise solution on Israel are expected to come up for discussion today at a meeting of his socialist Destour party's 50-member central committee.

The Tunisian press and the U.S. state department speculate Bourguiba's proposals, but they drew bitter criticism from the Arab states.

Bourguiba's proposals include Arab recognition of Israel and its United Nations-drawn borders and the ceding by Israel of a section of territory to repatriate the Arab Palestine refugees.

There has been no official Israeli reaction so far.

The president conferred Friday with his top aides on his proposals but the details of the talks were disclosed.

Newspapers in Cairo, Beirut and Damascus poured scorn on Bourguiba. The Egyptian newspaper Al Akhbar said he had gone "raving mad."

Bourguiba said that if Israel accepts his proposals as a basis for negotiation, the U.N. pursue the matter at the Arab summit conference to be held in Morocco in September.

The Cairo newspaper Al Ahram quoted "reasonable sources" and said that Egypt will not take part in the summit meeting if Bourguiba attends.

Instead, he thanked them for their good wishes.

The governor-general shares his birthday—St. George's Day —with a number of other notables including Prime Minister Pearson, William Shakespeare, actress Shirley Temple and New York Mets pitcher Warren Spahn.

A Sellout is anticipated . . . So Hurry

Quebec Govt. To Appeal To the Queen

QUEBEC (CP)—The Quebec government announced Friday it has decided to appeal directly to the Queen to settle its fight with the province's Opposition-dominated upper house.

Premier Lesage told newsmen following a lengthy cabinet meeting the precise text of a special address to the Queen will be worked out by the cabinet Tuesday.

It then will be presented to the Legislative Assembly, which reconvenes Tuesday, for approval. Once that's obtained, it will go through the federal government to the British Parliament which acts as the Queen's "counsel" in such matters.

The move, unprecedented in recent history, follows a battle within the Quebec legislature over a government bill to eliminate the Legislative Council's veto powers over legislation.

The bill, passed by the elected assembly, where the Liberal government holds 64 of its 95 seats, was watched by the Legislative Council, however, Canada's only provincial senate, in which the Opposition Union Nationale has a 15-9 majority, decided to kill the measure in the chamber's veto rights over constitutional issues.

Automation Is No Threat To Trainmen

EDMONTON (CP) — Automation poses no immediate threat to members of the International Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, (CLC) Union President Charles Luna of Cleveland said Friday.

Mr. Luna told a press conference during a visit to Edmonton that there are some automatic switching yardsas use in North America, but more than 95 per cent of yards on the continent still are manned.

He said there has not been machines that will perform the operations involved in most yards.

Abel Heads Steelworkers Union Vote

MONTREAL (CP) — The United Steelworkers of America (CLC) announced today that I. W. Abel defeated David A. MacDonald by 10,000 votes in Quebec balloting in the union's international presidency elections in February.

The union said M. J. Mooney obtained a 30,000 vote majority for the vice - presidency, and M. M. Bastien, a 24,000 majority for the secretary-treasurer's position.

The union's Quebec headquarters gave no specific breakdown.

Both Abel and MacDonald, who operate out of the union's international headquarters in Pittsburgh, have claimed victory in the over-all North American elections.

Quebec Govt. To Appeal To the Queen

QUEBEC (CP)—The Quebec government announced Friday it has decided to appeal directly to the Queen to settle its fight with the province's Opposition-dominated upper house.

Premier Lesage told newsmen following a lengthy cabinet meeting the precise text of a special address to the Queen will be worked out by the cabinet Tuesday.

It then will be presented to the Legislative Assembly, which reconvenes Tuesday, for approval. Once that's obtained, it will go through the federal government to the British Parliament which acts as the Queen's "counsel" in such matters.

The move, unprecedented in recent history, follows a battle within the Quebec legislature over a government bill to eliminate the Legislative Council's veto powers over legislation.

The bill, passed by the elected assembly, where the Liberal government holds 64 of its 95 seats, was watched by the Legislative Council, however, Canada's only provincial senate, in which the Opposition Union Nationale has a 15-9 majority, decided to kill the measure in the chamber's veto rights over constitutional issues.

Automation Is No Threat To Trainmen

EDMONTON (CP) — Automation poses no immediate threat to members of the International Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, (CLC) Union President Charles Luna of Cleveland said Friday.

Mr. Luna told a press conference during a visit to Edmonton that there are some automatic switching yardsas use in North America, but more than 95 per cent of yards on the continent still are manned.

He said there has not been machines that will perform the operations involved in most yards.

Windsor Body Opposes Rail Rate Structure

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — The freight rate committee of the Windsor Chamber of Commerce has indicated it will present a brief to a parliamentary committee studying bill C-120, which relates to freight rate subsidies, abandonment of money - losing branch lines and passenger services.

The committee met Friday with Essex County MPs, External Affairs Minister Paul Martin (Essex East), Herbert Gray (Essex West) and Eugene Whelan (Essex South) to discuss the bill, which the committee contends does not meet this area's requirements.

The committee, representing the interests of the majority of communities in southwestern Ontario, was advised by the MPs to make a submission to a parliamentary committee and that the group would have the MPs support.

The main complaint of shippers in southwestern Ontario is that freight rates to Western Canada are equalized on a Toronto-based rate while shipments from this area to eastern points are at a mileage basis rate. The group contends that this area's geographic location should entitle it to more favorable rates both to east and west points.

Find Tattoed Woman Died Of Pneumonia

TORONTO (CP)—Police said Friday an autopsy on the body of a tattooed young woman found earlier in the day at a suburban construction site revealed she died of pneumonia.

The fully-clothed body of the 25-year-old Beverly Board was found by a bricklayer in North York.

Police said there was no suggestion of foul play but they were puzzled why the body had apparently been dragged from a car on a nearby road to the construction site.

They said they were looking for a suspect with the possibility of placing a charge of offering an indignity to human remains.

The victim had the name Mayfair in the centre of a dagger-and-heart tattoo on her left arm, a lying design on one finger and a star tattooed on her right hand.

OTTAWA (CP) — The president of the Association of French-Speaking Civil Servants said Friday he is quitting his $8,500-a-year draftsman's job with the federal transport department because of feeling "assimilation" against French-speaking employees.

Prohibition Era Gangster Owney Madden Dies at 73

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP)— Owen Vincent (Owney) Madden, gangster, gambler and racketeer who ruled by terror in New York and New Jersey, died here today. He was 73.

Death from chronic emphysema, a lung disease, ended his 26 years of quiet retirement in this central Arkansas resort.

Madden's blazing underworld career spanned two decades of bootlegging and racketeering in the two states. In his later years, Madden was a generous contributor to charities, particularly those benefitting young people. He rigorously avoided publicity.

Between 1910 and 1934, police accused the pale-faced Madden of six killings, but he served only two prison terms—one for "instigating" the slaying of Hymie Weiss, chief another for parole violation.

He bossed the Gopher Gang, which fought many bloody battles with the Hudson Dusters in New York City's Hell's Kitchen district during prohibition days.

MEN BLAZE AWAY

In November, 1922, Madden entered a night club in the district and opened fire on patrons: "Put away your guns. I am unarmed," he said. Two men were fined 12 bullets into Madden but he recovered.

New York police nicknamed him "Clay Pigeon."

Within a week of the shooting, his assailants were slain. Authorities were unable to link Madden to the death.

Madden's associates during the era included Jack (Legs) Diamond, Vincent (Mad Dog) Coll, Big Frenchy DeMange, Dutch Schultz, Bo Weinberg, Chink Sherman and others.

Madden in turn was linked by Sing prison, Madden admitted to operating a brewery at the prison and also to the New York City that ferried out 200,000 gallons of beer each day. Police estimated the value of the brewery's equipment at $1,000,000. The brewery closed while Madden was in prison on a 10-to-20-year sentence in the Hopeful slaying. He served eight years.

REASON FOR KILLING

Police said Doyle was killed because he tried to steal Madden's girl friend and attempted to muscle in as head of the Gopher gang.

In 1933, he retired to Hot Springs for ill health, scarred by numerous bullets.

His life here was sedate. His nearest neighbor was Police Chief John Ermey.

But in 1961, when called before the U.S. Senate rackets investigating subcommittee, Madden repeatedly invoked the Fifth Amendment.

Before he retired, Madden controlled bookie, night clubs, slot machines, enormous lottery games (the numbers racket), a dog racing syndicate, a laundry and prize fighters among other things.

Two Canadian Youths Crash Florida Plane

ORLANDO, Fla. (CP)—Two Canadian youths, injured when a light plane they were flying crashed on a central Florida ranch Wednesday, remained in serious condition in hospital Friday night.

Donald W. McFadden, 19, and Wayne Woodman, 21, both of Wallaceburg, Ont., were on a six-week vacation when the accident occurred.

The boy's parents said after learning of the crash that they were unaware either of the boys could fly a plane or had a pilot's license. The United States Federal Aviation Agency was investigating.

Owner of the plane was registered to Bob Geddes of Grand Bahama, Bahama Islands.

Mediator Probes for Strike Solution

PITTSBURGH (AP)—A federal mediator continues digging today for a solution that will avert a steel strike throughout the U.S. May 1.

William E. Simkin is trying to find common areas of agreements between the union and companies that will enable them to begin their 60-day bargaining table ob better terms.

The two sides are attempting to reach an interim agreement —one that, will extend the May 1 strike deadline.

As it stands, the United Steelworkers has demanded wage and benefit increases totalling 17.9 cents an hour. The companies have offered five to seven cents.

In another development, the union's executive board convenes to decide whether it will strike independent steel producers in the event a walkout is called against the 11 major steel companies.

Simkin said his activities Friday were purely exploratory. He said he made no suggestions to either party.

The union, in taking a strike-if-necessary stance, said steel workers feel it has been cheated by a healthy rate. It argues that steelworkers should receive a larger share. They now average $4.40 an hour.

ARREST MOST-WANTED

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP)— The Federal Bureau of Investigation announced the arrest here Friday of Leslie Douglas Ashley, 28, one of its 10 most wanted fugitives. Ashley, female impersonator and killer, had escaped from the maximum security ward of a Texas mental hospital.

Will Continue Kingston Area School Boycott

KINGSTON (CP)—About 125 parents voted unanimously Friday night to continue a walkout of their children from public schools in the Perth Road district, 18 miles north of here, despite the possibility of legal action.

The parents withdrew 80 children from the schools April 5 to protest the Loughboro Township school board's decision to close four schools and build a $240,000 addition to a central school at Sydenham, 15 miles from Perth Road.

Chairman of the meeting, J. W. Gaskin, warned the parents that "if the children stay out we'll be threatened by officialdom. We're acting outside the bounds of the law."

Condensed CN Schedule Uses Local Times

MONTREAL — For the first time in Canada a trans-continental railway time table will show arrivals and departures in local times.

As an experiment, Canadian National Railways new 800-page condensed time table, being issued this weekend, will list standard or daylight time, whichever is observed by the community, in the time table.

The pocket-size, eight-page bilingual publication covers only mainline passenger train service between principal cities east to coast.

The run from Montreal to Windsor, for example, is shown with a light line separating from Montreal, and a standard time arrival in Windsor, as that city remains on standard time year round.

The railway's regular system time table, however, remains with standard time listings. This time table, costing 64 pages and 101 different schedules, is the largest in North America.

The absence of uniformity in both the switchover date and the observance period of daylight saving time makes standard time listings necessary in this time table.

Newspapers Fined $25, Magistrate Urges Appeal

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Sun and Province newspapers Friday were fined a nominal $25 each and urged by Magistrate Lionel Scott to appeal convictions for publishing evidence during a preliminary hearing in which a witness quoted the defendant as admitting his guilt.

The magistrate called the trial a test case and said he hoped it would be appealed to establish some authoritative law on the subject.

He said he made the fines nominal because he believes the newspaper reports in question were published in good faith and in the belief they were within the law.

"There would be a very substantial penalty if I thought otherwise," the magistrate said.

The charges were laid following stories Dec. 16 last year on the previous day's testimony at a preliminary hearing in a murder case.

The accused later was found not guilty.

Magistrate Scott said the case had given him much concern. He said he had been impressed at first with the arguments that statements in question could be published because they were admissible at a higher court trial.

SHOULDN'T DECIDE

"On second look, it was not up to a magistrate or the press to decide on the admissibility in a higher court trial of evidence given at a preliminary hearing.

The articles were published in the belief that the admission did not fall within Section 453 of the Criminal Code," Magistrate Scott said.

The section was amended by Parliament in 1959 to ban any reference in published reports to admissions or confessions tendered in evidence at a preliminary hearing until either the accused is discharged or the subsequent trial ended. Anyone guilty of such an offence is punishable by fine or conviction.

Counsel for the newspapers had argued that the articles dealt with the statement of a witness. It was not a confession because it had not been made in any official and was merely hearsay.

The fines were assessed against the Sun Publishing Co. and Southam Press Ltd., publishers of The Province.

The charges against the two newspapers were laid by the Crown prosecutor.

Freedom of Expression

Children should be allowed freedom of expression in trying to explain problems posed by their classroom teachers.

That is what J. R. Suchman, a U.S. school curricula specialist from Washington, told the Ontario Education Association. Few teachers, and probably even fewer laymen, would quarrel with that suggestion.

There will probably be less solid endorsation of Mr. Suchman's declaration that "many classrooms are in fact hostile to the independent, natural inquiry of children." We suspect, though, that he could document the charge, because we feel certain from observation it is true of many homes.

Mr. Suchman, however, may discover that support is difficult to find for a third statement, that it is "devastating" for children to be told by teachers in class that they are wrong, because it makes the children feel they do not matter. Surely failure to correct an erroneous answer would do much more damage, misleading other children.

We suspect the trouble here lies largely in the inevitable over-simplification of a difficult subject which results when a reporter endeavors to condense the opinions of a speaker.

Nevertheless, even if there is some distortion in the opinions attributed to the speaker, we have here sufficient material to tempt us into a survey of what must be one of the central problems of any desirable system of education—the promotion of independence of thought without the propagation of ideas demonstrably erroneous.

Without any knowledge of the techniques of teaching generally approved today, it seems fairly obvious to us that we attempt to meet this problem by encouraging freedom of expression at the upper levels of education, while depending on authority in the lower grades.

Our best high school teachers, in such subjects as English, permit a wide variety of opinion in acceptable answers from their students.

But, according to Mr. Suchman, by the time a student reaches high school it would, in most cases, be too late to encourage independence of thought.

Children, he says, are contaminated between the first and sixth grades with the notion that they must accept what is told and taught them.

If this is true of the schools, it is doubly deplorable because this is the normal attitude in the majority of homes. The parent says:

"Don't do that!"

"Why?"

"Because I say so."

By this attitude we are killing the most precious asset of the average child, an all-embracing curiosity, a consuming desire to know the why and the wherefore of any and all subjects.

To preserve this curiosity, this interest in life, it might well be that no sacrifice would be too great, even the sacrifice of permitting the propagation of error by failure to correct publicly a child's interpretations of historical, mathematical or grammatical facts. In practice, though, surely there is a middle road which will not, using Mr. Suchman's term, be "devastating" to the child, but will eradicate error. "Come, let us reason together" seems to be the technique; at least it is the one which the wise parent uses in the home. This does not establish "democracy" and settle family questions by the counting of heads. The parent can insist that the action taken should be appropriate to his opinion on a subject, if he deems this essential. But the possibility that the child is right should be admitted if indeed, any such possibility exists —and once we start considering questions in this light we shall be surprised at the scarcity of proven "facts" and the vast areas where there are only "opinions."

The child, says Mr. Suchman, should not always have to bend to rigid opinions of teachers. Nor, let it be added, to the rigid opinions of other adults, or for that matter even the rigid opinions of his peers.

Virtually every invention, every scientific discovery, ever advance by mankind, has been the result of a staunch refusal by an individual to accept existing opinions.

Is This Risk Worth While?

Victoria Colonist

Two policemen and a truck driver were injured recently in Vancouver on a police car pursuing a stolen vehicle collided with the truck at an intersection. The speedometer of the police car was jammed at 60 in the smash.

The accident came shortly after a similar one in Winnipeg, where a car alleged to have been stolen and being chased by the police struck another with the loss of two lives.

These two mishaps with serious consequences serve to emphasize a question that is no less disturbing or puzzling for being perennial. It is a question that can only take on ever-greater importance as urban populations and traffic grow in density.

Should the police persist in trying to overtake speeders at high speeds on city streets no matter the danger to the pursued, the pursuers in the performance of their duty, and especially the innocent public? Or should they be under orders to break off such chases rather than risk a tragic outcome

Certainly it would be an open invitation particularly to car thieves to step on the gas and escape if the law enforcement officers were under such restrictions, and not much of an encouragement to do so for speeders and other traffic offenders, even though the reference numbers of these fugitives might in many instances be taken, leading to their ultimate arrest.

Nevertheless the lives of citizens involved through no fault or duty of their own are a high price for society to pay for the apprehension of—in some cases, at least—minor misdemeanants.

"There must be a better method of police doing their duty in the way of catching suspects in cars," the Edmonton Journal says in this connection. And so there should.

But short of roadblocks at impossibly frequent intervals, what is it?

Beware Jingoism

London Sunday Times

The resurgence of French Canadian patriotism during the past few years owes much to economic and professional grievances which Canada alone can solve; but in part it is also a response to those trumpet calls of old-fashioned nationalism that Gaullist France has been sending forth to speakers of the French tongue everywhere. We hope that Paris will mute those trumpets before racial pride in Canada turns into jingoism and jingoism into tragedy.

To Your Good Health
Child Adoption Is Best When Child Is Very Young

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: My husband and I want to adopt a child but would like to know this:

We feel that the earlier age at which we get an infant, the more he will seem like our own. Yet we were wondering how much you can tell about a child's health, physical characteristics, temperament and intelligence. Would you know enough at six months or less, or would the child have to be older? — Mrs. R. O.

You are asking too much — asking more than you could expect if the child were really your own.

Currently the number of adoptable children is somewhat larger in proportion to the demand than has been the case in the past. But that doesn't mean that adopting is now easy. We may be having a worldwide population explosion, but we have, in this country, a great supply of juvenile parents, and not enough children to match.

So the adoption agencies can pick and choose — not trying to find a child to suit the parents, but trying to find parents which, in the next 20 years, will suit the child. I wouldn't change this for the world. Would you?

Yes, I suppose that if a child is adopted in infancy, there may be more of a feeling, in the beginning, that the baby is your own. Yet 10 years later the difference may have become very slight, or even not have occurred itself. You'll be surprised at how quickly any child can become your own, whether you start taking care of him at the age of a few weeks or at the age of a few years.

The adoption agencies, since they can do some picking and choosing, try to select parents of ethnic background to match that of the child. Why put a blue-eyes, fairskinned child in the household of people who are olive-skinned? Or vice versa? But beyond that, you take your chances on any child you adopt — child—and that, in fact, is more than you can count on with your own child. How many children with defects are born to perfectly average parents — and deeply loved in spite of these defects, or even because of them? I know of some foster parents who have purposely adopted youngsters with physical defects and have had them corrected. Or spent great love in teaching these children how to get along despite defects.

Remember the Biblical story of the one lost sheep? The thought is old but human nature hasn't changed much.

A child's temperament will be shaped essentially by environment. Adopted children, brought up with love, will have a good disposition. But a child, adopted or natural, will be warped if unwanted or brought up in the midst of bickering.

As a general rule, it is probably preferable, for baby and foster parents alike, to adopt when the child is very young, but the right age is any age — when you want to adopt the child.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have cold hands at the slightest bit of chilly weather. Could this be due to poor circulation? — A. B. G.

It could be — but might not be. There are one or two blood ailments (not very common) which cause the blood to thicken so the slightest coolness, or, in a way, poor circulation, because the thickening of the blood interferes. But the point is that poor circulation, in the ordinary sense, is not the only cause of such a complaint.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is dietary sodium sulfonecinate safe to use for relief of constipation? — L. L.

Yes. It is one of the best medications available, and used in a dozen or more preparations. Technically it acts by attracting moisture.

Farmers Believers

Growing Flowers

Somehow through the years I've accepted or believed that farmers are kind of lazy farmers who are atheists. At least during my lifetime and my travels I have never yet met a farmer who is either an atheist or an agnostic. Nor do I believe that farmers are great church-goers. I would suspect that they don't need to go to church but, like Christ, they found that they could worship the Lord out in the open beneath the heavens.

Farmers are the true believers. They are those who have faith enough in any of any class of people on earth. What else do they have by which to live? They know that the sun will rise at a given time and that it will set at a specified hour. They know that in spite of the mounds of ice and snow, spring will come and all will be green and serene once again.

The farmer has learned through the ages not to depend upon his fellow man, upon governments, princes or kings, but

Ottawa Offbeat
Overwork Natural Hazard Of Prime Minister's Post

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — In 48 hours, Prime Minister Pearson and Conservative Leader Diefenbaker, their 10-day Easter recess done, return to Parliamentary duty.

It should be interesting to see what, if any good, their working-vacation did them.

For both men, in recent months, have begun showing the wear and tear of their high-pressure lives of crushing responsibility.

The Conservative leader three times has been out of action with flu.

The prime minister has had two colds.

His job, probably the nation's most exacting in the unrelenting obligation it imposes, has not always been this punishing.

For it has only been in postwar years that Big Government has made what now are year-round demands on Parliament.

This makes it a double load for both leaders, with the business of Government administration to occupy them simultaneously with the legislative demands of Parliament.

In Mackenzie King's days, it can be said with eye-witness authority, the Parliamentary year was less than half as long . . . usually four, or at most, five months.

And the national Establishment here in the Capital was small — smaller by far than either the Ontario, Quebec or possibly the British Columbia provincial governments are now — and so, the responsibility of leadership that much lighter.

OLD BEFORE TIME

Then Mackenzie King was a bachelor, a mystic of sorts and a bit of a dictator, so could shut out the world that much more readily.

And he had Kingsmere, in the Gatineau Hills, a sort of prime minister's retreat where he could, and frequently did retire to restore himself.

But even so, the job killed him. We eye-witnesses of the Press saw the old man's mane a year after his retirement in 1948, his health broken beyond repair.

The job made an old man before his time of former Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent who came to this highest of responsibilities in the prime of his vigor.

And "Uncle Louis" had his retreat-for-restoration, too, down at St. Patrick on the south St. Lawrence shore, where he retired summers to rest and reflect.

But it took only six years, and the kindly, courteous St. Laurent, shaken and shaking, snowy of hair, uncertain of both health and spirit, retired.

John Diefenbaker was next to rely upon his own two hands and his broad back. Farmers are seldom overworked. They are invariably leaders . . . even though they be not orators and lack the gift of language possessed by Cicero and Démosthenes. They made deeds count. They made few other way around. He must farm because it is in his heart and his soul.

One of the things he knew is wrong with our world today is that there are too few farmers and too many city developers, sites, beggars and city dwellers. A farmer — a good farmer — doesn't have time to meddle in other people's affairs. He doesn't have time to fight and quarrel with his neighbor. He doesn't have time to devote to soldiering. The care of his fields and his flocks takes up his waking hours. And that again is just the rhyme and the reason for the trouble with our world today . . . people have too much idle time on their hands.

And if ever a man took on this self-destroying national assignment at the peak of his powers, physical and mental, it was he.

But again it took just six years and the black cockade of crinkly hair was white, his fast and firm step slowing, his ram-rod posture bowing and his whole being shaking with tension.

He had his retreat, too. At Harrington Lake in the Gatineau, for relaxation.

And he made a real thing of trying to keep fit.

There was a formula.

Sleep: to bed by 10, up by five.

Diet: careful calorie counting.

Exercise: daily two-mile walk with the dog.

NO TIME FOR ILLNESS

Now it is that old semi-pro league baseball player and physical fitness fan, Lester Pearson going through the prime ministerial meat-grinder, and not finding it much easier than those who went before him.

He, too, has his formula for physical well-being.

It is balance, moderation — not too much, not too little of anything — exercise, recreation, relaxation, sleep.

Not too much of anything, except work.

And as it did with the others, the overload is beginning to take its toll. You can see it in the slump into which he sometimes slips in the Commons. See it in the head resting on the palm. See it in the wilt of weariness.

Of all people, a prime minister has no time for illness. Things won't wait. The world whirls on and with it spins the nation, usually in crisis, seldom in calm. And the prime minister must contrive to appear outwardly confident at all times no matter what inward misgivings he may have.

So he can't afford the flu, or even a cold.

He may feel like having an ulcer or heart attack, and if he seldom does — why he doesn't, he probably realizes there's not time for such non-essentials in a prime minister's frantic 16-to-18-hour day.

This is the place the buck stops, and Harry Truman, and Harry Truman, And a Canadian prime minister, in truth, could say just about the same.

To take off a bit of the pressure, Truman played the piano and poker and sipped bourbon and branch water. Eisenhower golfed. Kennedy sunned at Palm Beach and sailed off Cape Cod. King loafed at Kingsmere. St. Laurent summered, swimming at St. Patrick. Diefenbaker fished and walked. Pearson hikes, swims, fishes, and takes his ease at the same Harrington Lake lodge.

But it is not enough — not for prime ministers, anyway.

Just look what's happened to them. There has to be some better, fuller, more complete release, and more often, from the killing pressure. But how and what?

CLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

Consolidation of small factories indicated five or six cheese per day into larger units to take advantage of lower operational costs and to increase quality of product, was advocated before cheese maker members of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association here at their annual spring conference.

Speaking before some 80 members present Thursday morning, the director of dairying for Ontario indicated that much of the lower quality cheese being produced in Ontario today was from those small factories which are operating in many instances with antiquated equipment. Larger units were needed with modern equipment and labor saving devices he said.

Considerable progress, up to a point, had been made in regard to consolidation of small cheese factories in the Prescott area, it was stated. Farmers had shown an interest in the operation of larger cheese making units but had baulked at the idea of buying two or three small factories and then dismantling them in favor of construction of one large factory.

Mr. Charles T. Dolan was the special speaker at a recent meeting of the Rotary Club in Bradford, Pa. The visit of Mr. Dolan to Bradford, Pa., was the result of an attendance contest between the Belleville Club and the Bradford Club, the agreement being that the loser was to supply a special speaker at a luncheon of the winning club upon demand. The Bradford Club won and recently asked that a special speaker be supplied for a certain date. The Belleville Club selected Mr. Dolan.

Dr. R. W. Tennent and Dr. J. Scott will leave this week to attend a medical convention in Philadelphia, Pa.

Student Exchanges Afford Chance to Learn French

DEAR DORIS — Could you tell us about summer work in Quebec? My girl friend and I are 17. We thought that if we could learn the French language more thoroughly, and earn some money at the same time, it would be ideal. — WANT TO WORK.

DORIS CLARE

DEAR WANT — How about looking into the student-exchange visits? It's paid work, but a wonderful way to learn French and get to know some fine French Canadians.

During July approximately 2,000 students — half French-speaking and half English-speaking — will be involved in exchange visits to Quebec and other Canadian provinces. Two weeks are spent in a Quebec home; then the French-speaking student in the home returns to the English-speaking home for two weeks. Adult supervisors travel with students to their destinations.

The visiting student is treated like a member of the family, helped to learn the language, taken on tours, picnics, service club outings. Those who have gone describe this as "two weeks they will never forget."

The only cost to the student is for transportation and ten dollars spending money. For further information ask your principal or write to the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews, 229 Yonge Street, Toronto.

DEAR DORIS —

(1) My steady boy friend is terribly jealous and doesn't trust me. No matter how hard I try, I cannot convince him that he is the only one. What should I do?

(2) How long do you think an engagement should be if a couple have been going steady for two and a half to three years.

(3) Do you think a Protestant and Catholic could make a successful marriage?

(4) Do you think it would hurt for two people to go steady for a long period of time even though neither is serious?

(5) If a girl and boy are planning on getting married, do you think it would be all right to experiment in the sexual aspect of love? — H.A.L.

DEAR HAL —

(1) Such jealousy indicates to me he lacks the poise to have a steady. I'd suggest you work at convincing him he is not the only one. By making it true.

(2) Depends on age of couple. If they are now just 18, at least two years. If over 20, a year or so.

(3) Has been done; but the odds are against it.

(4) Yes. Each prevents the other from forming more fruitful friendships.

(5) No. Better they should experiment is discovering more important things about each other, such as a common interest in books, or badminton, or psychology.

Europe, U. S. Exchange TV Via 'Early Bird'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Early Bird communications satellite and its associated ground stations demonstrated Friday their ability to handle transatlantic television traffic.

From its stationary position 22,300 miles above the Atlantic, between Brazil and Africa, the spacecraft relayed live and filmed television transactions simultaneously, both ways, between stations in the United States and Europe for a series of experiments lasting about six hours.

"The pictures were of good quality and demonstrated capability of two-way space television without loss of clarity or performance," the Communications Satellite Corporation reported.

The tests were designed to allow spacecraft and ground equipment in preparation for an hour-long, inaugural transatlantic TV program May 2.

Canada is building a ground station to work with Early Bird at Mill Village, N.S., 30 miles southwest of Halifax. It is expected to be put into service on an experimental basis this fall.

at a balanced budget? Should tax cuts be implemented to spur the economy? Should such general cuts be bypassed in favor of more incentives for particular areas? Should there be more encouragement to Canadian investors, or more discouragement to foreign investors? What will be the full economic and political implications of the changes?

Mr. Gordon no doubt attaches a great deal of importance to the final question. After his first budget, he was forced to withdraw certain tax measures in the face of blistering criticism.

For a time it was widely speculated that his days were numbered as finance minister. But this talk faded out long ago.

Secrecy has always been given top priority in preparation of budgets. Few politicians forget that in 1947 Britain's Chancellor of the exchequer, Hugh Dalton, was forced to resign when some details of his budget speech became known in advance.

Common Weed May Affect Birth Control

ATHENS, Ohio (AP) — A chemical that appears to offer hope for a cheap birth-control pill was found in "a common American weed," a scientist said Friday.

Dr. Henry Vallowe, professor of endocrinology at Ohio University here, amplified for the Ohio Academy of Science Friday an earlier report on his work with the contraceptive material.

But he designated it only as "C-18" and declined to go beyond his description of it as a common weed, found frequently in North America but also elsewhere.

Dr. Vallowe said preliminary tests have shown no obvious dangerous or abnormal side-effects, although "you can't ask a rat if he has a headache."

MR. AND MRS. GARRY LEONARD WOOD

Wood – Horlock

Tabernacle United Church, Belleville was the scene of a lovely wedding recently when Joanne Marie Horlock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Horlock of Belleville was united in marriage to Garry Leonard Wood, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wood, also of Belleville. Rev. M. G. MacFarlane minister of the church officiated before a background of white and blue tinted baby mums mingled with Easter lilies. Each of the guest pews was designated with a white satin bow.

Mr. Clifford Templer rendered traditional wedding music and accompanied the soloist Mr. Murdock McFarlane in selections, previous to the ceremony and during the signing of the register.

The bride given in marriage by her father wore a floor length bridal gown of silver lame with the bodice featuring a round split neckline and long sleeves. A full length train edged with lace flowed from a corocet of rhinestones and she carried a bouquet of red roses interspersed with stephanotis.

The bridal attendants, Miss Anita Neilliter as maid of honor and the three bridesmaids Miss Nancy Wood, sister of the bridegroom, Miss Deanna Dulmage and Miss Patti Jones were identically attired in pastel blue chiffon street length dresses with the front of the skirts outlined with blue lace embroidery from the waist to the hemline. Their headdresses were miniature pillboxes of matching material topped with matching veils and each carried a colonial bouquet of baby white and blue mums.

The bridegroom's attendant and ushers were dressed in formal wear consisting of striped trousers, dark jackets and grey vests, and were, Mr. Robert Spafford of Toronto as groomsmen and Mr. Don Wood brother of the bridegroom, Mr. Barry Sickels, and Mr. John Horlock, brother of the bride as ushers.

The reception for approximately 90 guests was held at the Sun Valley Motor Hotel where the bride's table was centred with a three-tier wedding cake topped with miniature bride and bridegroom. The bride's mother received the guests wearing a pastel pink chiffon dress with flowing train, matching chiffon ruffled hat, pink accessories with grey mink stole and a corsage of white roses. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother who wore a beige double knit suit, a beige and green flower ed hat with green, beige accessories and a corsage of Orange Delight roses.

For the honeymoon trip for a week's vacation in Florida the bride chose a white wool suit with royal blue accessories and a tinted to match gardenia corsage.

Guests were present from Clinton, Toronto, Peterborough, Westbrook, Napanee, Oakville, Perth, Kingston and Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. Wood will reside at the Midtown Apartments, 271 John Street, Belleville.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES EDWIN COOPER

Cooper – Dickens

Easter lillies and ferns flanked by tall standards of white gladioli and chrysanthemums formed a lovely background setting in Bridge Street United Church, Belleville on Saturday, April 19, when Frances Anne Dickens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Dickenson Belleville R.R. 5 was united in marriage to James Edwin Cooper, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Cooper, Burlington, Ontario.

Rev. H. M. Davis, minister of the church officiated and traditional wedding music was rendered by Mr. Alec Gordon who also accompanied the soloist, Miss Margaret Millis in appropriate renditions.

The bride, given in marriage by her father wore a floor-length Empire style sheath of white organza over taffeta, highlighted with a flowing train bordered with lace. The waistline was accented with a band of guipure lace with the short sleeves having lace extending to the bow. A bouffant tulle veile billowed from a taffeta pillbox headdress. She carried a cascade bouquet consisting of a solitaire white orchid encircled with clusters of stephanotis and trailing ivy.

Miss Linda Muir of Ottawa as maid of honor and the bridesmaid Miss Lu Ann Stock of Belleville, cousin of the bride were identically attired in street-length dresses of aqua silk organza over taffeta. The A-line skirts were enhanced with Empire style waistlines and the elbow-length sleeves were edged with organza ruffles. Each carried a bouquet of deep pink carnations.

Mr. Michael Samyluk of Hamilton attended the bridegroom, while Mr. Edward Willard a cousin of the bridegroom and Mr. Ronald Dickens, brother of the bride were the ushers.

A reception was held at the Tops Motor Hotel where the bride's table was covered with a three-tier wedding cake, decorated with pink roses and bluebirds made by the bride's father. Tapering candles and the bridal bouquets lent colorful accent to the nuptial setting.

The bride's mother received the guests wearing a white lace over willow green taffeta dress with matching green shoes and white tulle hat, and a corsage of pink Sweetheart roses. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother who wore a turquoise silk linen dress with matching coat trimmed with white beading, a white organza hat with band of turquoise and a corsage of deep pink carnations.

THE BEAUTIFUL HARBOR OF CASTRIES, the principal city of St. Lucia in the West Indies, is a popular port of call for cruise ships.

World-weary Tourists Find St. Lucia Truly Delightful

By SHIRLEY and BOB SLOANE

ST. LUCIA, West Indies— We are delighted to report that, of all Caribbean islands, St. Lucia seems to be the only one ready to admit that Columbus never discovered it.

Comparatively few tourists have either, thanks in part to this lack of pretension. Oh, the Tourist Board will drop a few names like Admiral Carney and DuPont and Madame D'Oyly Carte here and there, but as everyone knows, they live in secluded splendor, on inaccessible bays or high in the steep jagged mountains lining the coasts above surf-washed beaches and half-forgotten fishing villages, all of it far from the tourist hustle and bustle.

What tourist hustle and bustle? A couple of years ago Caribbean Hotels built its plush 70-room St. Lucia Beach Hotel on a palm-fringed South Sea a strait facing Pigeon Island, where in 1782, the British vanquished a French fleet on its way to vanquish the British in New York harbor.

Until the St. Lucia Beach, hardy tourists stayed in places like the mountainside Anse-la-Raye Hotel, where the shutters open onto soaring views of the harbor at Castries, bougainvillea tumbles over the stone walls of the one-time mansion, and if novelist Alec Waugh ("Island in the Sun") didn't design the place, he at least stays there when he's in town.

If all this sounds like the place where the world-weary executive goes to listen to his arteries soften and his sinuses dry out, well it is. St. Lucia is whatever unspoiled means.

CLAIMS TO DISTINCTION

Lying just east of Martinique in the heart of the great chain of volcanic islands known as the Lesser Antilles, it has a number of refreshingly original claims to distinction — besides the fact that Columbus didn't discover it — that we have been jotting down avidly.

For example, the British and French fought so cordially over the fine harbor at Castries that the island changed hands 14 times before Napoleon bowed out and the Union Jack went up for good.

In one non-battle, (the story may be apocryphal) the British General at Marigot Bay, lured the superior French fleet to depart by attaching a palm fronds to their masts; French thought there was no one there but us palm trees.

Castries, a hodge-podge of antiquated gingerbread buildings with red corrugated roofs, is the only capital in the West Indies named after a person, Marshal de Castries (that's what we said, who?). The island has been British for a century and half, but 90 percent of the population is Catholic and speaks Creole, nearly all the place names are French.

The aforementioned Marigot Bay is today the site of several discreetly rich men's homes backed out of mangrove swamps as well as two of the most getaway - from - it - all hotels in the islands.

YACHT HAVEN

Yacht Haven has only five deluxe cottages, all of which ought to be occupied by honeymooners; a pool; a trackless beach; and about the best cuisine on the island.

Across the bay is the Marigot des Roseaux Club and Hotel, with a dozen modest villas, a sun terrace and bar-lounge overlooking the waters, and a barefoot bartender who makes the best rum punches in the islands. Mike Brandt, the bearded young manager, and his wife, decided to settle here after sailing across the world from Hong Kong in a Chinese junk. It is still anchored in the bay, available for charter.

The Tourist Board considers the shipbuoious and ugly pits near Soufriere, on the southwest coast, a tourist attraction. But for...more interesting is the jocular country and village life of St. Lucia to be observed along the way.

Among the steep tropic-garbed mountains, beyond the valleys thick with the banana and coconut plantations that are the economy of the island (not tourists and predatory taxi drivers), there still live, around isolated Anse la Verdure, the bloodish, blue-eyed Negroes who are descendants of early French indentured servants. Here breadfruit, bananas and lush mangoes grow in such wild profusion that, falling unpicked and rotting, they often make the highways slippery.

And in all tropical lands, an endless procession of country people pites the roads . . . dignified black ladies in jaunty weekend flowered straws or topknotted cheesecloth kerchiefs balance jugs or bananas on their heads with insoffable African grace. Bright-eyed children, naked and half-naked, peddle wild gooseberries or beg a penny from anybody who looks mean and wave anyway when ignored.

BIKINIS MISSING

In villages like Canaries and Anse la Raye, the smooth white beaches are strung with fishing nets instead of bikinis. Gaily painted and pompously christened bus-trucks cart overloads of passengers, fish and soft drinks between anywhere and Castries for a dollar.

Steel and music unknown in other West Indian isles survive in St. Lucia. A-bees, a fete of obscure origin, involves drinking rum, eating peppermint, and singing ballads of medieval French origin, the meanings of which are as forgotten by all as the archaic French words.

Equally obscure are the origins of the flower festivals, their cult-like societies, and the song allusions to 18th century English and French history. Even a quasi-Christian form of voodoo survives, along with other African rituals, songs and dances.

But the visitor is less likely to see or remember these than the spectacular scenery of St. Lucia. The two pointed peaks called Gros Piton and Petit Piton rise straight from the sea alongside Soufriere's beach. Atop scenic Morne Fortune, Ft. Charlotte's abandoned redoubts, barracks and sentry boxes are now overgrown with the jungles of time. Few remember whether they were British or French.

Tourists and cruise passengers will come and go, and a few more millionaires will build their private, half-secret developments in the mountains. But somehow, it seems as if it will be a long time before the sight of Pan Am's four times-a-week DC-7's swooping onto the runway at Choc Bay be anything but incongruous.

READERS' SATURDAY COLUMN

QUESTION:

Several years back my mother used to make a delicious one called Mystery Cake, it consisted of three layers. Part of it was a light batter and the other part was chocolate. When it was baked it looked like a marble cake. It had an orange icing and this was also used as a filling. It was found in a small book about the size of an Almanac which advertised either royal baking powder or magic baking powder. When we moved it got lost somehow. Perhaps some of your readers may have it. I do enjoy your columns and never miss it . . . M. R.

ANSWER:

The only cake recipe that I have which uses the word "mystery" in the name calls for tomato soup and since this is not what you are after. I can give you the recipe for Marble Cake — Super is desired — and for Orange Icing, if you care to write again. Readers, please come to our rescue if you know the Mystery Cake recipe M. R. is seeking. Write it out in careful detail and send it to me in care of this newspaper.

Dinner Menu

Veal Paprika; Potato Pancakes; Succotash; Iceberg Lettuce with Roquefort Dressing; Shredded Fresh Pineapple; Golden Cocoanut Macaroons (see Friday); Tea.

QUESTION:

I thought it was simple to make Cole Slaw Dressing but when I combined oil and vinegar and seasonings it wasn't right. Could you give me the right proportions? . . . Estelle S.

ANSWER:

Genuine old-fashioned cole slaw dressing has boiled dressing as a base. I will repeat the recipe for boiled dressing and then give the method of making cole slaw dressing from it.

BOILED SALAD DRESSING (repeated from Jan. 16/61):

2 tablespoons cornstarch, 1½ teaspoons dry mustard, 1¼ teaspoons salt, ½ teaspoon paprika, ¾ cup granulated sugar, 1 egg yolk, 1/3 cup milk, 1½ cups warm milk, ½ cup vinegar.

In a heavy saucepan combine cornstarch, seasonings and sugar and blend well. Add egg yolk beaten well with the 1/3 cup milk. Add warm milk slowly and then the vinegar, a small amount at a time. Mix well. It will appear curdled before it is completely cooked. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, about 5 minutes after it comes to simmering point. Remove from heat; beat for a few seconds with spoon or egg beater. Let stand until cool. Store in tightly covered jar. If it is too thick when you use it, add a little milk or vinegar to a small amount and mix well.

COLE SLAW DRESSING:

To ½ cup boiled salad dressing (above) add 1 teaspoon French mustard, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1 teaspoon scraped onion, 1 tablespoon vinegar, 6 tablespoons cream.

Teenagers Need Discipline For Their Own Protection

DEAR ANN LANDERS — What do you think of a 19-year-old boy who announces to his parents that he is going to do just as he pleases. Then when they attempt to reason with him he sticks his fingers in his ears and says, "I can't hear a thing you are saying so you might as well save your breath."

ANN LANDERS

My husband and I are beside ourselves. Our friends' children do not speak to their parents the way this boy talks to us. What is wrong with him anyway?

Please print this letter and your advice. We need your help. — NOTHING SACRED IN SACRAMENTO.

DEAR NOTHING SACRED — You need more help than I can provide. A 19-year-old boy who reacts to discipline in such an infantile (not to mention disrespectful) manner is beyond your reach — and mine, too.

He did not get out of hand overnight, and he cannot be changed overnight. I hope you will get professional help — for example in the Y.M.C.A. offers an excellent counseling program. Your son does not want to be infantile and disrespectful. Often such rebelliousness is a plea to parents. Translated it means, "Please make me behave!" But parents don't get the message.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My fiancee and I are planning a spring wedding. Sue's parents will be meeting my parents for the first time next month. Sue's parents are giving a party for my family and our closest friends.

I have been told that cocktails will be served at the party and that the father of the bride will toast us with champagne.

My parents and several others who will be present do not approve of alcohol. I am afraid they will be ill at ease. Do I have the right to ask Sue's parents not to serve liquor at the party?— KNOTTY PROBLEM.

DEAR KNOTTY — No, you do not. I applaud your parents' position with respect to alcohol, but you should not attempt to force others to conform to their way of thinking.

If your finances does not know of your parents' views on alcohol, she should be told. She should pass the word to her parents. If they decide to serve liquor anyway, remain silent. I assume, of course, soft drinks will be available for those who want them.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Jim and I were separated several months ago but reconciled before the divorce became final. Recently I learned Jim is still seeing the girl he was dating during our separation. She is single, just fair looking, and about my age.

I phoned her and made a date to "talk." Our visit was most unsatisfactory. I asked her not to see Jim unless he moved from our home. She said, "I will see Jim whenever I get the chance. If you can't hold your man it is your problem, not mine."

Jim begged me to be patient and made it clear that he doesn't want to move out of the house. He is a good father to our four children. I dread the thought of another agonizing period of separation. Now I find myself asking you the same question I have asked myself a dozen times this week. What should I do? — JO ANN.

DEAR JO ANN — I wish you had written to me before you went visiting. I would have told you to stay home. A wife who asks the other woman to "lay off" degrades herself.

Now you must carry on as if you were the only female in the world. This means no cheating, no third-degree, no accusations. Be pleasant, relaxed, and fight fire with fire. Or, to put it bluntly, turn on the heat.

Unsure of yourself on dates? What's right? What's wrong? Should you? Shouldn't you? Send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Dating Do's and Dont's," enclosing with your request 35c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Bridge Street Church Choir Will Present 'The Creation'

An anticipated musical event of significance will be the forthcoming complete performance of Joseph Haydn's Oratorio "The Creation," by Bridge Street United Church choir under the direction of Robert Reid next Monday.

Although there are actually five solo roles—The Archangels, Gabriel, Uriel and Raphael, and Adam and Eve, in performances there are only three parts since the two soprano solos of Gabriel and Eve can be sung by one voice.

Hazelanne Retz, well known soprano of this city will take the leading role for that voice. Having appeared in the past on both CBC television and radio in Oratorio work with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra this style of music is ideally suited to her lovely lyrical voice. Baritone William Percy will sing the two bass parts of Raphael and Adam. He, too, has appeared with the Toronto Symphony and is at present living in Lindsay, occupying the position of church organist there. The voice of Uriel will be sung by the CBC television and radio personality, Thomas Clarke who has had leading roles in Canadian opera as well as having been a soloist in the Mendelssohn choir.

Featured in the accompanying roles will be the Eastern Ontario String Quartet, an offshoot of the Eastern Concert Orchestra. The four players are Stephen Choma, conductor of the aforementioned orchestra, Mrs. Marion Stratton, concertmaster of the same orchestra, William Grant and Joachim Reimann. Mr. Grant comes from Halloway while the other members of the quartet are local musicians. Mrs. James Benore of Campbellford will take the tympani scorings, this instrument being an integral part of all 18th century religious opt to reinforce the bass and punctuate the rhythmic structure.

The organ will be played by Mr. S. Alec Gordon, well known Belleville organist who has held the post of church organist at Bridge Street United Church for over a quarter of a century.

Conservation of Heirlooms

By LENNY WILLIAMSON

IVORY AND BONE

Few of us have precious Chinese ivories to worry about, but almost everyone has either a necklace of Chinese beads, an Eskimo carving, or an upright piano with ivory keys.

Ivory and bone, although they come from animals, act like wood. They have a grain like wood, and warp when exposed to excessive water and heat. Like wood, they get darker with age. The yellow tint of old ivory is admired by connoisseurs, so don't fight it, learn to like it. Any bleaching process is temporary and destructive.

Good ivory needs very little care — just dusting and occasional washing. The chief enemy is acid, so that outlaws suggested cleaners like lemon juice and milk.

Fingers leave an acid deposit on piano keys. To remove this invisible layer of perspiration and oil, wipe the keys once a week with absorbent cotton slightly dampened with alcohol. Grandmother use to keep a bottle of rubbing alcohol and a rag hidden behind the metronome for the purpose. It's still a good practice to follow.

Although water is hard on ivory and bone, occasional washing is harmless as long as water isn't left on the material long enough to soak in. Wash as you would a piece of furniture. Use soft water, if possible, and a mild detergent. The name of the detergent used in museums, and sold by a major Canadian drug store chain, will be supplied on request. Barely dampen the surface with the washing solution and wipe dry immediately.

Chipped and broken ivory can be glued with cellulose acetate cement. The name of an easily obtained brand will be given on request.

These remarks on the care of ivory and bone also apply to other animal products such as horn, tortoise-shell, jet, mother of pearl and coral. Acids dissolve them all and water must be used sparingly.

Amber jewelery can be washed safely, but never use alcohol on it. Amber is a plastic resin, manufactured ill nature instead of in a chemical plant. Some amber, like some modern plastics, is highly soluable in alcohol.

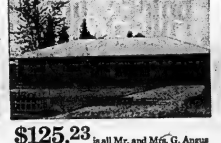
Electric heating costs far less than you may think

$130.70 is all Mr. and Mrs. J. Reist, of Ayton, near Walkerton, Ontario paid last year to heat their three-bedroom home, including the basement. "If we were building another home," says Mr. Reist, "it would be electrically heated because of the low operating cost and the comfort."



$161.28 is all Mr. and Mrs. MacLellan of Hanmer, near Sudbury, Ontario paid last year to heat their six-room house. "Our cost is below our neighbours' who have an identical-size home with another kind of heating," says Mrs. MacLellan. "We'll never go back to any other system."

$117.56 is all Mr. and Mrs. B.R. Warnica paid last year to heat their 1200 sq. ft. home in Grimsby, Ontario. "It's even less than the estimate Hydro gave us," says Mrs. Warnica. "We like it because it's quiet, gentle heat. You never hear it."

$214.27 is all Mr. and Mrs. R. Moyer paid last year to heat their 2345 sq. ft. home in Woodstock, Ontario. "We're very happy with the cost," says Mrs. Moyer. "We would definitely put electric heating in if we built again," adds Mr. Moyer.

$125.23 is all Mr. and Mrs. G. Angus of Scarborough, Ontario paid last year to heat their six-room house. "I'd never go back to any other system now," says Mrs. Angus. "We are very comfortable and it's so economical it's just fantastic!"

$127.69 is all Mr. and Mrs. M. Pal paid last year to heat their home in Maitland, near Brockville, Ontario. "Hydro rates have dropped twice since we installed electric heating," says Mr. Pal. "The complete lack of maintenance saves us money, too," adds Mrs. Pal.

Electrically heated homes, insulated to Hydro standards, cost no more to heat than homes with other systems.

Flameless electric heating is dependable, safe, and completely clean, since there is no combustion to produce dust, dirt, film or soot. No wonder so many people are turning to electric heating for the comfort, cleanliness and economy they want in a heating system.

Electric heating is one of the many features of the famous Medallion all-electric homes. For full information, consult a qualified electric heating contractor, or your Hydro.

ELECTRIC HEATING FOR YOUR PRESENT HOME

If you are planning home extensions or if parts of your home are not now properly heated, you can install supplementary electric heating for less than it costs to extend your present heating system.

A Lift for Living

Man of Faith Spends Freely Of All Things Good in Life

By REV. HAROLD E. KOHN

Now is mid-spring, the trees of North America awaken to the call of returning birds and to the choruses of spring peepers singing in the marshes. Sap rises, bringing renewed life to each tree, like blood recommencing circulation in a numb leg that has "gone to sleep."

The tender light of April has coaxed green leaves from the dark buds lining barren limbs. Hills have removed their heavy, white winter coats and have put on light scarves of green. City parks and countrysides are freshened with an emerald mist that has settled on the treetops.

All across the land orchards clothe their naked branches with a superabundance of leaves. Horticulturalists estimate that it takes 30 leaves to make a bone than apple and 50 to produce a big delicious apple. (About 10 leaves are required to make a large peach.) However, mature apple trees will be equipped with about 100,000 leaves apiece many more than each tree will need to produce flowers or buds or to work at lifting out of the earth four gallons of water per tree each hour.

This abundance of reserve leaves is to make the tree adequate to cope with crisis. Succulent leaves will attract many insects. The caterpillars of moths, butterflies, sawflies and beetles will attack and consume foliage, reducing the tree's capacity for manufacturing food. So each healthy tree produces a total leaf surface that is far greater than its anticipated need, so that if a considerable portion of its leaves are destroyed, the tree can still survive.

NATURE'S WAY

All through nature a tendency can be found to produce reserves. Quail, pheasants, ducks and other ground-nesting birds lay more eggs than are necessary to perpetuate their race, so that if some eggs are destroyed by marauding crows or plundering skunks or mink, enough will survive to produce a small family. A female brook trout may lay 5,000 eggs to assure the preservation of the species, since some eggs will be infertile and many young will be prey to other fish and will not live to see their first birthday. Nature insists upon reserves to assure continuation of the race.

When man is wise, he too plans upon an abundance of reserves. Merely enough strength to "get by" will never do. When the cables were built to support the weight of the San Francisco-Oakland bridge, they were fashioned with a capability of bearing a load two and one - half times as great as the maximum they would ever be called upon to bear. That is the way to handle all of life. All bridge builders should provide more strength in their structures than they will ever need. All scholars should know more about their subject than any examination will demand. Every long-distance runner needs a "second wind"; a reservoir of energy to draw upon when other men's power wanes. A healthy person is one who has more physical reserves than any active day can drain and more than life's crises can exhaust.

What we all greatly need is not a diminishing of problems, but an increase in adequacy. Speaking of His disciples, Jesus said, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." Abundant life is no mere "hand to mouth" existance with barely enough caring, forgiveness, patience and love to get by. Abundance of spiritual life means more than enough power for common daily needs, plus inexhaustible reserves for any crisis that may confront us.

RESOURCES PLENTIFUL

The person who has the abundance of life Christ came to bring us can spend virtue lavishly because his resources are plentiful. He can care for people unreservedly, the people near him and all over the earth, people of his own creed, color and nationality and those of other faiths, races and nations, because his resources of care are attached to the limitless reservoirs of God's care.

He can afford to be slighted, shunned, hurt, because he has enough forgiveness in his heart for any crisis that comes his way.

He can be patient when other men's patience is exhausted because he not only has his own patience to draw upon, but God's patience too.

He can squander love upon the undeserving and unresponsive because he knows there will always be more love where the last love came from.

An English poet and essayist, while pleasantly talkative among close friends, was reserved among strangers and casual acquaintances. When a woman complained that he did not seem to engage in conversation, he replied, "I have only sixpence in ready money in my pocket, but I can draw a cheque for a thousand pounds!" He refused to put all his wisdom in a showcase. He had much in reserve.

The Christian faith is one of abundant resources. The man of faith does not need to count on little bits of coin in his spiritual pockets. He can write a cheque for any amount needed on the account of "God and Company." That account is inexhaustible.

Television Holds Dangers for Impressionable Youngsters

By Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg

"Son," said a sad father to his four-year old, "I'm sorry to tell you that your grandmother has died."

"Who shot her?" the tyke shot back, unblinking.

Sick jokes like these abound, levelling barbed criticism at the violent contents of television. While the contents are often disturbing and distracting, not enough attention has been paid to the possible damage to our children — in the form, itself. . .

We ought to be more aware than we are of what persistent TV-watching can do to a child's ability to relate properly — to real people and to real life-situations. Too often his real world is sharply reduced to the size of the TV screen — he thinks and acts primarily in terms of its stereotyped characters.

TV as a way of life — and not merely its contents — can turn young children into mere receivers of its unreal signals. Listening passively to a stream of verbal communications coming at him from "nowhere," and "sophisticated" TV personalities can make it quite difficult for a child to respond to the real persons around him. Clearly, it is difficult for parents and teachers to compete with skilled actors in arousing genuine sentiments and feelings. Emotional isolation from the day-to-day events in his real world can develop in the child who has been watching "television" much, too early. Instead of facing life directly, he may tend to retreat into the world of fantasy, the only world he has been prepared for — and only passively, at that.

Despite the different titles, actors, producers or sponsors, so much in TV is so depressingly predictable: westerners look like internes or doctors, and psychiatrists look like space-age cartoon characters. The sequences fall into neat patterns, all of which are carefully explained by wise thespian asides or by wisened masters of ceremonies. The TV child is conditioned to simple and emphatic solutions, even if they often seem unpalatable to more adult minds.

Life's experiences are infinitely more complicated than all of this, and the drama, suspense and exhilaration surrounding a real problem-solving are pale by comparison with the tales of television. What is more: in life, there is no benevolent, cozy or sour master of ceremonies, at the end, who comes on to explain what we have just seen or been through. Overexposure to TV can make our children too dependent upon easy answers to thorny questions; or too easily discouraged when they cannot quickly puzzle their problems out their own. Over-conditioned by TV to getting all the right and predictable solutions — just by listening — they may be too soft to seek the hard answers their own lives will require.

Note to parents: Don't rush to throw out your TV set. Learn, instead, to pull your youngster away from it long enough to enter into significant life-situations of their own. And life, above all: stay with them yourselves, long enough, in between your own TV programs.

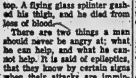
"THE TENDEREST MEAT YOU EVER THAW"

Lighting The Way



By Walter S. Crone

WHAT PRICE TEMPER? From Singapore comes news of a 32 year old labourer, who died as the result of a fit of temper. Having been reprimanded by his employer for not delivering about 30 cents worth of sand to a customer, he picked up a chair and smashed a glass table top. A flying glass splinter gashed his thigh, and he died from loss of blood.—

There are two things a man should never be angry at: what he can help, and what he cannot help. It is said of epileptics, that they know by certain signs when their attacks are imminent, and they take precautions accordingly. We should do the same in regard to anger.

Losing our tempers or, lack of self-control, is always costly. We may not kill ourselves or others but we will lose our self-respect. Medical science tells us that a fit of anger releases adrenalin into the blood stream and poisons it. Therefore, we must pay for anger in terms of ill-health. People everyday, are losing their positions because of anger. His grace is for all of us who want it. St. Paul said, "the fruit of the Spirit is self-control".

TEXT FOR THE DAY: — "He that is soon angry dealeth foolishly." (Proverbs 16:17)

U.S. Officials See Signs Viet Nam War Is Widening Gulf Between Russia, China

WASHINGTON (AP)—U.S. officials see some signs that the growing strains and dangers of the war in Viet Nam are widening the split between Russia and China—instead of pushing them into a tighter common front against the United States.

The situation is similar in some respects to the growing rift between the United States and France over the Southeast Asian war. An important difference seems to be, however, that the western allies, being loosely organized in the first place, seem more able to tolerate disagreement than can the Communists, who have a dogmatic devotion to a need for unity.

The latest manoeuvre in the Sino-Soviet quarrel came in Moscow Thursday when it focused on a new unity appeal from Russia to China.

But the effect of a speech made by Russia's ideological boss, Frolyov N. Demichev, in a Kremlin ceremony was to put new blame on the Chinese Communists for refusing to follow Moscow's lead in the search for unity.

Thus the real thrust of the speech seems to have been a muted accusation to Moscow that the Chinese, by their behavior, are making unity impossible.

Demichev denied there is any kind of dilemma for the Soviet Union in the Vietnamese situation.

"The policy for peaceful coexistence does not preclude, but presupposes, a rebuff to aggression and support for peoples fighting against alien domination."

In practical terms this definition of established Soviet policy would seem to mean the Soviet Union would like to support North Viet Nam to the extent necessary to produce Communist victory in Southeast Asia but limit its support to such actions as would not bring on large-scale war between the Communist powers and the U.S.

By contrast the Chinese Communists talk in much more risky terms than the Soviet Union. But they justify their advocacy of all-out support for North Viet Nam on the grounds that the U.S. is a paper tiger and will not itself take serious risk of a major Asian war.

On the surface it seems that Moscow and Peking over which is more deputed to the spread of communism, the Russians are likely to be out-bid by the Chinese, who have fewer world responsibilities. Moscow is exposed in the confrontation over Viet Nam but could have made a critical difference in this respect.

Authorities here believe—the Russians in present circumstances would like to find a peaceful solution in Viet Nam on terms more nearly acceptable to the U.S. than would China which probably would be glad to keep the Vietnamese conflict raging for years.

Might Need 300,000 GI's To Stop Chinese Invasion

WASHINGTON (CP-AP) — U.S. officials said Friday it might take up to 300,000 American troops to help South Viet Nam resist Chinese invasion.

But they said nothing like that is in prospect at this time.

The officials said there is no evidence that either Russia or China is moving toward a large scale intervention in Viet Nam.

On the American side, they said, no decision involving the sending of large U.S. reinforcements to South Viet Nam has been made, beyond the previously announced addition of several thousand to the 23,500 U.S. servicemen already assigned to the country.

The question of how many U.S. troops might be needed in case of Chinese intervention was reported to have been raised during administration briefings of congressmen. Figures ranging from 100,000 to 300,000 have been mentioned.

The U.S. officials said anyone could guess at how many might be involved in such a all-out situation. But no Chinese have been seen in South Viet Nam, although in North Viet Nam some Chinese technicians have been on hand for a long time, they said.

Also maintained because there has been no reaction to American proposals for unconditional peace—at least none satisfactory in the American eyes.

One guarded report here suggests that in another round of briefings for members of Congress by President Johnson, an impression was left that American troops may be built up within weeks to perhaps 100,000.

Others forecast a much less spectacular growth depending on what happens. Perhaps 40,000 Americans might be committed in all, these suggest, in 1965—though Geneva accords carved up French Indochina and created the two Viet Nams —American troops totalled 400. At the end of 1960, the total still was only 785.

The late President Kennedy began pumping in more the next year and the numbers have risen steadily to 23,000 at the end of 1964 and 32,500 as of Thursday, excluding off - shore naval forces, or planes with those ships.

Senator Jacob Javits (Rep. N.Y.) and Joseph S. Clark (Dem. Pa.) told the Senate Friday they hope Johnson will ask Congress for approval before he sends any more U.S. combat forces to Viet Nam.

They noted that as commander-in-chief, he has authority to send more troops without asking Congress, but both said they hope he will not do so.

The only American ground combat unit directly involved to date is the recently - arrived marine brigade of 5,000 men guarding the vital Da Nang air base. This unit has moved from a passive role to a "search-and-kill" mission as evidenced by its first brush this week with guerrilla insurgents on patrol when it actively sought out the enemy.

The bulk of the remaining army, navy, air force and marine troops in South Viet Nam appear—technically at least—to operate as adjuncts of the South Vietnamese military. The term has been "advisers."

There is no question but that the U.S. has formidable resources to commit if it chooses.

These include 75,000 army troops and 16,000 marines scattered through Okinawa, Hawaii, the Korea forces and elsewhere.

Backing the troops are 200 marine and air force jets now in Viet Nam, it has 600 more at adjacent bases.

Off the coast, the U.S. 7th fleet is a direct participant in bombing North Viet Nam with 250 planes and 125 surface vessels. In addition the U.S. Pacific forces include 3,000 planes, 180,000 naval men.

Texas Gulf Shareholders Sue Company

NEW YORK (AP)—Two former shareholders sued the Texas Gulf Sulphur Co. for $2,000,000 in damages Friday, charging that the firm withheld information about a rich ore strike in Ontario and caused them to sell their shares at prices far below their true market value.

Dr. Isidore Yasuna, medical director of Mount Eden General Hospital, filed suit in New York State Supreme Court, asking $25,000,000 in punitive damages and $5,000 additional in actual damages.

Yasuna's suit said he sold 100 shares of Texas Gulf common stock March 23, 1964, at $24.50 a share, and 100 more shares April 16, the same year, for $31.50 a share.

Victor M. Cannon, professor of English at Suffolk Community College Selden, Long Island, said in another suit that he lost $20,950 by selling 500 shares April 15, 1964, the day before Texas Gulf announced the richest ore finds in this century near Timmins, Ont.

He charged that on April 12, the company had issued a statement calling reports of a major ore discovery "premature and possibly misleading." Cannon said he relied upon this statement and sold his stock at $29.25 a share.

The U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) Tuesday filed a suit against the firm and 13 of its officers, claiming they used inside knowledge to buy their firm's stock before releasing news of the ore strike to the public.

An assistant U.S. commerce secretary, Herbert Klotz, resigned Thursday, three days after it was disclosed that he bought Texas Gulf Sulphur stock on the basis of an indirect tip from a company insider.

Loyal Orange Grand Lodges Honor Dead of World Wars

Loyal Orange Grand Lodges from Ontario East holding their annual conventions in the city this week, yesterday honored the dead of the two world wars in a wreath laying ceremony at the Belleville Cenotaph.

One of the highlights of the conventions of the Grand Black Chapter, the Loyal Orange Lodge and the Ladies Orange Benevolent Association, was a joint Divine service Friday afternoon at Victoria Ave. Baptist Church.

Following the church service the 350 Orange delegates proceeded to the Station, Street Cenotaph, where prayers were said and the Last Post and Reveille were sounded.

Right Worshipful Sister Isobel Gamble, Grand Mistress of the LOBA for Ontario East, laid the wreath in honor of Canadian heroes who died in two world wars.

The service at Victoria Ave. Baptist Church was conducted by Grand Chaplain, Rev. H. E. Beare, assisted by Bro. Rev. J. Hodgson, Rev. Bro. A. E. Jaster and Rev. Gordon B. Woodcock, church pastor, and president of the Belleville Ministerial Association. Grand Lodge officers marched into the Church in a body.

The local meeting of district Orangemen got underway on Wednesday with the opening session of the Grand Black Chapter convention. Then on Friday the LOL annual convention the LOBA sessions got underway.

Mayor J. R. Ellis extended the city's official welcome.

Thursday evening approximately 450 persons gathered at the Sun Valley Motor Hotel as the LOBA lodges held a pre-convention gathering.

Delegates were welcomed by Mrs. Pearl Holmes, of Belleville, Junior Deputy Mistress for Ontario East. Degree work was exemplified by the combined Belleville lodges, Lydia No. 250 and Welcome No. 1230.

The LOBA convention sessions were presided over by Rt. Wor. Sister Isobel Gamble, Grand Mistress for Ontario East. The LOL sessions at the Tops Motel saw Grand Master Lorne Hagerman of Harold as the presiding officer.

Liquor Vote In Otonabee Is Set Aside

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — County Court Judge Harry R. Deyman has set aside a Jan. 23 liquor plebiscite result in nearby Otonabee Township because of an irregularity in the official proclamation.

The court's ruling followed an appeal by the wets that the location of a polling subdivision was at variance with the proclamation advertising the vote.

The wets received 59.5 per cent of the vote on the question of permitting liquor to be served with meals.

Under the Liquor License Act a 60-per-cent vote is required.

A spokesman for the wets said there was confusion over the location and several persons were unable to find the polling-stations. A new vote will be organized.

Says Heavier Icebreaker Is Necessary

OTTAWA (CP) — The transport department announced Friday it has decided to order a heavier icebreaking vessel for its coast guard service in the Great Lakes and is cancelling a tender call issued last month for a light vessel.

Need for a heavy vessel had been pointed up "by the combination of unusually heavy ice on the Great Lakes this winter and the apparent development of increasingly earlier movement of Great Lakes shipping each spring."

Last month tenders were invited for four coast guard replacement vessels including an icebreaking -lighthouse supply and buoy tender for the Prescott, Ont., marine agency. The Prescott vessel is being withdrawn from the tender call to plan for one with greater icebreaking ability.

The department said a new tender call will be issued later. There was the possibility that the vessel involved would be of a design "already proven in service with the Canadian Coast Guard."

There now are two light icebreakers on Great Lakes service and recently the department moved one of its big St. Lawrence icebreakers into the lakes to help handle unusually heavy ice.

SIGHT SUBMARINES

CAPE TOWN (AP)—Defence Minister Jim Fouche told the South African Parliament Thursday that 19 reliable sightings of unidentified submarines were made off the South African coast last February. The minister was replying to recent reports that Russian long-range submarines have been operating regularly in or near South African waters.

Officials Plan Discussion Proposed Layoffs at Ford With External Affairs Min.

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Officials of the departments of industry and labor will meet in Ottawa Monday with Paul Martin, external affairs minister, to discuss proposed layoffs at Ford of Canada plants in Windsor.

Mr. Martin, here Friday night for a speech before the Ontario Society for Automotive Engineers, said his meetings Monday will also be attended by Herbert Gray, Liberal MP for adjacent Essex West riding. Mr. Martin is MP for Essex East.

On his arrival here Friday, Mr. Martin was critical of Ford of Canada's methods of handling the details and the announcement of proposed layoffs.

"I don't like the way this announcement of layoffs came from the company," he said. "There was no prior indication from the company of this particular matter. I feel it is important that the government, unions and management have the closest co - operation and each should be informed of the plans of the other. . . In questions involving layoffs we should know in advance what is going to happen so that it is possible to plan for such disruption."

Mr. Martin said the department to labor didn't know of the layoffs until Thursday, although only 10 days ago government and company officials met to discuss aspects of the recent Canada-U.S. auto pact.

On Thursday, the United Auto Workers Union here announced the details of a report it had received from Ford of Canada saying the company planned to layoff temporarily some 1,600 workers at its plants here to enable the company to make extensive retooling and re-alignment of its facilities.

Mr. Martin said the department of labor will have to find ways of relocating the laid-off men. "However, for those which the department of labor cannot place, the government will have to consider . . . establishing benefits which will make the economic load on these individuals less onerous."

In his speech Friday night to the automotive engineers, Mr. Martin said that he had learned that Chrysler Canada Ltd here would absorb "a substantial portion" of the workers laid off in this area. A spokesman for the firm confirmed that Chrysler was hiring men for a second shift at its auto assembly plant that would be in full production by mid-May.

Mr. Martin emphasized that the auto agreement, signed Jan 16 by Prime Minister Pearson and President Johnson is one and which provides basically for the abolition of tariffs at the manufacturers' level on new cars and original parts exchanged by the two countries, must not be regarded as setting a precedent for other economic deals in other fields between the two nations.

However, he said, as Canada cannot operate "to operate the agreement we will learn some lessons which could be relevant to other situations."

Geologist Claims Broker Misquoted Him in Probe

TORONTO (CP) — Kenneth H. Darke, a former geologist for Texas Gulf Sulphur Co., told the Windfall royal commission Friday a Toronto broker misquoted him on information given to the commission.

He said evidence given March 31 by Eric Scott, senior partner in the firm of J. H. Crang and Co., about a recommendation which Mr. Scott said took place in Toronto last July between himself and Mr. Darke was "completely erroneous."

"There are at least three points in his statement I disagree with completely," Mr. Darke said.

Mr. Darke denied he told Mr. Scott he was chief geologist for Texas Gulf, the company that found a $2,000,000,000-a-square-mile ore zone deep near Timmins in 1964.

He said this was ridiculous as The Northern Miner had published his chief geologist's name earlier.

He denied he told Mr. Scott Texas Gulf was part of the Windfall Oils and Mines Ltd. drill core and that it was a duplicate of the Texas Gulf core.

He said no one except Windfall's president, George MacMillan, Mr. Viola or their agents had seen the core.

And he denied he told Mr. Scott he has spotted all Texas Gulf's drill holes.

"I had staked all Texas Gulf's holes up to April, but I was on leave of absence from April and everyone at Crang's knew it," he said.

"Frankly I think I wasn't even in Toronto at the time." CHANGES BY U.S.

Mr. Darke is one of 13 persons whom the United States Securities and Exchange Commission has charged with having benefitted from inside information before Texas Gulf discovery by buying company stock before the public was told of the find.

The royal commission here is investigating the circumstances surrounding the rise of Windfall stock on the Toronto Stock Exchange to $5.60 from 56 cents after the company collapse to 80 cents last July.

It has followed rumors that Windfall stock ore near the Texas Gulf find. The stock fell to 40 cents overnight after it was announced no ore had been found.

Earlier Friday the commission heard evidence that Windfall's promoter, Mrs. MacMillan, had traded Windfall stock through at least 14 accounts, all under different names.

Sollie Ho, the people whose names were used testified that Mrs. MacMillan did all the trading but they received the profits.

Would Offer Grade 13 Course at Two Levels

TORONTO (CP)—A proposal by Education Minister William Davis's Grade 13 study committee to divide the senior matriculation year into two levels —general and specialized—has been endorsed by two subsequent committees appointed by Mr. Davis.

Their combined report released Friday recommended that the three committees be set up to determine the degree of specialization that would be offered during the June, A.D. year, envisaged as a university preparatory year.

The Grade 13 study committee had suggested that senior matriculation students with special interests would benefit if instruction could be offered at a general level and at an "advanced" level.

Lectures, laboratory and Library facilities for advanced level subjects would be about twice that of the subjects in the general level courses.

To consider this proposal in depth, Mr. Davis established a general and advanced committee to consider all of the implications of a division in the senior matriculation committee to set up to devise means of effecting the Grade 13 study committee's report also looked into the idea.

They have agreed that Mr. Davis should proceed forthwith with the two-level scheme for Grade 13.

Word from the watercrest mob has it that the spawn-laden membranes of the pickerel species are feeling their way to the nautical maternity wards.

But soon is making reservations. Officials reports have it there will be lots of room for the expectant mothers.

It is reported that only a fair percentage of the wall-eyed matrons will have made their annual reproduction contribution when the official opening of the season, May 1st rolls around.

This, and I have it on official authority, is due to the inclemency of the weather and the chilliness of the water.

Russ Whitfield, wildlife chief of the Department of Lands and Forests, Tweed, confirmed the opinion of veteran fishermen here. Russ said the "run will be very light, much lighter than former years."

Some pickerel have been noted on the shores of Hay Bay but not in any great quantity.

"Red" Miller, our sportswriting bandit in Napanee, tells me that the pickerel are running in the Napanee River and at the "Falls", but well below the norm of other years.

"At this time of the year", "Red" said, "the run is at its peak generally and from what I've seen, it is fifty per cent down from last spring."

The midnight marauders have been haunting the banks of the Moira, I'm told, but then far the hauls have been missing. The downtown agents of Illegal Pickerel Sales Incorporated are noticable by their absence.

The suspicious newspaper-wrapped parcel carried under the arm has yet to make an appearance. One suspect was hailed, but revealed that his "pickerel" had been bent blessed with chicken legs.

Meanwhile the authorities are keeping watchful eyes for poachers. Conservation officers of the Lands and Forests Department are on almost clock-round duty.

Assisting them are officers of the Ontario Provincial Police who for the first time in history have been assigned to full-time duty with the conservation forces.

"During the past years," Russ Whitfield said, our department officers have had a tough time checking lawbreakers. We were sworn at, kicked at, and sometimes pushed into the water".

"This year we decided to do something about it and asked the full-time co-operation of the Ontario Provincial Police. Inspector J. McDougall has given us all-out support by detailing his men to full-time duty".

"We are not going to pull any punches and those caught breaking the law will feel the full weight of it", Mr. Whitfield said.

"Some people seem to forget — or do not know — that a female pickerel heavy with spawn, is scarcely edible. A lot of them do not care but at .say, five dollars a pound paid over the court counter, it will prove an expensive meal."

After all, gentlemen, the open season on the tasty dore, walleye or pickerel — take your choice — is just a week away.

And that brings to mind there are two pikerel derbies on tap, one emanating from Picton, the other sponsored by the Belleville Fish and Game Club.

Fish and Game Club treasurer Fred Clarke tells me the boys will set up the weighing station on Victoria Park where everyone can see it. The Derby opens at 12.01 a.m. May 1st and closes at 8.00 p.m. Sunday May. 2. It is open to card-bearing members only.

Weighing times are Saturday 8 a.m. to 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. On Sunday from 8 a.m. to 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. First prize is $10.00, second $7.00 and third $3.00.

Grab 2-0 Series Lead

Sherbrooke Blanks A's

SHERBROOKE, Que. (CP)—Coach Georges Roy predicted Friday night his Sherbrooke Beavers will win the Eastern Allan Cup finals in four consecutive games following a 4-0 home ice victory over Woodstock Athletics.

"We'll beat them 5-1 Sunday, or by four goals in any event," he said in the dressing room as the players cheered agreement.

The powerful Sherbrooke team leads the best-of-seven series 3-0, having defeated Athletics 5-2 and 4-1 in the opening games in Woodstock.

The next game and the fifth, if necessary, will be played in Sherbrooke Sunday and Monday.

Playing coach Ted Power of Woodstock admitted his team played like an intermediate rather than a senior team in the first two games.

Goalie Serge Aubry kicked out 27 shots for his shutout but the Sherbrooke defence ensured that most were routine saves. The busy man on the ice was Woodstock goalie Ron Salter who was peppered with 46 shots.

Bob Dupre scored the only first-period goal at the 42-second mark and scored another in the second.

The Beavers put on the pressure in the second period. Rene Pepin scored on a rebound. Leroy Drouin drilled in a 25-foot shot. Dupre's second goal of the night came after he stick-handled the hapless Salter out of position.

Rejean Richer and Claude Cardin scored in the third. Cardin, the most effective rushing forward on the ice, also picked up two assists.

Wonder Drug Big Topic ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ Blake Stands Pat

Habs, Hawks Poised For Big Clash

By AL McNEIL

CHICAGO (CP) — What do they do for an encore?

That is the question following Thursday night's third game in the best-of-seven final for the Stanley Cup between Chicago Black Hawks and Montreal Canadiens.

Thursday's 3-1 win was the first for the Hawks who now trail the Montrealers 3-1 in games going into Sunday's fourth contest here.

Discussion at a National Hockey League buffet supper Friday night centred on the wonder drug dimethyl sulfoxide which returned captain Pierre Pilote and rightwinger Kenny Wharfam to the Chicago lineup Thursday after they missed the first two games.

The drug, sustained action and assorted fights provided lively conversation pieces.

Fights broke out on two occasions in the third period of Thursday's game. Referee John Ashley called a total of 19 minors in the game plus a misconduct to Montreal's J. C. Tremblay when he tried to continue one fight.

Goalie Lorne Worsley of the Canadiens threatened to take on fans behind his net when one Chicago partisan threw a pie from a bench at him. Jim Roberts of Montreal swung his stick at several fans he found lobbering some behind the Montreal bench.

Pilote returned to hospital here Friday night where it is expected Dr. Myron Tremaine will administer further treatments with the spray-on pain killer.

The drug, known as DMSO, is a derivative of paper pulp wastes and is sprayed on the bruised portion.

Montreal coach Toe Blake scheduled a full-scale workout this morning.

When it was revealed that the so-called wonder drug used by Pilote and Wharram produces a garlic odor on the breath, he quipped:

"No wonder none of my guys would go near Pilote."

Blake said J. C. Tremblay, Montreal's top defensive player in both series so far, "is playing his best hockey in five years with us."

But the Montreal coach had no plaudits for another member of his squad.

"(Claude) Larose had five shots and not even one was on the net," Blake told reporters.

Blake said he will use the same lineup he employed in Thursday's game, "as far as I know now."

Chicago coach Billy Reay said he felt Bobby Hull played well so far in the series even though he hasn't been able to score.

"I'm satisfied as long as Hull continues to play as well as he has been," Reay said. "He's had a couple of assists and he's tying up at least one good offensive forward and two most of the time . . . so that's something."

Amerks Grab 2-0 Lead

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (CP) Rochester Americans took a 2 - 0 lead in the American Hockey League's Calder Cup finals Friday, defeating Hershey Bears 5-3.

Third game of the best - of-seven series will be in Hershey tonight.

Stan Smrke and Jimmy Pappin scored two each for the home team. Duane Rupp, Red Armstrong, Bronco Horvath and Wally Boyer were the other Rochester scorers.

Gene Ubriaco, Pete Conacher and Bruce Draper tallied for Bears.

Scored 59 Goals In 70 Games

Habs' Power Play Is Fearsome Weapon

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Sports Editor

National Hockey League officials may have some first ideas about such things as expansion, European and U.S. coast-to-coast television of its games, transfer of headquarters to New York from Montreal. But, fellahs, what about Montreal's power play?

There has been all sorts of talk the last few weeks about the NHL setting up another six-team division, possibly going out to San Francisco, Los Angeles, San Diego, Vancouver and other assorted West Coast points. This, of course, would be tied in with California-to New York telecasts.

Then, John Francis (Bunny) Ahearne, the London-based Icelihman who has had a running battle with pro hockey for years, put out a feeler whereby he would get the European TV rights of Hockey games.

Bunny, president of the International Ice Hockey Federation, is trying to get over far with his proposition. His federation won't allow NHL players to conduct a clinic in Austria next month and pro officials would just as soon forget he exists.

These and other ideas have brought up at the league's annual meeting in June—all, that is, except the Montreal power play employed by Canadiens known as the power play. This isn't the first time that this particular offensive manoeuvre has been brought into sharp focus. CLEAN DECKED

Back in the mid-1950s, Canadiens had an thoroughly perfected it that the governors decided they had better do something about it before Montreal ran the other clubs right out of the league.

It wasn't unusual in those days for Canadiens—Rocket Richard, Jean Beliveau, Doug Harvey, Henri Richard, Dickie Moore and Bert Olmstead—to score two or more goals with the man advantage. In an effort to squelch this somewhat, officials decided in 1958 that a player serving a minor penalty would be allowed to return to the ice when a goal was scored by the opposing team.

It eased things but Canadiens continued to dominate the league. They had won the Stanley Cup in 1956 and didn't look back until they had strung together an unprecedented five straight Cup championships.

Nothing much had been heard of the power play until the current Stanley Cup playoffs. And, again, the Canadien powerhouse demonstrated its effectiveness.

In the first eight games of the best-of-seven finals, Canadiens scored 22 goals and 14 of these came off the power play. They scored 11 against Toronto and Chicago penalty-killing units, but the message comes out loud and clear for Montreal's power-play lineup which, incidentally, scored 28 goals in the 70-game league schedule when the opposition was shorthanded.

Locked In Cage

Meat-Eating Hawk Waits Call

CHICAGO (CP) — As National Hockey League opponents have long suspected, there's a member of the Chicago Black Hawks organization who doesn't like raw meat and is locked in a cage between appearances.

Stan Mikita? Moose Vasko? Bobby Hull?

Wells. No. He's a draftee from the Central Professional League named Bruno. And it's highly unlikely that Chicago coach Billy Reay will use him as Jean Beliveau's check when the Hawks meet Montreal Canadiens in the fourth game of the Stanley Cup finals here Sunday night.

Bruno happens to be a four-year-old German shepherd whose assignment is policing Chicago Stadium against some of its more uninhibited customers.

"We've never had to use him yet," says Don Murphy, Hawks' publicist. "Having him on call is enough to discourage the more energetic types."

The Chicago club's spokesman said Bruno's presence adds incentive to the departure of elements inclined to vandalism following the final whistle.

The stadium had been plagued by petty thievery, consisting mainly of souvenirs in its environs following attractions. These people would then break into concession stands and pay telephones and make off with whatever they could take, Murphy explained.

"You might say we drafted him from the Central Pro League," Murphy said, referring to the fact the canines received the watchdog from its St. Louis farm club. "I don't know who we gave them in return."

Sardinian Whips Kingpetch

New Flyweight Champ

ROME (AP)—Salvatore Burruni of Italy, stalking his career on his lightning fists, took the world's flyweight boxing crown away from Pone Kingpetch of Thailand Friday night on points in 15 rounds.

Burruni weighed 111½ and Kingpetch 111 for the long-awaited champion ship match before 18,000 fans, packed into the Roma Sports Palace.

More than 3,000 supporters from Burruni's native Sardinia cheered themselves hoarse as the plucky 32-year-old challenger hammered away, round after round, at the Thai's face and body.

Burruni, a slick Sardinian getting his first shot at a world championship, became the third boxer to defend his little belt since 1942.

Burruni, who had won 36 straight fights going into the long-awaited struggle, beat the 29-year-old Thai to the punch consistently.

The sellout crowd of 18,000 approved the verdict.

Burruni was guaranteed only $2,000 for the fight, while Pone took a $30,000 in his ninth title fight. The Thai now has won six title fights and lost three. He has regained his title three times and lost it three times.

Burruni brought his record to 77-3-1.

Podres Tosses 4-Hitter

Beats Mets 2-1

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

Johnny Podres, taking a cue from Sandy Koufax, has allowed his way back into Los Angeles Dodgers' strongarm corps—most fearsome pitching array in the major leagues today.

Podres, who underwent elbow surgery last summer, made his first appearance since last May Friday night and blanked Philadelphia Phillies 4-0 on four hits.

The veteran southpaw's comeback, on the heels of Koufax' second complete-game victory —a four-hit 2-1 decision over New York Mets Thursday night —enabled the Dodgers to stay atop the National League with seven victories in their first nine starts.

The Mets rallied for four runs in the ninth inning and another in the 11th to nip San Francisco Giants 5-4; Houston Astros edged Pittsburgh Pirates 4-3 in 12 innings for their first indoor victory and St. Louis Cardinals, paced by Curt Flood, defeated Cincinnati Reds 6-3 in other league games. The Milwaukee Braves-Chicago Cubs matinee was rained out.

Podres, who had not pitched since last May and had not won since September, 1963, gave the Dodger staff its fifth complete game. Koufax, Don Drysdale, Claude Osteen, Podres and the supporting cast have given up only 12 runs, 10 of them earned, in 71 innings—an ERA of 1.27. They've held the opposition to a .185 batting average.

WILLIE SET PACE

Willie Davis led the Dodgers' nine-hit attack with two doubles and a single as the bustling Cali fornians beat Jim Bunning, now 1-2.

The Mets, trailing 8-4 in the ninth at San Francisco, chased Giant starter Gaylor Perry with consecutive homers by Ron Swoboda and Jesse Gonder then blanked the score with the help of throwing errors by Jim Ray Hart and Jim Davenport.

The Astros blew a 3-0 lead in the eighth inning before Rusty Staub's run-scoring single off Al McBean in the 11th gave them their first victory at their new domed stadium. Pittsburgh, blanked by Don Bosch for seven innings, had tied it as Gene Freese capped a three-run rally by scoring from second on Willie Stargell's infield hit.

Flood also paced the Cardinal-Red game with a home run against loser John Tsitouris and drove in two first-inning runs with a single, helping Bob Gibson beat Cincinnati for the second time in this season. Reserves Phil Gallano and Tito Francona also had two hits each for the Cardinals, who played without Ken Boyer. The third baseman complained of pains in his left side before the game.

Shade Tigers 8-6 In Ten

Twins Stretch Winning Streak To Five

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Chicago White Sox, who applied for a passport to power when they engineered a controversial three-way trade for Johnny Romano, may find the intuitive entry visa was presented to them by inexperienced Danny Cater.

A 25-year-old outfielder with less than a full season of major league experience, Cater hit a decisive two-run homer and remained the American League's leading hitter with a .522 average Friday night as the White Sox defeated Washington Senators 5-3.

The White Sox, suffering from a chronic power deficiency, moved to correct the situation last winter by acquiring Romano from Cleveland in the three-way deal that saw Rocky Colavito move from Kansas City to the Indians while the White Sox sent outfielders Mike Hershberger and Jim Landis to the Athletics.

Cater, meanwhile, was acquired in a simple one-for-one deal with Philadelphia Phillies in exchange for pitcher Ray Herbert, figuring to stock the White Sox' depleted outfield.

He had an impressive minor league record but showed little power with the Phillies.

Elsewhere, Minnesota Twins stretched their winning streak to five games by edging Detroit Tigers 8-6 in 10 innings, Cleveland downed Kansas City 6-2 and Baltimore Orioles defeated Boston Red Sox 4-3. The game between Los Angeles Angels and New York Yankees was rained out.

Romano, who is hitting only .222, got the White Sox started with a first-inning homer. But the Senators had built a 3-2 lead when Cater capped a three-run sixth inning uprising that got the job done and brought Bobby Locker his first major league victory.

WON IN 10th

The Twins spotted the Tigers five runs in the first inning, tied the score in the eighth with a three-run rally built on singles by Tony Oliva, Harmon Killebrew and Earl Battey, and then won it in the 10th with just one hit.

Jerry Zimmerman's single, followed by walks to Killebrew and Jimmie Hall, provided the tie-breaking run in the 10th with Jim Merritt the pitching victim. Jerry Lumpe dropped Cesar Tovar's pop-up.

The Indians showed a lot of early foot against the Athletics on Friday night as the White Sox defeated Washington Senators 5-3.

The Memorial Cup

EDMONTON (CP)—Faced by rookie Ross Perkins' two goals, Edmonton Oil Kings trounced Winnipeg Braves 7 - 1 Friday night before 4,333 fans to take a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven Western Canada junior hockey championship.

Third game in the series will be played Monday in Winnipeg. The winner of the series will represent the west in the Memorial Cup.

Despite the wider margin in the score Friday night, Braves put up a stronger fight than in the series opener, which they dropped 3-1.

Graham Longmuir, Ron Anderson, Galen Head, Red Simpson and Greg Tomsky added the other Edmonton goals. George Andersen scored midway through the final period for Winnipeg.

MONTREAL (CP) — Lachine Maroons may add some player strength for their Memorial Cup hockey playoff with the powerful Niagara Falls Flyers but their immediate concern is to get the team out of at apparent slump.

The teams play the first two games of their best - of - seven Eastern Canada junior final series here tonight and Sunday afternoon.

All remaining games will be played in Niagara Falls, starting with the third game Wednesday.

The winner enters the national finals against the western champion.

Lachine, champions of the Montreal Metropolitan League, earned a berth in the eastern final by capturing a week-long, round-robin tournament in Sydney, N.S. But Lachine officials claim the team wasn't impressive in taking the tournament with four wins and one loss. They had to beat Smiths Falls, Ont. 5-3 in a special playoff to do it.

"We didn't play our best in Sydney at all," Maroons President Pete Morin lamented Friday. "If we play that way against Niagara Falls, we may as well not show up at the forum."

The Flyers, champions of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A League, are prohibitive favorites to eliminate Lachine in straight games.

Hens Ruin Red Wings Opener

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (CP) — Toledo Mud Hens connected for three homers Friday to down Rochester Red Wings 7-1 and spoil the Wings' International League home opener.

Right-hander Jim Brememan held the Wings to three hits. The home team's only run came in the first inning on a walk, Billy Ott's single and an infield grounder.

The only other International League game scheduled Friday Columbus Jets at Syracuse Chiefs—was postponed because of rain.

Today's games are Atlanta at Toronto, Jacksonville at Buffalo and Columbus at Syracuse.

The Mud Hens got all they needed to win on a two - run homer by Archie Moore. Elvio Jimenez and Mickey Harrington slugged solo homers in the sixth and eighth respectively and Harrington's two-run triple in the ninth wrapped it up.

Brememan laboured through the first four innings in 40-degree weather but was virtually untouchable after that. A single by Mary Breeding and a walk were Rochester's only base runners after the fourth.

Losing pitcher was Dave Vineyard.

Yesterday's Stars

Batting—Danny Cater, Chicago, capped a three-run sixth-inning rally with a two-run homer that gave the White Sox a 5-3 victory over Washington Senators.

Pitching—Johnny Podres, Los Angeles Dodgers, blanked Philadelphia Phillies 4-0 on four hits in his first appearance since May, 1964.

Kingston Wins Tournament At Trenton

TRENTON — (Special) — Kingston scored a nip and tuck win over Toronto Marlboros here last night to capture the grand championship at the climax of the 6th annual Lions Midget tournament.

Some 850 young stars, representing 28 different clubs, took part in the five-day tournament which attracted over 3,000 fans to the Community Gardens.

Marlboros won "A" division honors while Kingston took the "B" crown after their opening day loss.

In the grand championship affair, Kingston took a 2-0 lead in the first heat and it stayed that way until the third, when Marlies finally got on the scoresheet. Kingston held on, however, to preserve the one - goal victory.

John Lee opened Kingston's scoring at 8.55, on a three-pip play with Paul Gavel and Stan Galt.

Galt scored the second goal himself at 14.53, with Rex Smith collecting an assist.

Dave Edwards drove home the Marlies' lone tally at 9.05 of the third, finishing a play with Rick Jordan and Rick Kessel.

A highlight of the final day's play was the personal appearance at the rink of Toronto Maple Leaf star Bob Pulford.

Pulford made the presentation of the Most Valuable Player award, to Kingston's Mike Babcock.

Belleville Oddfellows were knocked out of both the "A" and "B" divisions with twin defeats on the opening day of the tournament.

SIGNS WITH BOMBERS

WINNIPEG (CP) — Halfback Dave Thelsen has signed a 1965 contract with Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Western Football Conference, the club announced Friday. Thelsen was acquired by the Bombers last month in a trade that sent end and flanker John Simmons to Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Conference.

A graduate of the university of Nebraska, the 212 - pound Thelsen joined Argos in 1964 and was defensive halfback.

130 Enter 4,000-Mile Auto Rally

MONTREAL (CP)—Some 130 drivers today prepared for a dash to Vancouver over fast-fading roads as weather bit into the route of the Cross-Canada 4,000-mile rally.

Several segments of the rally already have been cancelled and organizers have said that flood conditions in Manitoba could turn the Prairie run, usually one of the easier legs of the rally, into the toughest section of the event.

The fifth annual rally is to start at 8 p.m. MST tonight in downtown Montreal and is scheduled to end in Vancouver six days later when those competitors who have not been bogged down will be.

Cars from eight countries and a record 29 manufacturers are entered in the event, being run from east to west for the first time in three years.

Two big - name race drivers entered in their first major rally, Pedro Rodriguez of Mexico and "Lil' David" Pearson of the United States, have expressed their disappointment at the cancellation of some of the high-speed events.

Among the other prominent racing drivers entered in the rally are Francis Bradley of Toronto, former Canadian sports car racing champion, and Al Pease, also of Toronto, last year's Canadian Racing Driver Association champion.

Defending Cross-Canada 4,000 rally champions Klaus Ross and John Bird of Toronto will again be competing in a factory-entered Volvo.

Maurice Carter and Ian Worth of Burlington, Ont., second-place finishers last year, will be driving a Corvette.

Last year's third-place winner, Paul Mclennan of Toronto and navigator John Wilson of Dundee, Ont., winner of this year's eastern Canada winter rally, will be driving a factory Mustang.

The first official stop on the rally route is at Sudbury, with cars arriving at 8 p.m. EDT. The following leg ends at Port Arthur at approximately 4:30 p.m. Monday.

WON'T PLAY IN COLD

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—U.S. Open golf champion Ken Venturi, plagued by a circulation ailment in his hands, said Friday he won't be able to play again in cold weather. But he told a press conference he does expect to play in the U.S. Open next summer. Venturi, 33, returned to his Hillsborough home Thursday from the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., where he underwent a series of tests.

Campbellford

CAMPBELLFORD — Bemer-syde Chapter I.O.D.E. held their regular meeting on Thursday night in the Parish Hall. The Regent Mrs. W. A. Kingston presided with 31 members present.

The matter of providing park benches will be dealt with later in the summer. As no report was received regarding the forming of a new Chapter the matter was dropped.

Invitations were received from the Women's Auxiliary of the Campbellford Hospital to attend "Open House" on May 5th and from Lansdowne Chapter in Ottawa to attend their fifth annual House and Garden Fair
May 20th.

Information was read from headquarters stating that the Canadian flag must be to the right of the Union Jack, the same size and height and on display at all public functions where the I.O.D.E. flag is displayed.

Treasurer's report showed a general bank balance of $233.86 and a student loan fund balance of $679.46. Money was delegated to the support of the adopted child.

DETAILED REPORT

First Vice Regent Mrs. W. A.
Vanderwater gave a detailed report of the annual meeting in Hamilton. Some of the points included were discussion of change of name, and Octopus Chapters wish it to remain the same.

A need was stressed for books, and the Provincial and Provincial education convener stressed the fact that an emergency exists in Ontario up to help a student requiring financial assistance.
There are 17 students in Onario who are celebrating their 50th birthday this year. A change was suggested to the handling applications for membership.

Mrs. J. O. Benor was again elected as Provincial Councillor.

TALK ON AFRICA

Mrs. Peggy Grant world affairs convener gave an interesting talk on Africa aided by the use of a carefully prepared map.

A grant of $50 was given to assist a group of students from Hamilton, to attend the United Nations during Easter holidays.

It was noted that 140 pocket books had been sent to the forces in Cyprus. Mrs. R. B.
Bennett, convener of the birthday tea reported that the tea to be held May 15th at the home of Mrs. R. J. Locke. Visitors to the tea for May are to be
Mrs. O. Benns and Mrs. H.
Bennett. Group I convener Mrs.
Irwin reported $185. had been made at the Fashion Show sponsored by the group.

Mrs. Helen Megrun reported
Group 3 is holding a rummage sale in the near future. Group 4 is selling chocolate bars this month.

The meeting closed in the usual manner and lunch was served by Group 2.

GOANS LEAVE

here rather than stay at home under Indian rule in their homeland, left for a new life Friday.
They boarded an afternoon flight for Lisbon, with the Portuguese government paying their air fares.

Your Car

Read, Heed Dash Lights' Information

By EUGENE B. MILMOE

Many car owners have replaced red warning lights on the dash with ammeter and oil pressure gauges that tell you much more. The next best thing is to be fully aware of how these lights are meant to operate . . . and why they don't.

With the ignition switch on, the generator warning light should be on, unless there's a bad bulb, loose connection or stuck circuit breaker contact.
As engine speed is increased from idle and the generator is charging the battery, the light goes out. If it doesn't, generat-tor or regulator trouble or a slipping fan belt — is probably to blame.

Check for a faulty pressure switch on the engine, or a defective bulb if the oil pressure warning light doesn't work when the ignition is turned on. In cases where this light will not go out until the engine is well accelerated, an inaccurate pressure switch is usually the trouble. The oil warning light remains on at all speeds, get to the nearest service station. It may only be a defective gauge gauge unit, but it could be a low oil pressure condition threatening major engine damage.

G. I. asks: "If spark timing is set for premium gas, how must it be adjusted for regular gas?"

It's surprising how many motorists ask about this. Since regular fuels burn slower, the spark must be retarded.

From S. Y.: "I was getting 18 miles per gallon on our
'62 compact until two weeks ago. Now, I average about 13 m.p.h. at best. I use the same brand and grade of gas.
I've had no trouble or work needed on the car. In fact, it runs more well, and burns very little oil.

Sounds like a fuel leak. Check for seepage, particularly at the carburetor, fuel pump and fuel line connections, when the engine is running.

S. R. asks: "How does the choke change the amount of fuel supplied to the engine?"

It doesn't. It changes the fuel-air ratio by obstructing air intake when the engine is cold, thus enriching the combustible mixture. When the engine is warm, the choke valve is open allowing a maximum quantity of air. This, in effect, provides the leaner fuel mixture required.

J. U. writes: "With the engine running and the automatic transmission in drive or low, my car won't hold at idle on hills or upgrades unless I use the brake."

Low transmission oil level can cause this.

SAYS CARS KILL

GENEVA (AP)—The automobile has become the world's greatest killer, a prominent U.S. physician said Friday, but not because of the thousands who die every year in road ac-of Boston believes many thousands more die because their car "keeps them from taking essential exercise."

CHRIST CHURCH, TYENDINAGA

"There is no other creation of mankind to compare with (the church) . . . It is humanity's grandest, completest, and most beautiful achievement . . ." — Bernard Berenson.

"Universities in North America are showing increasing interest in the study and teaching of religion," notes William Nicholls in "Queen's Journal (Feb. 9, '65)." In Canada, a high proportion of universities owe their very existence to religious foundations."

"In a series of lectures at York University on the subject, it was pointed out that "a university should give to students an understanding of living with a religious faith, living with a different faith and living without a religious faith."

Such an understanding would be a "real service to its students and to society," concludes Mr. Nicholls.

The above is a by way of introducing Christ Church, Tyendinaga in general, and how it came in existence in particular, as we lift a curtain of the present to peer into the past.

"The first church erected in Western Ontario was at the Mohawk settlement, (Brantford), which was built the first year of their habition in that place (1785-6)," comments Dr. William Canniff in his book "Life in Upper Canada". "Strange that the natives of the wood should take the lead in erecting places of worship. It was several years later before even log meeting houses were put up by the Loyalists."

Dr. Canniff continues:

"The first church erected upon the Bay of Quinte . . . was at the Mohawk village, Tyendinaga." Later "their original edifice of wood, having served its purpose and being in a state of decay; it was deemed necessary to have erected a new and more substantial building. They consequently held a Council at which the Chief made the following speech, upon hearing all the ways and means discussed:

"If we attempt to build this church for ourselves, it will never be done. Let us, therefore, ask our father, the Governor, to build it for us, and it will be done at once.'"

Reference here, says Dr. Canniff, was made, not to the necessary funds, for they were to be derived from the sale of Indian lands; but to the experience requisite to carry out the project.

Sir Charles Bagot was duly petitioned and we read:

"The first stone was laid by S. P. Jarvis, Esq., Chief Superintendent of Indians in Canada, the Archdeacon of Kingston, the truly venerable G. C. Stuart conducted the usual service, which was preceded by a procession of Indians, who, singing a hymn led the way from the wharf.

"A hymn was sung by the Indians, and the Indian children of the school. The Rev. Wm. Macauley of Picton, delivered an address, which was followed by a prayer from the Rev. Mr. Deacon.

The following inscription was placed on the first stone:

"To the Glory of God our Saviour, the remnant of the tribe of Kan-ye-ake-haka, in token of their preservation by the divine mercy through Jesus Christ, in the sixth year of Our Mother Queen Victoria; Sir Charles Theophilus Metcalf, G.C.B., being Governor General of British North America; The Right Rev. J. Strachan, D.D., and LL.D., being the Bishop of Toronto: and The Rev. Saltern Ryerson, being in the thirteenth year of his incumbency.

"The old wooden fabric having answered its end, this corner stone of Christ Church, Tyendinaga was laid in the presence of the Venerable George O'Kill Stuart, LL.D., Archdeacon of Kingston; by Samuel Peter Jarvis, Chief superintendent of Indian Affairs in Canada, assisted by various members of the church on Tuesday, May 30th, A.D. 1843.

Dr. Canniff adds:

"The edifice with four lancet windows on each side, presents to the eye a very pleasing appearance upon approaching it. The interior . . . is sufficiently interesting. There is the elevated desk, and the more elevated pulpit, and upon the wall, over the altar, are the ten commandments, in the Mohawk tongue. Here is grandly united the Mother Church and the devoted piety of the once great Mohawk nation.

"Opposite the altar is a gallery, across the end of the building, in which is an organ. Therefrom proceeds, Sunday after Sunday, rich notes of tuneful melody, blending with the stout voices of the singers.

"From this church ascends, have we not reason to believe the adoration of hearts warmed into spiritual life by the pure principles of Christianity.

"The view from the church upon the surrounding scenery," observes Dr. Canniff, "is very pleasant and in the quietness of a summer day, one may linger . . ."

Linger, as did a Belleville artist last summer who painted Christ Church Tyendinaga which graces our column today. We are indebted to Mrs. Robert Williamson, 74 Selina Avenue, who is a member of the Belleville Artists' Association which includes the Canadian '67 Group This Group, formed by Mrs. Lewis Andrews, 125 Victoria Avenue, in anticipation of Canada's Centennial year is interested in preserving through the medium of their paint brush, the forms of homes, public buildings and objects (in still-life) of the Quinte District circa a hundred years old.

New members, non-painters and painters alike, are welcome. They are needed in the undertaking of this wide scale research.

Said Mrs. Williamson, "I was especially interested to read in Susanna Moodie's book "Life in the Clearing" (p. 141, Ch.3): 'Queen Anne presented the Mohawk Tribe with three large marble tablets engraved with the Ten Commandments, which after following them in all their ramblings, of one and half centuries now grace the altar of this church.'"

Let us inquire further next week about the religious history of Christ Church, Tyendinaga to discover how and why it came about.

INDIA PUTS ARMED FORCES ON ALERT

Steel Industry Boosts Offer To Avoid Strike

Johnson Administration Said Applying Pressure

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The U.S. steel industry is reported ready today to raise its offer of a two-per-cent pay increase for the United Steelworkers union in exchange for a strike postponement.

It is the first time negotiators for 11 major steel firms are reported ready to sweeten the pot in their high-stakes poker game with the union.

The development came amid signs of strong pressure from the Johnson administration, which believes a strike would be a disaster to the booming U.S. economy.

There is no indication of just how much the industry is willing to boost the ante to postpone Saturday's 12:01 a.m. strike deadline.

The industry's previous two-per-cent offer, amounting to an estimated five to seven cents, is a long way from union demands totalling 17.9 cents an hour.

While steel talks were in recess here Sunday, Chief Federal Mediator William E. Simkin was known to be working day and night to achieve a settlement.

Postponement would allow time for settlement of the contest for the union presidency between David J. McDonald, the incumbent, and Secretary-Treasurer I. W. Abel.

Abel is expected to be declared winner by union officials May 1 and McDonald is expected to challenge the outcome, asking the labor department to investigate and ask the federal courts to order a new election. This process could take months and it is a major complicating factor in the deadlocked steel talks.

Sniping From California Hillside, Boy Kills Two Motorists, Then Self

SANTA MARIA, Calif. (AP)—A 16-year-old boy, hidden by waving grass on a windy hillside, fired down with a high-powered rifle on passing cars for nearly U.S. 101 Sunday.

Michael Andrew Clark killed two persons, injured 11, engaged officers in a rattling, 1½-hour gunfire exchange and then took his own life by shooting himself between the eyes.

Authorities said the sniper's parents, Forrest and Joyce Clark of Long Beach, 200 miles south of the battle scene, reported the boy had run away from home Saturday night in the family car after an argument.

Killed by bullets from the youth's .30-06-calibre Swedish Mauser deer rifle, equipped with a telescopic sight, were Charles Christopher Hogan, 21, and Joel W. Kocab, 28.

Of the wounded, two were critically hurt—Bill Reida, 42, shot in the neck and shoulder, and his son, Kevin Dean, 5, shot in the head. The child remained in critical condition after brain surgery. Another son, Kim Allen, 3, was also shot in the head but not seriously hurt.

Mrs. Lucille Reida, 44, who suffered minor wounds from flying glass and metal, pushed her husband aside and drove the car out of range, even though she told officers later she had never driven before in her life.

Officers fired from behind a barricade provided by a truck driver Lloyd Ritchie, 41, who crouched low over his wheel and drove his oil-tool rig directly into the youth's rifle range. The boy shot himself.

Claims Pakistani Troops Attack Western Border

Defence Ministers Call Personnel on Leave

From AP-Reuters

NEW DELHI (CP) — India placed its armed forces on the alert today and recalled all personnel on leave as Defence Minister Y. B. Chavan declared that large Pakistani forces were attacking along India's western border.

Chavan told Parliament a brigade—about 5,000 men—of Pakistani infantry, supported by tanks was attacking Biar Bet, about six miles inside territory claimed by India in the disputed Rann of Kutch area.

He said Pakistan's forces attacked Biar Bet Sunday night but were beaten off.

"This morning's news," said Chavan, "states that Pakistan is again attacking Biar Bet with a brigade of infantry and a sizable force of armor."

Chavan told Parliament he ordered the alert because of "Pakistan's action both in the Rann of Kutch and in ordering general mobilization."

DENIES ORDER

But Pakistan denied it had ordered mobilization of its forces and said the fighting resulted from an outbreak of firing by Indian troops.

Chavan avoided use of the word mobilization but it appeared that was what he has ordered for the Indian forces.

"Pakistan had to take swift retaliatory action last night in the Chad Bet area of the Rann of Kutch following repeated firing on its positions by the Indian army," a Pakistani government spokesman said. He said Indian guns were "silenced" with heavy Indian casualties.

A Pakistani defence ministry spokesman said in Karachi that a report broadcast by All-India Radio that Pakistan had ordered mobilization was "baseless and mere fabrication."

"We have, on the contrary," he said, "evidence and reason to believe that the Indians have alerted armored divisions for a move towards the West Pakistan-East Pakistan border."

The ministry official claimed the Indians are also concentrating naval ships close to the Gulf of Kutch under cover of exercises and that general orders have been issued to their merchant ships to keep away from the area.

A Pakistani note handed to the Indian deputy high commissioner in Karachi suggested the immediate withdrawal of the Rann of Kutch, followed by withdrawal of all armed forces of both sides.

The note claimed Indian bombers had violated Pakistani air space and that India's "inflammatory and highly colored accounts" of events in the area were worsening the dangerous situation developing between the two countries.

British India was partitioned into sovereign India and Pakistan in 1947, and the frontier along the Rann of Kutch was never delimited. The east-west mile barren salt waste, flooded during the monsoon season when it is impassable, is flanked by oil deposits under the wasteland have given it new importance.

Bill On Senators Is Ready

OTTAWA (CP) — A government bill to set a retirement age for senators is expected to be the first item of business today when Parliament resumes after its 23-day Easter recess.

Although such bills are secret until their introduction, it's likely to be along the same lines as one that was introduced last year but never reached a third reading stage.

Arrival of the measure was forecast in the throne speech at the opening of the 1965 session. It said a measure "to establish an age of retirement from the Senate" was planned.

Last year's proposal would have set an automatic retirement age of 75 for all future appointees to the upper chamber. Those already there were appointed for life and draw $15,000 a year.

But the 1964 bill also provided that present senators over 75 would be given a choice of continuing in office or retiring on a pension. About a dozen senators are well into their 80s and probably would feel compelled to take the pension and make way for younger men.

MAY COMMENT

The afternoon debate — or what's left of it after the oral question period — will give the Opposition its first opportunity to comment on the proposal.

The evening sitting will be taken up entirely with Finance Minister Gordon's budget speech and initial Opposition criticism of it.

Coincidentally, the Senate measure is coming up in the House at a time when the Senate itself is in adjournment. Senators wound up their pre-Easter business April 6 and voted to take a holiay until May 4.

Should the Commons pass the Senate bill later this session, it's not expected to get through every stage today — it would still have to go before the Senate itself in order to become law. The senators could be expected to give it a rough handling and might kill it.

However, the Senate's power to block legislation is limited and the government could force the issue if it decided to.

It's not yet clear whether the government plans to continue the Senate bill debate Tuesday and Wednesday's six - day budget debate is due to open Thursday after the Opposition has had a chance to study Mr. Gordon's proposals thoroughly.

No Evidence Offered on Murder Charge

KINGSTON (CP) — Kenneth Harber, 21, of Montreal, who had been charged with capital murder, was freed today when Crown Attorney J. E. Samson offered no evidence during a magistrate's court hearing in magistrate's court.

Harber, had been charged with Harry Moore, 25, of the Montreal area, with the Christmas Eve slaying of Paul Lawrence, 31, who was shot at La Salle Park, near Kingston during a brewers' retail store holdup attempt.

Moore was remanded for one week on a charge of capital murder.

The evidence we have against this accused appears to failed to coincide with exhaustive identification procedures," said Magistrate P. E. D. Baker.

Sightseers Fill Roads In Emerson

EMERSON, Man. (CP)—The curious flocked to Emerson Sunday and caused more problems than the rising floodwaters of the Red River they came to see.

The river level edged up slowly but the full impact of the flood crest was not expected until today. It had been expected Saturday.

Sightseers arrived Sunday by hundreds, their cars churning up clouds of dust on streets above the highwater line. Sometimes cars blocked traffic.

Frank Muirhead, provincial flood control co-ordinator here, said traffic caused more problems than the water. About half the business section of this town of 930 just north of the North Dakota border was under water.

Late Sunday the river level here was 785.45 feet above sea level. It had moved from 785.32 in 12 hours.

EXPECT HIGHER LEVEL

Today's crest, or high point of the flood, is expected to mean another six inches of water here. Emerson is the first Canadian point to get the Red River crest. The river runs south through Winnipeg and empties into Lake Winnipeg.

At least three business places had water on the floors, but all had equipment and were raised well above the water level. About 12 homes were evacuated last week because they were cut off by the rising water.

Pumps continued to operate around the clock, keeping water levels down in basements and in the town's sewer system. Mr. Muirhead said the situation was well under control.

At nearby Canadian City, a tank car of drinking water was shipped in because of fears that the local supply could soon also be contaminated. Farmers were using their boats to get to and from town.

Armed Forces Split

SANTO DOMINGO (AP)—Dominican Air Force planes today strafed barracks and positions of army rebels seeking to return former President Juan D. Bosch to power. There was no report on casualties.

The planes took off in support of Brig.-Gen. Elias Wessin y Wessin, whose tank force is bottled up at the San Isidro Air Base outside this capital. Wessin is opposed to Bosch's return, although he apparently had consented to the removal of the civilian junta headed by Donald Reid Cabral.

Rebel troops blocked off approaches to the capital from San Isidro.

The provisional government, set up by the rebel military commanders after their take-over Sunday, announce that Wessin had been ordered discharged as commander of the armed forces.

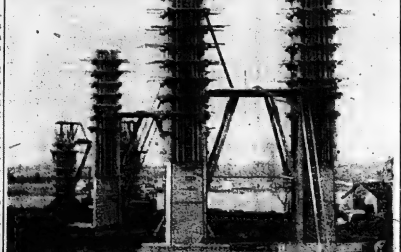
Rebel leaders said they intended to restore Bosch to power. He was ousted in September, 1963.

READY TO TAKE OVER

In San Juan, Puerto Rico, where Bosch has been in exile, he was reported waiting in Hispaniorant for clarification of the situation in his homeland. He told reporters he understood that Dominican Air Force plane would take him back when order is restored "as said, however, he had received no word.

(Reports in San Juan were that the airport at Santo Domingo was closed.)

The air force and old guard military elements demanded that a military junta rule this small Caribbean republic which divides the island of Hispaniola with Haiti.



Air force P-51 Mustangs strafed the presidential palace Sunday and the 16th of August Fort Camp—headquarters of the rebel officers—outside the city.

Donald Reid Cabral, chief of the ousted civilian junta and Ramon Caceres Troncoso, the military junta spokesman, apparently were being detained in the palace. They issued statements of organization that they would return to private business life.

Rafael Molina Ureña, former president of the Chamber of Deputies under Bosch, was installed by the rebels as provisional president until Bosch's return.

Eight times since dictator Rafael Trujillo Molina was assassinated in May 1961, the government has been overturned. Bosch took over Feb. 27, 1963. Seven of the propeller-driven Mustangs are shot down by machine-gun fire from the palace grounds during the attack on the palace. The pilot's fate was not known.

No one was reported hurt by the strafing, but an uncon firmed report said three soldiers were killed in the air attack on the rebel officers' camp.

SKYWAY PYLONS at the site of the new high level bridge over the Bay of Quinte at Deseronto are beginning to soar into the air. The "Quinte Skyway" will clear the water by 90 feet to allow passage of boats up and down the bay. Picture is taken looking north from the Prince Edward county shore.

North Vietnamese Battalion Fighting as Unit in South

SAIGON (CP)—U.S. authorities said today that at least one battalion of the North Vietnamese Army has infiltrated into South Viet Nam and is fighting as a unit.

It was the first time that U.S. officials have said that any unit of the North Vietnamese Army were fighting as such in the south. Previously U.S. officials have said that North Vietnamese changed their unit designation after infiltrating into the South and joined existing Viet Cong units.

Earlier the official Vietnamese news agency announced that the battalion had been located in Kontum province.

A U.S. spokesman said that the bulk of the intelligence that this unit was in the country had come from a defector who underwent two lie detector interrogations.

Meanwhile, U. S. and South Vietnamese planes kept up their raids against Communist targets in North and South Viet Nam.

About 45 U.S. Air Force jets struck another bridge in North Viet Nam today and also attacked road and rail traffic north of the border.

U.S. naval aircraft sank a North Vietnamese patrol boat in spokesman announced.

The air force jets dropped about 50 tons of 750-pound bombs on the Bai Duc Thon bridge about 160 miles south of Hanoi, which also was hit by American planes Sunday. Pilots reported severe damage. The nie Matthies, 8, were hurt seri- ously. Both remained in the 150-foot long, three-span steel bridge but it was not dropped.

Carnival Ride Claims Third Child Victim

DETROIT (AP)—A carnival thrill - ride claimed its third child victim Sunday as demands were made for new safety laws at amusement places in Michigan.

Nancy Lee Matthies, 8, died in hospital of injuries suffered Saturday on a carnival's Sky Comet.

Killed outright were Sharon Hawks, 14, and her brother, Grant Thomas Hawks, 12, in the collapse of a revolving steel arm holding a bucket-type seat.

Two other children, Nancy's sister, Susan Raye Matthies, 10, and the girls' cousin, Jan-hospital.

GREETED WITH SCREAMS

TORONTO (CP)—The Rolling Stones arrived here Sunday night and performed for 25 minutes before 12,000 screaming teen-agers at Maple Leaf Gardens. The Stones are a British rhythm and blues group like the Beatles. At the end of their performance, several hundred of the audience, mostly girls, broke the police line in front of the stage. They didn't get through but several girls fainted.

U. S. Reserves Right To Use Small Atomic Devices In Viet Nam

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is holding open the option of using small nuclear weapons against North Viet Nam if it becomes necessary, but there is no prospect they will be used under present circumstances.

The U.S. government, it has been learned, feels it should use whatever weapons are necessary to achieve the objective of ending Communist aggression against South Viet Nam.

U.S. officials decline to say under what conditions nuclear weapons might be brought into use. There is no chance that even nuclear weapons of a tactical battlefield nature would be used against Viet Cong guerrillas infesting South Viet Nam.

But there is a strong belief that full Chinese participation—especially with major ground forces—might force a decision on use of the nuclear weapons.

In this connection, it is understood that:

1. As the war now stands, U.S. forces have far from exhausted the stockpile of conventional, non-nuclear weapons that can be used effectively.

2. The government is aware that any decision to use nuclear weapons might risk escalation of the conflict to include participation of the Soviet Union and other major powers;

3. There is also the realization by the government in contemplating using such weapons that possible gains would have to be balanced against conceivable losses. One fear is that use of nuclear weapons in North Viet Nam might create radioactive fallout drifting down to South Viet Nam, killing the innocent and friendly there.

Basic U.S. policy in Southeast Asia rules out the idea that there is a privileged sanctuary for the Communists — either physical, such as the Chinese border, or the kind that would be created by an absolute decision to rule out use of nuclear weapons.

For the present, the expectation is that the present bombings will continue. Although there is no claim that they have reduced substantially the infiltration of men and supplies by the Communists into South Viet Nam, there is the belief they have slowed much infiltration.

Two Women In Hospital After Crash

A two-car crash at Catherine and Cedar streets Saturday sent two women to hospital with minor injuries.

Mrs. Mathew Penney, 29, of 151 Station Street and Phyllis Kinnear, 54 Ritchie Street, were released after treatment for cuts and bruises at Belleville General Hospital.

They were hurt when a car driven by Mr. Penney, 35, crashed into an automobile driven by Harry Juby, 22, of 183 Dunbar Street.

Setting City Hall Clock Takes Patience and Time

Set your clock ahead Saturday night?

Not much of a chore, is it, to do so.

Unless, of course, the changes you ring toll the time for an entire city.

Then the job takes patience and time. Particularly when the timepiece involved is the biggest in Eastern Ontario — namely the massive mechanism that measures out the minutes in Belleville's city hall clock tower.

Resetting the machinery was the job of city jeweller Gerry O'Connor and watchmaker Ed Imhoff.

To do the job meant a succession of treks up and down the old clock tower since the works bell and clock faces are located on three separate tiers.

The job of readjusting the 90-year-old machinery was not without some delays and hitches.

However, the city today officially is launched on Daylight Saving Time.

Incidentally, despite all that has been said about the old timepiece, both professionals expressed themselves satisfied that its mechanism is without basic flaws.

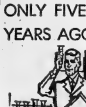
Elks Entertain Midget Group Hockey Assoc.

On Saturday evening the Elks' Lodge of Belleville played host to the entire midget division of the Belleville Minor Hockey Association and the parents of the players.

Following the cold-plate supper, prepared and served by the ladies of the Order of the Royal Purple, Auxiliary of the Elks, Brother Keith Gordon presented a trophy to Brother Don Francis, coach of the Elks' Black team, the division winners and to captain John Cole. Brother Maurice Sine introduced all the players to the guests as well as several officials of the Minor Hockey Association. Mr. Ross Soules thanked the Elks for their hospitality and for the fine job done for the boys and other charitable works.

The evening was rounded off by a display of dancing by Miss Cheri Walford, films and a social evening.

LOCAL LODGE WINS



On Sunday afternoon the annual competition for the Hinchliffe Trophy was held in the Belleville Elks' Lodge Rooms. Although five lodges in the district are eligible to compete only Picton were able to put in a team to challenge Belleville. Picton put forward a fine effort, showing the assembled members that they had come to win but the judges gave Belleville the edge making them winners for the third year in a row.

Following the competition a buffet lunch was served and a social hour enjoyed by all.

AWAY WE GO! — Balanced on boards, city youths roll away Sunday afternoon with new-found sport that puts emphasis on thrills, speed.

Skurfing Fad Is Catching Local Teeners' Enthusiasm

In Ottawa they call it skurfing.

In Montreal, it's skate-boarding.

In Belleville, no certain title has been hung on it.

Whatever the name, the latest fad for outdoor distractions is catching the enthusiasm of local teenagers.

It's a fad that adapts the attractions of the surf-board and the roller-skate to a single unit.

Its enjoyment calls for teenagers to balance on a small 18-inch board mounted on roller-skate wheels and propel themselves — usually downhill.

Finding suitable spots to practice the pastime in Belleville is the greatest difficulty encountered thus far by enthusiasts.

Traffic hazards rules many likely spots offbounds. The dryland surfer runs the risk of whizzing down a hill, erupting on a public street and becoming a fatal-accident statistic.

Many another likely incline is barred to the pastime by the objections of private owners.

And landlords aren't the only ones protesting the sport.

In other centres serious words have been spoken on the overall safety factor of the pastime.

However, local teenagers are taking to it with delight—as yesterday proved.

With ideal weather they sought out suitable grounds to whizz away the afternoon with their skurf boards—or skate boards.

Fire Destroys Brick House In Thurlow

The Belleville Fire Department spent a busy weekend, answering a total of eight alarms.

There were two minor fires Friday. A flooded oil burner Friday morning caused slight damage to a Dundas Street home, and a garage fire at 37 Isabel Street was well under control when firemen arrived.

Firemen received a call from Latta Saturday about a grass fire but it was put out before they arrived.

At 2 a.m. Sunday, a brick house on the 3rd concession of Thurlow was destroyed by fire. The house was owned by F. M. Carscallen and occupied by Hugh Dunbar and Wayne McPherson. The bulk of the fire was reported to have been in the kitchen of the one apartment and was eating through the wall into the other apartment when firemen arrived.

Sunday afternoon, firemen were called for a brush fire at 18 Allens Gardens and a marsh fire at 417 Station Street.

Police Officer Badly Beaten Making Arrest

A crowd watched Saturday night outside a Victoria Avenue restaurant while a police officer was severly beaten while breaking up a fight.

Two men were charged as a result of the fracas, which was broken up only on the arrival of other officers.

Constable Sam Morgan later required hospital treatment for serious facial injuries. He received a broken nose and had several teeth knocked out.

Clifford Leroy Sharpe, 29, of Toronto and formerly of Belleville, has been charged with assaulting an officer. Joseph Orville Dubroy, Belleville was arrested for creating a disturbance.

Police said constable Morgan was attacked after he arrived on the scene of a fight outside Gerry's Steak House.

He had broken up the fight and had placed one of the participants under arrest when a man lunged unexpectedly out of the crowd and struck the officer.

The constable attempted to fight off his assailant while still holding onto the man he had arrested.

Police said a crowd of about 50 stood and watched while the officer was beaten.

Finally, to defend himself he had to release his captive. He was still battling to subdue his attacker when the crew of a police cruiser arrived, broke up the fracas and started making arrests.

Constable Morgan was later released after emergency treatment at Belleville General Hospital.

YOUNGSTERS WATCH as barn goes up in flames on farm of Clifford Reid, R. R. 4 Belleville. Cause of fire is not known.

Cattle Bolted to Safety But Pony Lost in Fire

Cattle last night bolted to safety as fire gutted a barn just east of Belleville on Highway 2.

Cause of the blaze, on the farm of Clifford Reid, R.R. 4 Belleville, was not known.

Lost in the fire was an eight-year-old pony, 2,000 bales of hay and 1,000 bales of straw.

Mr. Reid said 31 head of cattle, being housed for city dreyer Mike Levine, fled the barn as the blaze erupted shortly before nine p.m. The building was burning out of control when city firefighters arrived and it was first feared the cattle had been lost.

However, they were later found wandering in a back field.

The blaze was spotted first by the children of neighbor Tom Smith, who owned the pony. Mr. Smith raced to the scene but heat barred his attempts to rescue the pony.

Mr. Smith said the fire was centred in the top of the barn when he first saw it.

Orangemen Must Parade Union Jack With New Flag

Eastern Ontario Orangemen have approved resolutions supporting the Union Jack and warned lodges against only flying Canada's new Maple Leaf flag.

The resolutions were passed as the lodges wound up their three-day convention in Belleville during the weekend.

A spokesman said the convention affirmed a resolution to "support and maintain the Union Jack."

The lodges also called for retention of "God Save the Queen" as Canada's national anthem.

He said all lodges carrying the new national flag on parade must also fly the Union Jack. Otherwise they will be barred by the Orange Association.

In final business the lodges also elected Godfrey Barr of Napanee, as Grand Master for Eastern Ontario.

Other officers are: Rev. A. E. Jasler, Douglas, Deputy Grand Master; Jackson Wildman, Manotick, junior Deputy Grand Master; Leroy Heeney, Ottawa, grand secretary; Thomas Davidson, Ottawa, assistant secretary; Fred Bateman, Stirling, treasurer; James Bosk, Ottawa, grand marshal; A. A Wonderful Light

Nattie Amelia Rushness met Ben Foster on a day. She married him the following Tues- in Christmas.

This is not one of those modern teen-age ages which today's social workers deplore. Foster, (she never found it necessary to ge husbands), is now 98 years old. She says never regretted her elopement many years t does one good to read of somebody like Foster, who had the courage of her con- ons when she was young and still knows, she is old, that the thing to do with life is joy it.

Most of us know in our hearts that all the ments which we, as parents, can advance vor of long engagements are a lot of "bog- ." Quite frequently they do not even let the g couple "get acquainted." We have all people about whom we knew more after a acquaintance than we ever learned about s in years as schoolmates. Even when long gements do let boy and girl learn more about other, it is not always an unmixed blessing. many of our enterprises, of the heart, or e pocketbook, would we have undertaken if ould have foreseen just what we were get- into?

People talk about undying love, but everyday idence is that, even if it lives, it withers some- The time to swallow the bitter with the . While the sweet is being tasted for the time. Marriage at the end of a long en- ment could be like Christmas morning after as ransacked all the cupboards in the house- inspected all the presents stored therein. Their elders will still advise the young et hasty marriage. This is the voice of th, safeguards against bitter disappoint- s, which spring from getting lost in a cloud ey illusions.

But does anybody know a better starting for a happily married life than a throne on nd of rosy illusions?

"I burn my candle at both end, it will not the night;
But, lah, my friends, and, Ho, my foes, it s a wonderful light."

And sometimes, as with Mrs. Nattie Foster, married on two days' acquaintanceship, it last the night, even until the hundredth

And what wedding blessed by parents and l workers can match that one, pray tell us?

Oh, Come Now!

Hon. Keiso Roberts, the distinguished ex- rvillan who is Ontario's Minister of Lands Forests, must live in a dream world.

Speaking to the Sales and Ad Club here, he some hard things to say about the nation's , which is his privilege.

One of his complaints was that "top execu- of the press" and "so egotistically sure" the policies they advocate are right "they rarely support or even adequately report a idate or incumbent who runs counter to ."

The charge of failure to report adequately rt is a valid point, perhaps justified.

But failure "to support" candidates on e policies are opposed to the ones advocated he paper?

The day publishers support men who espouse ies which the publishers believe unwise the ishers will be ready either for heaven or an e asylum. It certainly will not be safe them out unguarded in this wicked every- world.

Long Wait

The Canadian Authors Association says that the Diefenbaker and Pearson governments "neglected the nation's interest" by failing es on the report of the O'Leary Commission publications.

We suspect that the authors are concerned t their own interests, as well as those of the on. They would be amongst the first bene- ries of any change in policy which would nd Canadian magazines and periodicals.

This, though, does not mean that the Asso- ion's complaint is without foundation.

The commission reported in May of 1961. four years will have passed without action.

only defence which will stand up is that her the Conservative or the Liberal govern- ts believed any action should be taken.

y has been so long that any action now will ely provide proof of neglect of duty. Nor d one dismiss such neglect as unimportant. ice delayed is justice denied.

Hot SEATO

Art for Propaganda's Sake

Hamilton Spectator

A clever painter can be one of the world's most successful developers of set opinions. Would we worship the nude figure so much if great artists hadn't immortalized it so often in paint? And would the common cow continue to give us a feeling of lassitude if she hadn't appeared front and back so many pastoral landscapes? One wonders what we might think of her if she had been pictured leading cavalry charges.

It is in the field of out-and-out propaganda that the clever artist can be terribly effective. By painting a glorious action-packed scene that magnetizes the eyes of thousands of on-lookers, he has given himself what is vulgarly called a captive audience. Having got his audience, he can, by the use of artful skuldruggery, deliver his propaganda message.

This is the sort of thing that some artist in China has been getting away with lately. Not to the concentration of the People's Party of Peking, prize-winning painting depicting jolly children and that sort of delightful sure - fire attention-getting subject matter, but coaxed and recopied and sent around the land as an example of modern Chinese art worth watching.

What upset the Communist machine was that the artist had buried some clever anti-Communist propaganda in the painting. Banners were shown that had anti-Peking messages written on them. Upon closer look, the painting contained clever pro-Nationalist propaganda. It was thereupon removed from circulation. The same fate may befall the artist.

History records numerous instances of similar propaganda success, stories in the field of painting. In the Thirty Years War, most of the messages that aroused feeling against the enemy were contained in religious paintings that lampooned the Spaniards.

The great Goya, even when in the employ of King Joseph Napoleon, painted devastating caricatures of the horrors of life under the French occupation. "The Caprices" and "Disasters of War" were both inspired by French brutality and stiffened the spine of the conquered to resist.

Picasso's great Spanish civil war paintings were horrible in more ways than one, and were propaganda against fascism. They were most effective, and still are shown by peace groups as propaganda against any war.

A great artist like a great modern dress designer, can cleverly propagandize against anything he dislikes, or in favor of anything he desires. Hence the anti-feminine look of so many dresses. And hence, if you look for it, the anti-establishment propaganda inherent in so many modern paintings. . .

Approximately 20 district farmers availed themselves of the opportunity this week to view the talkie technicolor film "The Science of Milk Production" which was shown in the local city hall under the sponsorship of J. S. Mackenzie and Son, local feed dealers. The film was shown was prepared by W. E. Peterson, professor of Dairying for the University of Minnesota.

Stated to be the most interesting film ever produced on dairying, the pictures indicated the cause of mastitis in the dairy herd and the procedure to combat it, and also graphically illustrated how a cow milks.

Dr. Peterson has done considerable experimental work in connection with dairying and his picture illustrates a mechanical cow which produces milk through the injection of hormone from a cow's body.

Strictly Personal

'True to You Dear, After My Fashion'

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

I was waiting for a friend in a cocktail lounge (what a ghastly name) when I overheard the man in the next booth say to his female companion, "Well, yes, I am married . . . but only technically." And I wondered in what other way one can be married except technically!

His remark — apparently a prelude to seduction — reminded me of what a statistician told me some time ago. It seems that when the last census was taken in Poland, in 1960, it turned out that there were some 200,000 more married women than men in the country!

Since each man can have only one wife, there was considerable confusion among the census-takers. Upon closer examination, it was found that the definition of "marriage" was taken by the people to include various forms and states of alliances.

For instance, separated couples were considered divorced, whether or not divorce decrees had yet been awarded. Therefore, one man-in-a-house often told the census-taker they were married, while common-law husbands claimed to be single. Separated wives considered themselves married, while common-law husbands did not. The validity of the statistics depended both on what the census-takers called "marriage" and on what the people themselves called "marriage."

While this discrepancy of 200,000 more "wives" than "husbands" is amusing or depressing, depending on your point of view, it should alert us to adopt a more skeptical attitude when similar statistics we are offered almost daily.

The "unemployment" figures are a good example in our own country. Different organizations will offer figures that are millions apart, because "unemployment" means different things. Some figures include those temporarily between jobs; those just graduated from college; those who have dropped out of high school; wives who once worked but have no job no longer; and so on, in a dozen categories.

Marriage is a legal state, and employment is an economic state—but there are social and psychological factors at work in both areas that make them difficult to tie down. "Delinquency" and "the crime rate" are in the vague and ambiguous concepts, because no two communities or states agree on what they are, or have the same method of reporting them.

Is the death rate from heart disease increasing? Is homosexuality increasing? Both answers seem to be "yes" — but, again, is the first a matter of better diagnosis, and is the second a matter of greater freedom of expression? The world of statistics and the world of reality do not always revolve in the same orbit; and until we can agree on our meanings, our charts will remain sharply meaningless.

Dear Dr. Molner: What causes a receding nipple? The condition has existed for nearly 20 years. Is it common in middle-aged women? — J. L.

A receding or retracted or inverted nipple may be a significant danger sign, or it may mean nothing of consequence.

Because it may be a danger sign, it causes a good deal of concern among women. A lot of needless, and ceases once the worrier has a doctor evaluate the condition.

The retracted nipple can be a defect in development; the nipple is small and tends to be recessed; not harmful, except that it can pose a problem in breast-feeding.

The nipple may be normally developed but a quirk of the muscular or fibrous tissue can cause it to be depressed. Again, no cause for alarm.

The chronic mastitis (inflammation of small glands in the breast) can cause a nipple to recede. Mastitis, if it is severe and continuing, can be thoroughly annoying, but it is not something to cause fright.

Finally — and this is the dangerous category — cancer of the breast can cause retraction or inversion of the nipple. In such a case, however, we would find other signs, too, primarily a lump which could be easily felt. The inverted nipple, in such a case, would just be one more warning sign, and the lump would (or certainly should) be noticed before the nipple begins to show symptoms.

Since you have had this condition for 20 years, I would suspect it to be benign.

But when a nipple, previously normal, begins to invert or recede, then it is wise to have your doctor investigate it immediately.

Dear Dr. Molner: Please send me the booklet, "Acne, the Teen-Age Problem." I enclose the necessary 25 cents in coin and a long, unstamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Is there anything my daughter can take to clean the bloodstream. — Mrs. N. G.

Acne isn't a result of anything wrong with the bloodstream. Read the booklet carefully, because it will tell you the real cause of acne, along with how to prevent or minimize it. Most of these measures are quite simple; their success depends on keeping at them every day without fail.

Dear Dr. Molner: What are the dangers of having marital relations after giving birth two weeks before? Can one become pregnant again so soon, or is one more apt to? — Mrs. C. E. W.

The danger, that soon, is chiefly the risk of infection of uterus and cervix. Ovulation (and hence the possibility of pregnancy) rarely occurs until about four to six weeks after delivery. The first menstrual period after delivery may not (but sometimes may) be associated with ovulation. In short, after menstrual periods resume, you may have another month before pregnancy is possible, but you can't absolutely count on it. Pregnancy can occur while breast feeding is continuing, contrary to one old wives' tale.

Dear Dr. Molner: My husband has had trouble with slow urine flow for some time — not painful but just a dribble. He had a check-up about two years ago and his prostate was O.K., but he didn't mention this slowness to the doctor. — Mrs. T. H.

The prostate can enlarge in two directions. In one direction it is easily noticed in a physical examination. In the other direction (toward the bladder) it is not so easily noticed. Enlarged prostate can, however, interfere with urine flow. Your husband should return to the doctor and report this diminished flow. It could be prostate enlargement but if so, it is in the early stage now, rather than when greater obstruction has developed.

April 28, 1965 . . .

Guernica, the traditional centre of the Basque culture, was devastated by German and Italian aircraft 28 years ago today — in 1937 — in the Spanish Civil War. It was the first mass bombing raid ever made on a civilian community. At first, no one except Loyalist sympathisers believed reports of the attack, and Roman Catholic authorities denounced them as mere Communist propaganda.

1814 — Artemis "Artemus" Ward, American humorist, was born.

1904 — Paul - Emile Cardinal Leger of Montreal was born.

First World War

Fifty years ago today — in 1915 — Italy declares its support of the Pact of London and signed a secret agreement to co-operate with the Allies; General Botha advanced deeper into German Southwest Africa.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today — in 1940 — the Allied forces in Norway attempted to prevent the two German armies from joining together; passengers on a Japanese ship said they had seen the liner Queen Mary arrive at Cape Town on a secret voyage.

Capitalism Among Reds

Vancouver Sun

The Soviet magazine, International Affairs, has openly admitted what Western economists have long been aware of: the rate of growth in the Communist camp is slowing down. The hope of overtaking and surpassing the capitalist West in production is fading rapidly.

The magazine's writers blame backward agriculture, materiel shortages, planning errors, poor co-operation among members of the Eastern bloc for the slowdown. But they also do not supply the whole answer in the opinion of acute Western observers.

The declining growth rate is not necessarily a sign of failure. It is due in part to a realization on the part of communist authorities that quantity is not everything but quality counts as well. The virtues of competition even under Marxism are being studied and in several of the Eastern countries, including Russia, Czechoslovakia, and even East Germany, there is a new tendency to experiment with profit mechanisms.

Hungary is in fact leading way in this direction in 1962-63 and was the first of the Comecon countries to try the character istic capitalist device of treating interest on capital.

It would be a mistake to look on the new trends as capitalism in the making. It is capitalist methods that these states are interested in. While there is considerable opposition from the old guard, there is likely to be the younger generation of communists will push on with the hope of finding the right mixture of national-planning and freedom of the market.

The trends are of interest to the West because the greater the industrial efficiency achieved by these Eastern nations, the more attractive they will become as possible trading partners.

Let There Be Darkness

Ottawa Journal

The poet John Gower wrote many centuries ago that:

Be how so that the day be long
The dark night cometh at last.

But here in 1965 is a British industrial designer, Mr. Beverly Pick, saying:

"If I had the power to do so I would floodlight every building, large or small, in cities and suburbs, as a matter of course . . . Imagine how our cities would be transformed."

Imagine!

But most people we hope, will be appalled by the thought of having to go out in the country not only for peace and quiet, but darkness too. Samuel Butler had something when he said:

Night is the sabbath of mankind,
To rest the body and the mind.

Edmund Burke wrote that "darkness is more productive of sublime ideas than light." Let the tv a room and light it, Mr. Pick; but for the rest of us let the shadows of the evening steal across the sky.

Lunch-Pail Life

Montreal Star

The British Labor Party was once described as owing more to Methodism than to Marx. In a like manner, Mr. Wilson's latest budget provides a near perfect example. Living it up is the British of 1965 is thought to be a very costly business. In one easy gesture the government has put paid to the lovely lush expense account society. Our British colleagues will no longer be able to claim tax relief for lunches, dinners and of course they will be fortunate enough to know overseas buyers.

Another North York high school tried to find a mathematics teacher, brand new or experienced, to head its mathematics department. No takers.

Is anybody saying that the teacher shortage has been met?

Unique Answer To Family Car Problems

More and more families with working wives are finding that one car is not adequate for their transportation needs. While two cars might solve the problem, this is expensive -- especially when teen-age members of the family are driving as well.

The ideal solution is the Honda Motor Scooter. For as little as $4 a week any family can have the advantage of a second car. For example, dad may drive the Honda to work while mom drives the family car to her job or goes shopping. In fact, it is not uncommon to see women going to the grocery store with the handy Honda.

Teenagers are finding the Honda Motor Scooter a dependable means of transportation at low cost (up to 250 miles per gallon.) For dad, this is less expensive than letting son use the family car.

To learn more about these wonderful machines, drop in to Booth Radio and Television Limited, 170 Front Street. They'll be glad to show you all the wonderful advantages of driving a Honda. Ap22-26

Champions Lead National Auto-Rally

By CLAUDE HENAULT

SUDBURY (CP) — Defending champions Klaus Ross and John Bird, were officially leading Sunday at the end of the first-day 768-mile Montreal-Sudbury leg of the cross Canada 4,000-mile rally.

At the mid-day point of the leg, the number of entrants was unofficially reduced by a minimum of eight cars and perhaps by as many as 10.

This provisionally reduced the number of competitors entered in the six-day Montreal-Vancouver rally to a maximum of 56.

There were 65 cars at the starting lineup Saturday night in Montreal but one of the unofficially - announced entrants was eliminated because he did not have the correct insurance.

The team of Kalus and Bird is again competing in a factory-entered Volvo.

The mid-day point was at Lindsay, Ont., some 65 miles northeast of Toronto and 495 miles from the Montreal starting point, following the round-about back-road route covered by the rallyists.

SLIGHT PENALTY

The Klaus-Bird team made it to Sudbury with only a 20-point penalty. The team of Paul McLennan and John Wilson, driving a factory-entered Ford Mustang, was unofficially reported as being in second position with 20 penalty points at Lindsay.

McLennan is from Toronto and Wilson from New Dundee, Ont.

Scott D. Harvey of Dearborn Heights, Mich. and Bob Molman of Bedford Heights, Ohio, also held second place at Lindsay, but they were delayed later Sunday to have brake delayed by an unscheduled trip into the mud at the side of the road in the second part of the event.

Harvey and Molman are driving a factory-entered Valiant Barracuda.

David Pearson, of the United States, No. 3 man in the North American Stock Car Racing Association standings last year, was retired from competition at Lindsay. He went off the road twice during the day.

63rd Wedding Anniversary And Birthdays Celebrated

Saturday was a big day for Mr. and Mrs. Geddes Bradshaw, of R.R. 4, Belleville, who were guests at a dual celebration in honor of their 63rd wedding anniversary and their respective birthdays.

The actual wedding anniversary was late in March, but because the principals were feeling a bit indisposed the celebration was postponed to coincide with their birthdays. Mrs. Bradshaw observed her 82nd birthday Friday, while the groom of 63 years observed his 85th birthday on Sunday.

The wedding anniversary-birthday party was held in the parish hall at Point Anne and was attended by approximately 50 family members and close friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Bradshaw are from the Marlbank area where the couple were married back in 1902. Mrs. Bradshaw is the former Martha Jones.

FARMED MANY YEARS

Shortly after their marriage the couple moved to the Front Road, east of Belleville, where for many years they carried on a farming operation. Much of the farm land has now been sold to the Canada Cement Company.

The couple have one son, Glen Bradshaw of Foxboro, and six daughters, Mrs. Charles (Gertrude) Bedford, R.R. 1, Belleville; Mrs. Ross (Bessie) Spencer, R.R. 2, Moscow; Mrs. William (Gladyse) Stone, Barrie; Mrs. Roy (Alma) Snell, Redmersville; Mrs. Walter (Audrey) Taylor, Belleville R.R. 4, and Mrs. Donald (Lois) Leeming, Thurlow township.

SIX-LAYER DINNER DISH

Continuing with the oven dinner topic today because I'm convinced readers like it — and I do too — I have a six-layer dinner for you. This came from Helen H. who writes: "I want to share my wonderful versatile recipe because you can change the meat in so many ways — chicken and turkey leftovers, hamburger or what have you".

So we made this dish according to Helen's basic directions.

MONDAY

Dinner Menu

by Mary Moore

Braised Short Ribs of Beef; Mushroom Gravy; Rice; Broccoli; Celery Hearts; Canned Pears; Cheese and Crackers; Coffee.

SIX-LAYER DINNER (adapted from Helen H.'s recipe — serves 5 or 6 generously):

Into a very large buttered casserole (we used an oval one 8-3/4 x 3" which has a lid) place: 3 layer thinly sliced raw potatoes (4 medium), cover with a layer of thinly sliced onions (4 medium-small), cover with a layer of thinly sliced carrots (4 medium), cover with one 12-oz. package fresh frozen peas, sprinkle with 1 teaspoon salt over all, cover with 1 lb. link sausages (we had the 1-lb. package which contained 17 pork sausages), dilute 1 can condensed tomato soup with half can of boiling water and pour over all.

Bake, covered, at 350 deg. Fahr. for 1 hour. Then turn sausages over, remove cover and bake 1 hour and 15 minutes longer, turning sausages over once again during this period to brown them nicely.

NOTES:

1) Helen H. adds that if you are using leftover cooked meat in place of sausages you could use this for any leftover gravy you might have, mixing it into the tomato soup or substituting it, suitably diluted, for the tomato soup. 2) Drained canned peas could be used instead of fresh frozen. 3) Raw cut green beans could be added or substituted for the fresh frozen peas. 4) I have not tried the following suggestions, but think kernel corn, cut celery and sliced mushrooms would be all good substitutions or additions in this versatile dish.

Now you vemfiresome girls can have a heyday trying your own variations, but if they are good let me know.

To serve with this 6-layer dinner I made

BUTTERSCOTCH RAISIN BREAD PUDDING (bake at the same as six-layer dinner):

Into a buttered medium casserole put 2 cups stale ½" bread cubes and ½ cup raisins. In a frying pan melt 3 tablespoons butter or margarine and add ½ cup light brown sugar and stir until blended. Dissolve ¾ teaspoon baking soda in 2 cups milk, and slowly add to sugar mixture, stirring until blended. Remove from heat and cool. Beat 2 eggs with ¼ teaspoon salt, then stir the milk mixture into them. Pour over bread cubes and raisins, let stand ½ hour, if possible. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. about 45 minutes to 1 hour. Serve with milk or 10% cream.

Ann Landers

Wife Enjoys Her Husband's Spankings, Both Are Sick

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I'm so shocked I'm not sure I can express myself properly. A lovely woman I've known for years (we are both in our middle 30's) confided that her husband spanks her when she displeases him. She asked if my husband ever spanked me. When I told her I would never tolerate such an indignity she looked at me as if I was crazy.

Then she went on to defend her husband by saying he never spanked her unless she deserved it. "And," she added, "I usually feel a lot better after it is over."

ANN LANDERS

I always thought only low class slum dwellers hit their wives. This woman is well-to-do and prominent. Is something wrong with him — or with her? — STILL SHAKING.

DEAR STILL — All kinds of men hit their wives and they live in mansions, on suburban estates — and in the low rent districts.

There is indeed something wrong with him, and with her, too.

A woman who tolerates a spanking is as sick as the man who gives her one. It's both strange and interesting how these physical kooks seem to find each other. My guess is that they rehearse a little before marriage.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I spent the weekend with a relative in Montana. Opal was always lackadaisical and not what you'd call the world's best housekeeper. I didn't go there to inspect her house, however, and this is not what I'm writing about.

One afternoon Opal prepared a meat loaf. She called the dog in from outside and let him lick the bowl clean. I almost got sick. When Opal put the bowl in the dishwasher with the family's dishes I felt this was too much. I told her I thought it was a very unhealthy thing to do because dogs that run loose get into garbage cans and heaven knows what all.

She said I was out of my head, that scalding water and soap will kill almost any germ. She seemed so positive that I'm eager to hear your answer, — SAL.

DEAR SAL — My answer wouldn't mean much, so I checked with an authority and got his answer.

A Chicago doctor of veterinary medicine said your Montana relative is correct — that scalding water and soap will kill almost any germ. He said further that it's O.K. to let the dog lick the cooking bowl and then wash the bowl with the family dishes.

So there's your answer Madame — right from the vet's mouth. I still wouldn't do it, regardless of who said it was all right, simply because the whole idea is repulsive to me.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My wedding is several months off but I am planning ahead so everything will be perfect. I asked my dearest friend to be my matron of honor six weeks ago. She accepted.

Sunday we were at the pool together and she told me she didn't think she should dive off the high board because she is four months pregnant. This means she will be in her eighth month when she stands up for me.

She knew she was pregnant when I asked her. Do you feel it was fair of her to accept? My mother is mad as a wet hen. — UNDECIDED.

DEAR UN — You said you asked this young woman to be your matron of honor because she was your dearest friend. Does being pregnant make her less dear?

Maternity clothes today don't look very different than some of the latest fashions. In fact it's hard to tell what's cooking under the shifts and the Empress line gowns. Help her select a dress that hangs loose, and you hang loose, too, Doll.

Luci Johnson Escorted by RMC Cadet

NORFOLK, Va. (AP)—President Johnson, saying "I just couldn't resist the temptation to come down here and participate," crowned his daughter Luci Saturday as queen of the 12th annual Azalea Festival.

The president waited until mid-day before announcing that he would fly from Washington to see the climax of the three-day festival. Mrs. Johnson and their elder daughter, Lynda, who was the Azalea queen in 1961, accompanied him.

The weather left something to be desired. The temperature was around 50 and there was a chill wind.

Only a few azaleas were blooming in the 160-acre wooded garden near the Norfolk airport where Luci and her court of 14 princesses from NATO countries were crowned, beneath the flags of their countries on a grassy terraced stage.

WEARS IVORY

While Luci wore ivory, the NATO princesses were in vivid pinks—the colors of azaleas that normally are in striking bloom here at this time of year.

Johnson reviewed the princesses lined up for the crowning and said they were "lovely representatives of all the NATO allies."

He also said he looks forward "to the growing strength of NATO," which has its Atlantic command headquarters here.

Luci was escorted during her festival reign by Officer Cadet J. D. C. Harries of the Royal Canadian Military College, Kingston.

Escorts from U.S. military colleges traditionally have escorted azalea princesses, but this year festival officials wanted greater NATO participation. They approached the Canadian embassy in Washington. It invited, RMC, which proposed Harries, 22 - year old cadet wing commander.

Mrs. Harlow spoke briefly and welcomed the visitors. She also expressed thanks to the hostess, program convener, soloist and all others taking part.

STUDY CHAPTER

The study from "This is Brazil," was presented by Mrs. M. Clancy who took members on a visit to a slum area, which is called "favela". Here again is seen the mixture of races and the lack of discrimination. Here also though are the problems of low income, poor health, poor housing and large families.

Mrs. Smith read an informative article from "Outreach," which vividly showed Maria Lucia, a graduate of the Methodist Institute in Sao Paulo as she carried out her daily work in the slum community in the state of Bahia. Daily she fights ignorance, superstition, poverty and hunger. Through it all the church is working, bringing a new faith and a new hope.

Mrs. Clancy asked the question "What can we do?" Five ladies responded with prepared answers.

The study closed with silent prayer, not only for the Brazilian people living in these areas, but also for the workers, who are striving to bring God's message.

Mrs. Bridges served lunch and a social half-hour was enjoyed.

Successful Living

Perfect Father Imperfect, Family Unity Is Solution

DEAR DORIS — My 13-year-old brother has been bringing home perfect papers in maths and science. Instead of being congratulated and encouraged in this work, my father is constantly telling him that it's about time, and why didn't he do it before.

He did the same thing with me at that age until I finally said "What's the use of trying?" and got in with the wrong crowd. I don't want the same thing to happen to my brother.

My father pays little or no attention to his home life, leaving everything for my mother to handle. When out, he dominates every conversation and makes an idiot of himself. Talking does no good as he thinks he is perfect.

Since I've been married I have seen all this clearly from a distance. But how can we make him see it? — UNRESPECTING DAUGHTER.

DEAR U.D. — It would probably take a revolution. Next best thing is to alert all the sufferers as to the true nature of things. Little Brother (who must be a white, bless him!) needs to know, from you and his mother, that his father's view of things is jaundiced.

Mother must come to see it's no fault of hers if he suffers from foot-in-mouth disease. Soon Perfect Father will be outnumbered by Smart Son, Reliable Wife and U.D. And they won't have any time for him.

DEAR DORIS — Some time ago one of the ministers of our church showed me the article entitled "The New Curriculum, The Church and Science."

May I commend you for having had this prepared for distribution. Sympathetic support from persons such as yourself is a considerable help. This particular article I feel is especially valuable in that it is by an "older" minister (Dr. Outerbridge) and his word is much more acceptable to some of the elderly people with whom we find difficulty about this matter than that of a younger person whose words would just be dismissed. — ANOTHER REVEREND.

DEAR REVEREND — You're right. We've had 750 requests for the letter. Dr. Outerbridge's prestige and age lend dignity and acceptability to his ideas, in a very special way. The fact that this president emeritus of a large Christian university in Japan follows through with a scholarly logic which no ivory-tower scientist can gainsay is a special delight to me.

(Is it better to put up with misunderstandings, or to begin talking things over? Let Doris help you see the light.)

Susanna's Family Fare

TULIP BED OR RICE PADDY?

Dear Susanna: Now that spring floods and mud flats are all around the house, my family — no one is excluded — has the choice of pretending we are living in Holland or Japan. Either way they remove their shoes at the door and slip into a pair of penny paper slippers I have placed there in a little stack.

Lately, however, I've relented a little and they have a third choice. When they come in the back door, instead of removing their shoes they can wash and dry the soles of them with the equipment provided. This includes a pail with water, plus a small brush, a sponge and an old towel. These articles are neatly arranged in a white shine box beside the pail in the back porch.

After a day or two the whole procedure came naturally to all of us. Now we are wondering what imbecile would ever allow people to blithely track mud and dirt in all over the fresh, clean floors and carpets! In fact we simply can't understand why everyone in this country isn't doing what we are. — "Mother et al."

I know one family that is — OURS! — SUSANNA

WRAP IN WOOL

Dear Susanna: Anyone who suffers from simple leg cramps should try to obtain relief by wrapping a woollen sweater around their legs. A piece of a woollen blanket will work as well.

It must be pure wool and not a synthetic material such as nylon. I keep an old sweater just for this purpose, and the leg cramps are relieved in less than ten minutes. I do hope this hint will be of help to someone. Enjoy your column so much! —Alice McDermott

Hull Loose; Hits Twice; Hawks Win

By JERRY GLADMAN

CHICAGO (CP)—Bobby Hull took advantage of a rare moment of freedom to fire the first of two goals and Chicago Black Hawks went on to thrash Montreal Canadiens 5-1 Sunday night in the fourth game of the Stanley Cup finals.

BOBBY HULL

It happened at the start of the third period with the score tied 1-1 and the Canadiens apparently beginning to gain the upper hand. But they still had 25 seconds to kill on a penalty to defenceman Ted Harris. Coach Toe Blake juggled his personnel before the faceoff.

Claude Provost, who had blanketed Hull effectively since the best-of-seven series began, came off the bench along with Henri Richard. Then Blake changed his mind and recalled them.

Twenty-six seconds later, the puck was in the Montreal net propelled by Hull's sizzling slapshot from 10 feet beyond the blue line. The Hawks rolled on to a 5-1 victory, squaring the series 2-2 as the clubs headed for the fifth game in Montreal Tuesday.

TAKE 14 MINORS

It was the first goal Chicago had scored all night against Montreal's formidable penalty-killing unit, even though Canadiens took 14 minors, along with a 10-minute misconduct sentence, to nine minors for the Hawks. But it was the one that counted.

Blake, who had to be restrained by his aides when he stormed onto the ice after the final whistle in an effort to berate the officials, wasn't answering questions about personnel switches or anything else.

"I want to see how much guts you guys have got," he snapped at reporters before barring his dressing room door. "Go ahead and write the game the way you saw it. I'll buy the paper to read it."

Rookie centre Fred Stanfield stole a face-off from Ralph Backstrom in the Montreal end and cruised in unmolested to give the Hawks the lead early in the first period. Canadiens captain Jean Beliveau deflected home a blue-line drive by defenceman J. C. Tremblay to tie the score in the second.

The Montreal penalty-killing unit suffered another blow after Hull's sizzling tie-breaker when Jim Roberts, one of its key members, took a misconduct penalty for protesting a two-minute roughing sentence by referee Vern Buffey.

HAY SCORES

Before Roberts returned, Stanfield stole another faceoff in the Chicago end and flicked the puck to Bill Hay, who fired it home from close range with Harris again serving time.

A second goal by Hull and one by rookie defenceman Doug Jarrett, both on breakaways, completed the rout in the game's dying minutes.

The game's earlier stages belonged to the Montreal penalty killers—Roberts, Jean-Guy Talbot, Tremblay and Terry Harper—who muffled the Chicago power play even on the three occasions when Canadiens found themselves two men short and mustered several dangerous counter-offensives in the process.

Montreal general manager Sam Pollock, deputizing for Blake in the post-game interviews, shared the coach's bitterness over the officiating.

"A joke is a joke," he said. "All I want is for the circumstances to be the same Tuesday night in Montreal. The officiating, the penalties and the crowd."

Glenn Hall, who finished with a total of 25 stops, made three key saves. He turned back wicked drives by Beliveau, John Ferguson and Yvon Cournoyer.

Diminutive Charlie Hodge, a last - minute replacement for Gump Worsley, who suffered a thigh injury in the pre-game warmup, finished with 23 saves.

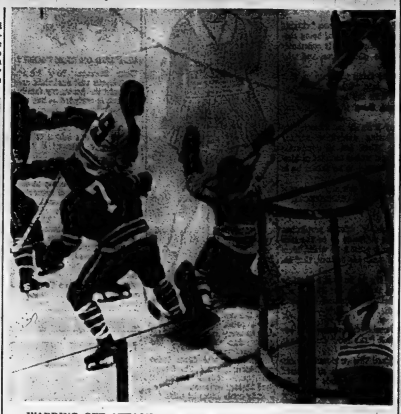
While the Canadiens were bitter over the officiating, the Hawks were elated over the win.

"This was the big one, "said Hawks owner Jim Norris.

"The one that can do it for us."

Coach Billy Reay had praise for his veteran netminder. "Glenn saved us in the second period," he said, referring to his saves on Beliveau and Cournoyer.

PLEASED WITH HULL



He was also pleased that Hull was able to break loose from Provost long enough to score his two goals, the first of the final round after his record tying eight in Chicago's semi-final series against Detroit Red Wings.

"It was nice to see Bobby get a couple, and I just hope our momentum continues."

The Hawks left by train for Montreal immediately after the game. The Canadiens boarded a train and weren't expected to arrive in Montreal until tonight.

COLOMBIAN WINS BOUT

BARRANQUILLA, Colombia (AP) — Colombian bantamweight champion Bernardo Caraballo, fourth in world boxing ranking, gained a split decision over Ronnie Jones of Chicago in a 10-round bout Saturday night. It was Caraballo's first fight since he was knocked out by Eder Jofre of Brazil in Bogota last November.

WARDING OFF ATTACK — Montreal goalie Charlie Hodge (1) deflects attempted score by Chicago Black Hawks behind net in first period of Stanley Cup playoff game. Black Hawks are Chico Maki (16) and Phil Esposito (7) and Montreal players include Terry Harper (19) and Jean-Guy Talbot (17). (AP Wirephoto)

Near Miss:—Cesare Maniago, 24-year-old goalie of the Minneapolis Bruins, has been named the Most Valuable Player in the Central Professional League for the 1964-65 season.

Maniago was the leading goalie in the circuit, playing 57 of the club's 70 games and posting a 2.75 goals-against average. He registered six shutouts, tops in the loop, as the Bruins finished in third place.

The long-legged 6.2 goalie, with the mournful look—he always reminded me of Cleo the TV beagle —will be remembered as a flash in the chain of goalies that played with the Belleville McFarlands world champions.

Born in Trail, B.C., he graduated from Toronto St. Michael's College Major juniors to the Chatham Maroons of the late lamented OHA senior "A" era.

The Flexible Cesare came here from the Kitchener Dutchmen on loan in the 1959-60 season to replace Gordie Bell who had suffered an eye injury. He was one of the shining lights of the Macs' clan that year.

The Dutchmen slated for the Olympic, recalled Cesare twice. He played 16 games with the Macs before the Kitchener team called him up for good. He compiled a 3.15 goals-against average with the Macs in the cellar, later beating them in a Dutchmen uniform and robbing his former team-mates on not a few occasions.

I interviewed the modest, quiet spoken youngster in his room at the Queen's Hotel. He was stretched out on the bed, his size umpteen feet hanging over the footboard almost a foot.

Maniago was never one to talk very much—especially about himself. I did more extraction than a dentist during a toothache epidemic.

However I did strike verbal oil with one question: "How do you like playing with the McFarlands?"

Cesare straightened his long legs, sat on the side of the bed—and made the longest speech of his tenure here.

"The Macs," he said, his face as solemn as that of a chief mourner, "are the best bunch of hockey players I ever played with."

Asked for elaboration, Cesare said "Everybody on the club knows I'm a rookie—and they're going all out to help me. Fellows like Wiener Brown, Floyd Crawford, Ike Hildebrand and others go out of their way to help me correct my mistakes—and teach me things I have not learned. I really appreciate what they are doing. If I make the Olympics team, a lot of credit will go to the Macs."

But Cesare was destined to become a frustrated young man. The veteran "Boat" Hurley got the Kitchener nod—and Cesare was out on the loan trail again, this time to the Chatham Maroons.

But he has some measure of recompense. The Maroons went on to win the Allan Cup that year, defeating, of all clubs, Maniago's hometown team from Trail, B.C. Meanwhile the Dutchmen went down to defeat at the Olympics.

Now at 26, Hector Maniago is a much travelled young hockey player. He entered the pro ranks with Toronto, playing seven games with the Leafs, 11 with the Sudbury Club and the defunct Eastern Pro circuit and the next season a full schedule with Hull-Ottawa where he earned his first MVP award.

In 1963-63 he wore the pads for four clubs. He played 14 games with the Canadiens, five for Quebec; one with Spokane and 28 with Hull-Ottawa. The next season he played 23 games, 37 with the Buffalo Bisons and six season-end games with Omaha of the CPHL.

Maniago was one of six goalies that performed for the McFarlands during the last season of senior "A" hockey here. Included were, besides himself, Gordie Bell, Turk Barclay, Bob Sonier, Chuck Adamson and Dick Dodds.

Dodds came from Kingston and proved a washout. Chuck Adamson, I believe, hailed from Peterborough, and was not much better.

However, he came up with the quip of the year. It happened in the Macs' dressing room with the boys trailing 7-1 after two periods.

Quoth Adamson: "You guys had better get on your horses. How do you expect me to get any place if you don't play better hockey than that?"

Mick Hits No. 4

By MIKE BATHEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

Houston Astros have played their first day game under painted panes—and found that the tinted skylights on their $31,000,000 indoor stadium may not have fully solved a glaring problem.

With the 3,456 panes in the roof of the Astrodome painted white in an attempt to keep out the glare of the sun, the Astros defeated Pittsburgh Pirates 5-4 in 11 innings Sunday, completing the first test of the new system without any of 16 fly balls being dropped.

MICKEY MANTLE

It seemed the problem had been solved. Paul Richards, general manager of the Astros, thought so. But there were dissenters.

"It is a lot better but there are still some problems," said Houston centre - fielder Jim Wynn. "I lost one ball but managed to find it."

"When the sun is really shining brightly I don't believe you'll be able to see the ball," said right-fielder Roberto Clemente of the Pirates, who pointed out that the day was slightly overcast.

"They need to paint it a darker color," suggested Pittburth leftfielder Willie Stargell.

"One thing for certain, you can't take your eye off the ball. I think they ought to paint it black."

FEW ESCAPE RAIN

In other action, Philadelphia Phillies defeated Los Angeles Dodgers 6-4, San Francisco Giants shut out New York 5-0 before the Mets took the nightcap 4-3 in the only National League games played. New York Yankees swept a doubleheader from Los Angeles Angels 3-2 and 1-0 in the only American League games played.

All the other teams were rained out.

The Astros pushed across the winning run in the 11th on a single by Bob Aspromonte, a pair of walks and Joe Morgan's single.

John Bateman hit a homer for Houston, his fourth, for a 3-1 lead in the fifth but the Pirates came from behind twice to tie it before Morgan's game winner.

The Phillies continued their hex over Don Drysdale, beating the Dodger right-hander for the ninth straight time dating back to June, 1962.

Dick Stuart drove in four runs for the Phillies with a double and homer as Drysdale was shelled for eight hits and four runs in five innings. Ray Herbert got the victory, his first as a National Leaguer.

John Marichal pitched a five-hitter for the Giants in the opener, getting the only runs he needed when Willie McCovey smacked a two-run homer off Al Jackson in the first inning.

SPAHN WINS NIGHTCAP

Warren Spahn, the Mets' 44-year-old left-hander, won the nightcap with a seven - hitter after keeping the Giants hitless for 5 2 innings. Rookie Ron Swoboda drove in three runs with a homer and double.

Elston Howard's run-scoring double in the sixth inning proved decisive for the Yankees in the opener. Whitey Ford chased in the seventh after allowing six hits and both Angel runs. Howard was the winner with relief help from Pedro Ramos.

Mel Stottlemyre throttled the Angels on three hits in the second game while Mickey Mantle's fourth homer, off rookie Rudy May provided the Yankee run.

In Saturday's National League games Chicago Cubs downed Milwaukee Braves 3-1, Cincinnati Reds whipped St. Louis Cardinals 6-3, the Mets nipped the Giants 7-6, Houston blanked Philadelphia 4-0 and the Dodgers crushed the Phillies 9-3.

In the American League the Angels topped the Yankees 6-3, Detroit Tigers defeated Minnesapolis Twins 7-4, Cleveland Indians bested Kansas City Athletics 5-2, Chicago White Sox slammed Washington Senators 8-2 and Boston Red Sox outlasted Baltimore Orioles 7-6 in 12 innings.

Eastern Allan Cup Champs

Sherbrooke Ousts A's

SHERBROOKE, Que. (CP)—Sherbrooke Beavers skated off with the Allan Cup Eastern final series Sunday with praise from coach Ted Power of the losing Woodstock Athletics.

"I would like to see them win the Allan Cup. They are a strong team, they have the legs and they used them against us," said Power following his team's 5-2 defeat and loss of the best-of-seven series in four straight games.

Bob Dupre led the Beavers' attack Sunday with two goals while Simon Nolet, Dino Mascetto and Bob Chevalier got singles.

Woodstock scorers were Jack MacIntyre and Gerry Striggle.

The score was tied 2-2 early in the third period but three rapid late goals put Beavers ahead.

Nelson Maple Leafs currently lead Warroad (Minn.) Lakers 2-0 in their best-of-five Western Allan Cup final with the third game scheduled for tonight.

The Allan Cup finals open in Sherbrooke May 3.

Winnipeg Winner at Georgetown

GEORGETOWN, Ont. (CP)—Winnipeg won the grand championship trophy at the International Bantam Hockey Tournament Saturday night by defeating Galt, Ont., 6-1.

Winnipeg earlier had defeated Guelph, Ont., 6-1 in the A section final.

In the semi-final B versus D division, Winnipeg downed Leamington 4-3.

OHA Annual Meeting

'Excellent' Future For Juniors

TORONTO (CP)—C. G. Patterson of Guelph, president of the Ontario Hockey Association, predicted an "excellent" future for junior hockey in Ontario, in his address to the association's 78th annual meeting here Saturday.

Mr. Patterson, concluding a two-year term as association president and 11 years on the executive, expressed the executive's concern over the falling-off in the numbers of entries in intermediate A, B and C categories.

He announced that a special meeting will be held this fall "to endeavor to increase the number of entries and organize new clubs."

Fourteen amendments to the association's regulations and constitution were carried, two defeated and one withdrawn.

Among the amendments dealt with was the interpretation of the association's emergency fund and the establishment of the regulations governing it.

The fund was set up to provide registered members with cash assistance for loss due to injury incurred during games and travel.

Treasurer Frank Buckland said the fund now stands at $11,300.

Officers for the 1965-66 season elected by acclamation were: Matt Leyden, Oshawa, president; C. C. Patterson, Guelph, immediate past president; Jack Devine, Belleville, first vice-president; Clarence Schmalz, Walkerton, second vice - president; W. A. Hewitt, Toronto, secretary and Frank Buckland, Peterborough, treasurer.

Other members of the executive elected were: James Crombie, Bowmanville; Frank Doherty, Therold; Donald Hughes, Stratford; Jack Oakes, Strathroy; and Cliffe Phillips, Newmarket.

Loop Ratifies Schedule

The seven-team Belleville and District Softball League accepted its 1965 schedule and cleaned up several other matters yesterday at the final pre-season loop meeting.

Team representatives were satisfied with the 18-game schedule drafted by league secretary Cliff Belch. It was accepted "as is".

League entries this season are: Trudeau Motors and Ellis Juniors, of Belleville, Madoc, Stirling, Tweed, Lonsdale, Bloomfield and Trenton Commercial Printers.

The schedule will open on Monday, May 17 and close on July 17. Each team will play nine home and nine away games. Playoffs will pit the first and fourth place finishers against each other in one semi-final, second and third in the other. They will be three-of-five affairs while the finals will be a four-of-seven.

Games during the opening week of the schedule have Trenton visiting Tweed (at Madoc) on Monday, May 17, Trudeaus at Stirling and Bloomfield at Ellis Juniors on May 18, Madoc at Bloomfield and Stirling at Trenton on May 19, Tweed at Trudeaus and Ellis Juniors at Madoc on May 20.

Bloomfield and both Belleville clubs will start home games at 8.00 p.m. sharp. There is a 10.00 p.m. curfew at the Picton diamond where Bloomfield will play home games. Ellis Juniors and Trudeaus are playing home games at the Belleville Fairgrounds. Madoc and Tweed, who both play home games at Madoc, Trenton and Stirling, will start home games at 8.15 p.m.

A complete league schedule is expected to be available to the public shortly.

League treasurer Allen Sills accepted the position of league statistician, requesting co-operation from all clubs.

A committee was formed, consisting of league executives members and team representative, to arrange a league presentations banquet and dance, likely on September 10.

The league thanked former executive member Ernie Simpson for his help to the league.

325 Minors Register For Softball

Some 325 players registered to play in the Belleville Minor Softball Association in that body's "Registration Day" held last Friday.

An association spokesman says, however, that there are still a number of positions for players left to be filled, especially in the bantam, midget and juvenile divisions.

Any players wishing to participate are asked to register at the Recreation Centre this week.

There is also a need for more umpires, coaches and assistant coaches and persons wishing to help out with any of these jobs are asked to leave their name and phone number at the Recreation Centre.

Plans call for the schedules to get under way near the end of May. Lists of teams in the various divisions are expected to be available within the next two weeks.

THE BOOK THEY SAID COULDN'T BE FILMED NOW A SCREEN SENSATION

(Advance)

"Fanny Hill: Memoirs of a Woman of Pleasure," the book the world said could never be filmed, has been completed and will open at the Park Theatre tonight for a limited engagement.

It is estimated that over 12 million readers have eagerly devoured the book since the 200 year ban has been lifted. "Fanny Hill" is a feature film by Albert Zugsmith starring Academy Awarded Miriam Hopkins, Cara Garnett, Alex D'Arcy, Walter Giller and Letitia Roman as Fanny.

A hilarious comedy of an innocent young lass who makes her way to London in the year 1748, Fanny falls afoul of evil companions who endeavor to lead her down the primrose path. Famed movie columnist Louella Parsons has acclaimed it "A female Tom Jones!" The haystack scene has been called one of the most sensational ever brought to the screen. Producer Zugsmith, who was responsible for the Academy Award-winning "Written on the Wind," has gathered a truly international cast with actors and actresses from Hollywood augmented by the most beautiful girls from Germany, Hong Kong, France, Italy, Finland and Sweden gathered to portray roles in "Fanny Hill: Memoir's of a Woman of Pleasure." The feature was written by Robert Hill based on John Cleland's famous novel. It is released by Famous Players Corporation.

AT THE BELLEVILLE DRIVE-IN — Lawman John Wayne suspiciously eyes Stuart Whitman, a reformed gambler, who has fallen in love with the daughter of an outlaw chieftain, in "The Comancheros," 20th Century-Fox's outdoor adventure, in color, now showing at the Belleville Drive-in Theatre. 2nd action-packed feature, also in color, "North to Alaska", features John Wayne and Capucine.

AT THE BELLE — "You Don't Need Me, You Need a Chiropractor!" Jerry Lewis takes a long look at the big feet in front of him on the operating table in this rollicking scene from his new comedy, "The Disorderly Orderly", showing Today and Tuesday at the Belle Theatre. Also included in the cast are Susan Oliver, Glenda Farrell, Everett Sloane and Karen Sharpe.

Goodman and Peggy Lee To Reteam After 22 Years

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—It was a meeting at the summit, a sentimental reunion of Peggy Lee and Goodtime Benny Goodman, in her penthouse apartment high above the Sunset Strip.

The famous pair met with director Nick Castle and members of Miss Lee's rhythm combo to plan her reteaming with Benny after a lapse of 22 years. It will take place next week at Melodyland in Anaheim, and aficionados of the swing era will consider it a historic event.

Such types, now pushing bravely through their 40s, can get choked up as they recall gawking bobbysoxers in the war years and listening to of Swing and the languorous tones of his beauteous blonde singer.

Peggy sang with Goodman for only two years, 1941 to 1943, but their collaboration remains a memorable one. It resumed recently when Benny dropped in to hear Peggy at Basin Street East in New York. He got up on the stand, borrowed a clarinet and noodled with Peggy through a few choruses of a Beatle tune, Hard Day's Night.

FANS LIKE IT

The audience went wild. "They'll love you come out and play Melodyland with me!" Peggy asked.

"Why not?" answered Goodman.

So here they are. If the engagement is a success, it may lead to more engagements together.

The whole thing started, Goodman said, when he and his wife dropped in for a nightcap in the Ambassador Hotel in Chicago.

"I heard this girl sing and right away I knew she had something," he said. "I was always looking for new talent, so I decided to give her a try."

Peggy continued the story: "The next day my roommate told me I had a call from Benny Goodman. I thought it was a gag, so I didn't return the call for two days. Finally she convinced me that Benny Goodman really had called me, so I phoned him.

Students Lightest Viewers According to Ratings

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—The college crowd is one group of television viewers often ignored by programmers in an industry that pays close attention to its audiences.

Surveys indicate that they are among TV's lightest viewers, presumably because the students are too busy with their books, sports and dates to watch television.

A young friend, now winding up her sophomore year at a well - known women's college, says that even if Nielsen does not know about it, she and her classmates watch a lot of television.

She says their current favorite show is Peyton Place, the ABC evening soap opera.

In second place, according to this small and unscientific sampling, is Shindig, ABC's rock 'n' roll show, particularly on nights when their favorite singing groups are appearing—and their favorite singing groups are the Beatles, the Beach Boys and Peter, Paul and Mary.

NBC's Moscow man got an interview with the latest Russian cosmonauts and the network will telecast the interview as an hour-long news special May 14, along with some color films of that famous Walk in Space.

Recommended tonight: 1945, CBS, 10-11 EDT—Recollections of events and decisions made 20 years ago, with Eric Sevareid narrating.

If the 35 - degree Toronto weather cooled Tony Horton's heat as the Maple Leafs of the International Baseball League made their home debut Saturday, he found a way to solve the chill problem by Sunday afternoon.

The Los Angeles native blasted a fast ball out of the stadium for the Leafs' only run as the league - leading Atlanta Crackers won the opener 2-1, and collected two hits and scored two runs as the Leafs won the second game 3-1.

Maybe the sudden change of climate had been responsible for Horton, the $100,000 - bonus player, not getting a hit in four trips to the plate as the Leafs won Saturday's home opener 4-3 against the Crackers.

In other action Saturday, Buffalo Bisons defeated Jacksonville Suns 6-4, and Columbus Jets defeated Syracuse Chiefs 5-2.

BEAT BUFFALO

Sunday, Jacksonville downed Buffalo 7-3, Columbus edged Syracuse 3-1 and 6-5, and Rochester beat Atlanta twice, their doubleheader 7-6 and 3-2 over Toledo Mud Hens.

Stan Johnson sparked the Leafs' Saturday, collecting four hits in as many trips to the plate and driving in the winning run with a double in the seventh.

Larry Maxie, who played with Toronto last season, gave up two hits before being relieved in the eighth inning to defeat the Leafs in the top half of Sunday's doubleheader.

Relief pitcher Bob Duliba put out a seventh - inning uprising to salvage the Toronto win in the nightcap.

Napanee Wins 'C' Title at Brampton

BRAMPTON (CP) — George Bell Arena became the first Toronto team in five years to win the grand championship at the Brampton novice hockey tournament when it defeated Cannington 5-4 Saturday.

Cannington, Class D champions by virtue of a 6-4 win over Bolton, defeated Class C winners Oakridge Acres 4-2 in the grand championship playoffs.

Toronto earlier won the Class A championship with an exciting 1-0 victory over Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

Oakville edged Richmond Hill 3-2 in the Class B final, and Napanee won Class C honors by nipping Goderich 5-4.

Pitching — Mel Stottlemyre, Yankees, pitched a three-hitter for his second victory against one defeat as New York edged Los Angeles Angels 5-0 and wrapped up a doubleheader victory Sunday.

Batting—Ron Swoboda, Mets, doubled in one run, then drove in two more with a homer, leading New York to a 4-3 triumph and a split of their doubleheader with San Francisco Giants.

After we paint the car, we paint the paint.

And before we do either to a Volkswagen, we bathe it.

We bathe it in steam, we bathe it in alkali, we bathe it in phosphate. Then we bathe it in a neutralizing solution.

If it got any cleaner, there wouldn't be much left to paint.

Then we dunk the whole thing into a vat of slate gray primer until every square inch of metal is covered. Inside and out.

After the dunking, we bake it and sand it by hand.

Then we paint it.

This time the VW puts the paint on itself. The car is electrically charged to attract paint. Molecule By molecule. You can't even see the paint going on.

It just seems to grow on the car. Thick and even.

After another baking, we wet-sand the finish. By hand. And another coat of paint is put on.

Then we bake again. And sand again. And add another coat of paint. The fourth.

Of course, every step we take in making a Volkswagen involves the same attention to detail.

And there are 5,320 inspectors along our production line to keep us from getting rusty.

NASTY
AGAIN

Contrary to its affect on most people, spring fever merely invigorates Fairly Nasty-minded Belleville citizens. As the air grows balmier, the Nasty Man's desire to restrict, or somehow put a damper on everything and everybody seems to confound my competitors with lower prices and incentives.

A lookout at new sub-divisions discloses the average price around $18,900. Some are higher, some are less, if you're worthy enough. Our new sub-divisional, I was to offer NHA approved homes from cozy brick bungalows at a price shattering $13,500. The north west corner of College-Sidney is the scene of our operations. Our price is $13,500 and No Sell if we could give quality. Quality is the key word. Quality bungalow for only $13,500 the busy bee builder agreed to as the lure. Quality for Belleville to shed an industry.

If you need a government-approved low down payment brick bungalow with hard wood floors, full basement, oil, gas or electric heating and the low trimmings for only $12,500 — Phone the Nasty price shaking agent at 962-5188.

Goderich
Peewee
Tourney

GODERICH, Ont. (CP)—Two western Ontario teams and one from the Toronto area shared the semi-finals trophies at the 10th annual Young Canada Week peewee hockey tournament here over the weekend.

Atwood, the only one of the three which had won a championship there a year previously, claimed the D title. St. Marys won the B crown and Thornhill, from the northern boundary of Metropolitan Toronto, came out on top in the C competition.

Earlier in the eight-day tournament, which attracted 87 teams from Ontario, Quebec, Manitoba and Michigan in a total of 84 games, Georgetown won the A championship and Toronto Mine Safety Appliances the A-A title.

It was the 10th championship in 11 years of competition and the event is a row for Metro Toronto teams in the A-A classification.

Atwood, which has to travel 10 miles to Milverton to get ice time, edged Dorchester — another community without a rink of its own—3-2 in the championship game.

It was the first title for Atwood here since 1952 when it claimed the same crown. The previous year, Atwood, which has had an entry every year of the tournament except the first one in 1950, also won the C title before classifications by population were adjusted.

St. Marys, which has been coming here for 12 years, finally was rewarded with the B series championship by beating Arapeiler, Ont., 5-3 in the title game.

Nelson BC Two Up On Lakers

NELSON, B.C. (CP)—Nelson Maple Leafs scored three times in the last 15 minutes to beat Warroad Lakers 6-3 Saturday night and take a 2-0 lead over the Minnesota club in their best-of-five Western Allan Cup hockey final.

Third game of the series is here tonight.

Walt Peacosh, Dave Rusnell, Ken McTeer, Buck Crawford, Carl Chachka and Murray Overson each fired single goals in the Leafs.

Bill Matthews, Bill Christian and Roger Christian replied for the Lakers.

Canadian Tenpin Record Set

WATERLOO (CP)—A Canadian tenpin record was set here Sunday when Lou Matassa of Windsor, Ont., posted an 806 triple in the semi-final round of the Canadian all-star tenpin bowling tournament.

Officials said the 806 figure is a record but they could not recall the exact figure of the former record.

Matassa won first prize of $300. He averaged 318 for 12 games. In second spot at 217 was Jim Brace of Scarborough, Ont. Brace won $125.

Third was Bob Moore, also of Scarborough, who won $80.

There were 45 entries in the two-day tournament.

Three Share Major Awards At Barrie

BARRIE (CP)—Three teams shared the major awards as the 1965 All - Ontario Little Nhl tournament ended Saturday. Nine other trophies were contested on the final day of the 27-team 36-game competition.

Barrie earned the Dixon S. Grant Trophy, symbolic of the basic championship, by defeating Orillia 6-4.

Orillia shut out St. Catharines 2-0 to earn the peewee championship and the Bill Garner Trophy. The over-all title collectors qualified by topping Weston 3-1 in the AA final while St. Catharines edged Barrie 1-0 in a tight A final.

Peterborough was successful in the junior A (atom) series, earning the Jack Garland Memorial Trophy for the grand championship. They posted a 2-0 score against Orillia. Petes knocked off Welland 5-2 in the AAA bracket final while Orillia stopped Toronto Bert Robinson 2-1 in AA play to earn the AA sweep for Orillia in the AA championship round population group.

Toronto Faustina managed two victories in the consolation grand championships. The West Toronto area club overcame North Bay 3-2 in sudden-death overtime to take Junior A consolation laurels. They added the NHL consolation trophy through a 3-2 count against Peterborough.

Faustina missed out in a bid to capture consolation prizes when they fell 3-1 to North Bay in AHL action.

Portland Western Champs

VICTORIA (CP) — Portland Buckaroos captured the play-offs to win the Western Hockey League championship with a 5-0 shutout over Victoria Maple Leafs Saturday night with a 5-0 aggregate in the best-of-seven series.

Buckaroos won the best - of - seven series four games to one.

The five-game rout made it a season sweep for Hal Laycoe's rugged crew who added the Lester Patrick Cup to a first-place finish in the regular season.

In wrapping it up Saturday night Buckaroos got a goal from Cliff Schmautz in the first period and two from Gerry Goyer in the third period, the last into an empty net.

Buckaroos made their way to the final by defeating Vancouver Canucks in a semi - final that also went to five games. Leafs, who finished fourth in the schedule, eliminated Seattle Totems in seven.

The championship was the second for the Buckaroos since they re-entered the league in 1961. They were champions last year but were eliminated in the semi-finals each of the last three seasons.

The Trots

TORONTO (CP) — George Volo scored his first stakes victory at Greenwood Raceway Saturday in the $4,410 Swanee Stakes.

The gelding, owned by Dr. John Podley of Arnprior, Ont., came from behind in the stretch to beat favored Sonny Creed.

George Volo had an unimpressive record in his first two years of racing and Findley bought him last spring for $3,500. Last year he banked $8,004 as one of the most improved racers on the Ontario circuit.

The gelding paid $11.10 and combined with second place Sonny Creed for a $19.90 quinella.

Anzac Veterans Greeted Warmly on Anniversary

From AP-Reuters

GALLIPOLI, Turkey (CP) — Anzacs made another colorful dawn landing Sunday on the beaches of Gallipoli where 50 years earlier they had stormed ashore in the ill-fated campaign against the Turkish foe.

But Turkish guns were silent this time as 70 old Australian and New Zealand warriors landed on Artburn beach.

Warm embraces and friendly handshakes replaced the bullets and bayonets of a half-century ago.

The Anzac veterans reached Artburn beach near the Gulf of Saros in small boats from the Turkish liner Karadeniz. They had come in on small boats from battleships 30 years ago.

This time weeping Turkish veterans of the campaign greeted the Anzars with boxes of candy and happy hugs and kisses.

KISS SAND

Some of the Anzacs hit the beach to kiss the sand. Others went down on their hands and knees to dig for rusty old bullets.

Their landing Sunday started Anzac Day ceremonies here to commemorate the vals bid by the Allies to force the narrow Straits of the Dardanelles between the Asian and European shores of Turkey and knock the Turks, siding with Germany and Austria-Hungary, out of the First World War.

Thirty-thousand men died in the campaign and 74,000 were wounded.

Canadian, British, French and German veterans also were on hand for the ceremonies.

Taking part were eight campaign veterans from the Newfoundland Regiment and Newfoundland's Premier Joseph Smallwood and Welfare Minister Myles Murray and Col Leonard Cornerford, present regiment commander.

GALLIPOLI, Turkey (AP) — A persistant group of Canadian veterans, accompanied by Premier Joseph Smallwood of Newfoundland, made the longest pilgrimage of any foreign delegation attending Sunday's commemoration of the 50th anniversary of the Gallipoli campaign.

Smallwood and 10 other Newfoundlanders, including eight veterans of the campaign, made a determined cross-country trip to the Suvla Bay area, where 22 of the 34 soldiers lost by the Newfoundland Regiment here are buried on the peninsula.

The small party, most in their 70s, bounced on wagon trails pulled by tractors to reach the spot.

42 Fatalities Over Weekend

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The death toll across Canada climbed to 42 at the end of the weekend with highway mishaps claiming 30 lives.

A Canadian Press survey from 6 p.m. local times Friday to midnight local times also showed two drownings two deaths in fires and eight miscellaneous fatalities.

Quebec and Ontario led in highway deaths with 11 each. Ontario also reported one fire death and five persons killed in miscellaneous accidents, including four Americans who were apparently asphyxiated in their luxury yacht.

The provincial breakdown:

New Brunswick—two miscellaneous; Saskatchewan — one traffic; Manitoba—two traffic; British Columbia—three traffic, one drowning, one fire, one hanging; Alberta—three traffic, one drowning.

Y's Activities

"The social work of the Y.M.C.A. is of vital importance in the community as it allows young people to attend functions at which they know they will meet a respectable type of person," says Miss Janet McLean who reigned as Miss National So-Ed Queen for 1964-65. Miss McLean will be in attendance at the Spring Dance Friday, April 30th at the 'Y' where she will crown this year's Miss Belleville So-Ed Queen.

The six young ladies who were nominated at last week's session of So-Ed were Miss Gloria Nagy, Miss Lynda Diggins, Miss Margaret Babcock, Miss Donna Mason, Miss Glenda Covey, and Miss Judy Trusler. The girl crowned will have her expenses paid to the National So-Ed Conference being held at Geneva Park, Lake Couchiching during the May 24 weekend.

The dance committee has acquired the M.C. talents of Dave Charles of CJBQ and the culinary talents of Mrs. McKenna, the YMCA's caterer. With the YMCA auditorium decorated in beautiful spring colors and So-Ed friends from Peterborough and Brockville present Friday should be a memorable evening.

The new So-Ed executive for 1965-66 consists of president, Bob Fraser; vice-president, Ross McCoy; secretary, Lynda Diggins; treasurer, Gordon Hamilton; program co-ordinator, Margaret Babcock; social committee chairman, Donna Mason; lectures and discussions, Colin Wilcox; interests and films, Grant Elliott; registration, Glenda Covery, and national representative, Judy Trusler.

All young adults (18-35) are welcome.

Canadian Press Members Ready To Hold Meet

TORONTO (CP)—Newspaper executives from across Canada are gathering in Toronto for the yearly series of meetings at which news and business problems are discussed.

Annual meetings of the Canadian Press and the Canadian Daily Newspaper Publishers Association are scheduled, as well as meetings of directors and committees.

Directors of CP, the news cooperative owned and operated by the country's daily newspapers were meeting today. The annual meeting of CP members is Tuesday.

Lord Caradon of St. Cleer, the British minister of state for foreign affairs and permanent representative at the United Nations, addresses the annual Canadian Press dinner Tuesday night.

Stirling Amateur Painters Arrange Show in Library

There is painting talent in Stirling and district.

This has been discovered by members of the Stirling Public Library Board, who over the weekend staged an art show for Stirling district amateur painters.

Twenty painters contributed 73 paintings for the show which was set up in the library. The three-day show opened on Saturday and will be closed this afternoon.

Contributors to the show were mainly Stirling district adults with a flair for painting, but some students of night school classes held in the Stirling high school last winter showed their paintings.

It is the first art show attempted by the Stirling Library Board and has received encouraging response.

AMAZED BY RESPONSE

The Stirling Library Board consists of Mrs. Douglas Patterson as chairman with six members, including Reeve Don Rodgers. Mrs. Carleton Potts is librarian.

The response by Stirling district painters in contributing to the art show amazed library board members.

"When we first considered the show we wondered if we would have enough paintings to fill the space," said Mrs. Potts. "Then when the entries started coming in we wondered if we were going to have enough space for the paintings."

Newspapers Praised by Montreal Editor

KITCHENER (CP) — Walter O'Hearn, executive editor of the Montreal Star, praised Canadian newspapers in a speech Saturday night to the 11th annual Western Ontario Newspaper Awards Dinner.

Mr. O'Hearn said:

"The behaviour of the press in general in Canada is serious and responsible.

"I can go into any number of cities and towns in Canada and the local newspaper will brief me pretty well about what is going on in our world that day."

In the United States and the United Kingdom, however, he said he would not be so well briefed by reading local newspapers.

He recalled that during a British general election he had to buy five national dailies plus the daily of the town of about 100,000 he was visiting "to get a fair idea of what was going on."

Output To Rise By 7 Pct.

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — A robust seven-per-cent increase in Canservices in 1965 was forecast by Finance Minister Gordon Monday night. This was the prediction by the Gross National Product to more than $50,000,000,000 for the first time.

The GNP, a measure of the economy's over - all strength, was $47,000,000,000 in the 1964 calendar year, an increase of 8.9 per cent over 1963. This rate of climb was the greatest on record and far outstripped the finance minister's forecast of 5½ per cent a year ago.

"We can be confident the recent rates of economic growth will continue well into the summer, although the outlook for the latter part of the year is less certain," Mr. Gordon said in his budget speech to the Commons.

In other parts of his speech, before heading into an outline of domestic tax policy, he said:

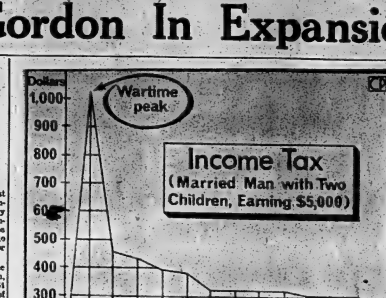
—Canada cannot expand indefinitely on foreign capital to finance expansion and must avoid excessive international payments deficits.

—British exporters are expanding their markets in Canada, which in turn must find new markets in the United States.

—A general review of Canada's tax structure still must await publication of the delayed report of the royal commission on taxation next autumn.

—It is evident more needs to be done in financing higher education in Canada, though just what should be done and in what way are unresolved questions.

—Federal-provincial fiscal arrangements must be reviewed in the next 18 months and a new formula devised for the five-year period starting in 1967.



Mr. Gordon lauded Canada's performance in 1964 and said: "After a long period of troublesome deficits the nation's finances now are under firm control."

The seven-per-cent increase in national product in 1965, he said, will see increases of five per cent in real output and two per cent in prices. Prices have remained relatively stable, inflation averaging two per cent a year.

The fact the GNP last year outpaced the original forecast of a 5½-per-cent gain contributed to larger-than-expected federal revenues and cut the budgetary deficit to $82,000,000 from the $453,000,000 deficit he estimated in his March 16, 1964, budget speech.

At the outset of his third budget speech since becoming finance minister on formation of the Pearson Liberal government April 22, 1963, Mr. Gordon

TAXES DROP — Finance Minister Gordon disclosed a 10-per-cent drop in personal income tax for Canadians Monday night. It becomes effective July 1, 1965. Graph traces the rise and fall of income tax from $96 in 1939 to a wartime peak of $1,062 and down to the 1965 figure of $286 for a married man with two children earning $5,000. Budget Assailed By Many Critics

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Most of the reaction to the 1965 Canadian budget brought down Monday night by Finance Minister Gordon was disappointing—as exemplified by the reaction of A. A. Cumming, president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, who said it was "a serious error of judgment."

One of the few who thought it was a good budget was Premier Louis Robichaud of New Brunswick, who said it was "indicative of the confidence of Canadians in their bright future."

Mr. Cumming said: "From the manufacturing industry's point of view it's a damp squib budget. Mr. Gordon's failure to remove the sales tax on production machinery and equipment is a major letdown and a serious error of judgment."

Premier Robichaud said the 10-per-cent reduction in personal income taxes—a move which got a mixed reception—"is important to the individual, but of equal importance to the business community is the overall tax reduction that will release $650,000,000 for consumer spending."

British Columbia's Premier W. A. C. Bennett disagreed with his counterpart from the Maritimes. He described the budget as "very disappointing."

He said the reduction in personal income taxes was not enough. "I looked for a greater reduction in income taxes, especially the lower brackets."

Mr. Bennett said he expected Mr. Gordon to "rectify his error" in imposing an 11-per-cent federal tax cut on building materials.

The Canadian Chamber of Commerce said it was disappointed there were no corporation tax cuts, but it welcomed certain other provisions.

Chamber president A. J. Little said in a statement from Montreal: "While business welcomes the reduction in personal income tax rates which will stimulate demand, it is disappointed that Mr. Gordon did not see fit to give some corporate tax relief."

The budget proposal for the $1,000,000,000 Canada Development Corporation, financed by a government - inspired mutual fund selling $5 shares to the public, calls for "close examination," the chamber said.

"While the objective in encouraging investment by Canadians in their own enterprises is desirable, there is some question that such a structure may discourage too much investment control by the government."

V. W. Scully, president of Steel Company of Canada, expressed stronger views on the proposed new corporation.

He said: "I am against gov-

Senate Reform Attacked

By STUART LAKE

OTTAWA (CP) — Government views on how to reform the Senate were run up the parliamentary flag pole Monday. They came down much the worse for wear after a two-hour debate.

The problem of Senate reform—almost as old as the Senate itself—was the first piece of business the Commons faced after its 11-day Easter recess. Finance Minister Gordon's budget speech took the Commons spotlight at the night sitting.

A government resolution proposes to retire all new senators at age 75. Senators past the age limit and already occupying seats in the 102-member House could either continue their life terms or accept $8,000 pensions.

Debate on the resolution is to continue today.

The government plan didn't cut any ice with New Democratic MPs who want the upper chamber done away with altogether. But they also attacked the resolution on the grounds that the $8,000 pension was a bribe to get Senate approval.

SAYS ITS FARCE

David Orlikow (NDP—Winnipeg North) said the resolution was "a farce, a disgrace and a

Cut Gives Canadians 170 Million to Spend

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP — Finance Minister Gordon brought down what he termed an expansionary budget Monday with a 10-per-cent cut in personal income taxes and plans for the formation of a billion-dollar development corporation.

The tax cuts take effect July 1, so that the effective reduction in 1965 will be five per cent.

Without tax cuts, he said, the budget would be a "restraining influence."

So he put his main expansionary lever — the tax cuts — in the hands of the Canadian taxpayers who will have an additional $170,000,000 to spend this year and $265,000,000 in 1966.

There were no other major tax changes in Mr. Gordon's third budget.

The lower revenues from income taxes will push the predicted budgetary deficit up to $300,000,000 in the current fiscal year ending March 31, 1966. Last year he estimated that 1964-65 would end with a deficit of $453,000,000, but the boom-ing economy pared it to $83,000,000.

The other key announcement in the budget involved plans to establish the Canada Development Corporation — originally promised in the 1963 Liberal election campaign and revived in the recent throne speech.

SHARES $5 EACH

Mr. Gordon said the corporation, with $1,000,000,000 worth of capital, will enable Canadians to invest $5 a share in Canadian business enterprises. Some Crown corporations, including profitable Polymer Corp., will be taken over by the new organization.

More Budget News on Pages 10 and 11

"Our national economy is moving ahead in a satisfactory way and we now are able to lead from strength," said Mr. Gordon, as he spoke to a sparsely-filled chamber of MPs and packed galleries. "The times call for an expansionary approach in our financial and economic affairs. Consequently this is a growth budget."

But Opposition spokesmen didn't see it that way.

"Practically meaningless," said Opposition Leader Diefenbaker.

"It is an abdication of responsibility," said Colin Cameron, financial critic of the New Democratic Party.

Creditiste Leader Caouette said the tax cut was only intended to fool the public. A married taxpayer with two children earning $3,000 would save only $3 this year.

Social Credit Leader Thompson said the budget was an improvement, but he had hoped for a balance.

TWO-BIT REDUCTION

Former Conservative finance minister George Nowlan said: "This is a two-bit reduction by

India Claims Heavy Losses Inflicted On Pakistani Army

From AP-Reuters

NEW DELHI (CP) — India claimed today that its troops destroyed at least six tanks and inflicted "very heavy casualties" on Pakistani Army units attacking across the frontier into the disputed Rann of Kutch.

The fighting which began Monday around Biar Bet has stopped, an Indian defence ministry spokesman said.

Despite the claims, it appeared Indian units also had been severely mauled in three days of fighting which began Saturday.

Pakistani units were reported holding points well within what India claims is its territory, indicating that the Indian Army was unable to expel the Pakistanis.

The frontier, according to Pakistani's view, should be along the 24th parallel. This is more than 20 miles south of the unmarked line India recognizes.

India's casualties were reported Tuesday. Doctors in Delhi, an Indian town southwest of the fighting, called for 1,000 blood donors.

Sketchy information released by the Indians indicated their units have been falling back since the fighting erupted Saturday at Point 84, which is near the north-south road from Diplo, Pakistan, to Khavda, India.

Biar Bet was described as an Indian fallback position for troops who had fought at Point 84.

There was no indication who holds Biar Bet, but if Pakistani claims are correct, Indian troops have been pushed south of the position.

There was intense activity by diplomats in New Delhi trying to get India and Pakistan to declare a cease-fire and talk over their territorial disputes.

Tension over the barren border area eased slightly as the leaders of both countries urged peace.

Pakistani President Mohammed Ayub Khan said Monday night neither country could afford war and that it was "fantastic to think Pakistan would go to war over an area where even drinking water was not available.

His statement followed an earlier one by Indian Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri which proclaimed his country's desire for peace. But in another speech Monday night Shastri said India would deal with the situation in the disputed area "firmly and effectively."

Shastri said Pakistan had started attacking Indian positions and India could not consider any proposal for withdrawal of forces on both sides.

A Pakistan foreign office spokesman expressed hope that the two countries could settle the dispute peacefully without going to the United Nations.

The Rann of Kutch over which the two nations are battling is some of the most inhospitable country in the world, completely uninhabitable in the summer.

Khan Urges Negotiations To Settle 'Useless Quarrel'

KARACHI (AP) — President Mohammad Ayub Khan has urged India to negotiate their territorial dispute over the Rann of Kutch.

Ayub urged negotiations to settle "the useless quarrel." But he warned India of grave consequences if it should fail to "understand the language of reason and continue to pursue a policy of browbeating its neighbor."

A Pakistan foreign office spokesman said before there can be a cease-fire, all Indian and Pakistani troops must withdraw from the 3,500 square miles of Kutch north of the 24th parallel. This is claimed by Pakistan. India has rejected the withdrawal demand.

Ald. Admits Vote on Bus Not Unanimous

Indirect reference to a letter to the editor appearing recently in The Ontario Intelligencer, commenting on the refusal of council a few years ago to subsidize the then privately-owned city bus line, was heard in city council yesterday.

The reference was made by Alderman Ben Corke, chairman of finance, in reply to a question from Alderman Jack Allin as to whether the committee had been unanimous in its approval of a by-law providing for the borrowing of $18,500 for the purchased of a new city bus.

Ald. Corke admitted the finance committee vote had not been completely unanimous, and then apparently in reference to the letter to the editor said the city could not by by-law pay a subsidy to a privately-owned bus line. He said the then Minister of the bus line would not agree to extend routes as they are now operated and the city was forced to take over the bus line.

Cadet Group Visits Kingston

Recently the Cadet Club of Quinte Secondary School set out on what proved to be a very educational and enjoyable day. They travelled to Kingston to see part of the city as an historical and educational centre.

During the course of the day the students travelled to the Royal Military College where they were shown an interesting film and to Queen's University where a tour of some of the buildings took place. Also a movie story of the University's background was seen. Lunch was served at the Students Union.

Later in the day the group visited St. George's Cathedral (Anglican) and St. Mary's Cathedral (Roman Catholic) with the aim of learning some of the history of the two beautiful churches.

The tired but satisfied group started for home. The club had been received cordially at each stop, and had gained much of the knowledge they desired. All agreed that the trip had been very worthwhile.

Council Turns Down Request To Rezone Area for Clinic

Belleville city council yesterday turned down the request of Doctors H. F. Williamson and K. K. Williamson for spot rezoning of an area in the Dundas Street East and Dufferin Avenue district to permit the operation of a doctors' clinic.

Specifically council concurred in a Belleville and Suburban Planning Board recommendation asking that the request for re-zoning be not approved.

Last week the planning board held a public hearing on the request and recommended to council that re-zoning not be granted. The request was for re-zoning from 117 and 121 Dufferin Ave., and for 258, 260 and 262 Dundas Street East, to be redesignated from an "A" district to a "B" district.

Last week representations both for and against the rezoning were heard by the planning board, and yesterday were repeated in part before city council.

APPEARS FOR DOCTORS

Local solicitor Rodney Cameron appeared on behalf of Doctors Williamson, while three Dufferin Avenue residents, C. N. Nicholson, L. W. Shore and Ray Peets, voiced objection.

Spot re-zoning of the Dundas Street area to allow for a doctors' clinic had been before council off and on since 1962, when the original request was made by J. Hartt.

Dr. Hartt's request was turned down by council and was repeated last year by Dr. Williamson, who already has constructed a building.

Yesterday Mr. Cameron maintained that it would be to the interest of the hospital for ancillary services to be located near the hospital.

He said his client would be happy to amend his request for re-zoning of only lots 260 and 262 Dundas St.

But Dufferin Ave. owners objected to the proposed parking lot area which they said would deprive them of the privacy of their back yards.

Woolworth Co. Converts Store To Worth Mart

The F. W. Woolworth Company executive office, Toronto, announced today that the company will convert its store in downtown Belleville to Worth Mart Discount Store. Worth Mart being a division of the Woolworth Company. The Worth Mart store will be established and operated seperately from the 276 Woolworth stores in Canada.

The image will be of the variety store nature, but merchandise featured will be of the promotional type at discounted prices. Wearing apparel of an upgraded nature will be dominant and all national brand merchandise carried will be found at discount prices. Worth Mart stores will continue to carry staple items most demanded by variety store customers, but the assortment will be cut down to take care of the expanded upgraded lines of merchandise that the store will carry.

This operation will not effect the local store as far as personnel is concerned, as it is only the case of changing the merchandise image to that of Worth Mart.

The food operation will continue under the present set up, serving the same top quality food products.

fraud on the people of Canada."

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker, who as prime minister stated his intention to reform the Senate, said the government plan is faulty because it does not affect the present senators.

Since the days of former prime minister Mackenzie King, the Liberals had been promising to take measures to reform the Senate. This plan was a mild-and-easier substitute for those promises.

NDP House Leader Stanley Knowles said the Fathers of Confederation had created the Senate, where members are appointed, as a check on elected members. But the upper chamber had no place in modern Canada.

Creditiste Leader Caouette said the new age limit should be 70.

Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson called the resolution disappointing. He called for a three-man commission representing the Senate, the government and the provinces concerned to make the appointments.

'Y' Hoopsters Upset Flyers

A Belleville "Y" team upset the Bay of Quinte basketball League champion BCAF Flyers 63-60 in an exhibition game played at the Trenton air station last night.

The tilt was a close one from start to finish with no more than four points ever separating the clubs.

The "Y" held a slim 33-32 lead at half time and doubled the margin in the equally-tight second half.

Jim Wright sparked the winners, who had only a seven-man lineup, with a 23-point performance. He got scoring help from John Guthrie, with 14 points, and Jack Naismith, with 13.

Joe Theriault and WiM Boeden, two of the regular BCAF aces, found the range of their scoring. Theriault hooped 19 points and Boden collected an even dozen.

With the regular basketball season over here, the game was the first for both clubs in some time.

BELLEVILLE "Y" (63): J. Middleton 1, J. Guthrie 14, J. Krupics 9, J. Wright 22, E. Naismith 13, G. Geldart 2, A. Gore 1.

RCAF FLYERS (60): F. Walker, Charlebois 3, Nelson 4, Widzyk 8, D. Perks 2, Johnson 2, Dodd 5, J. Theriault 19, W Borden 13, Blades 6.

Theatre Company Planning To Produce New Musical

TRENTON — The Eastern Ontario Theatre Company, in the "fall" stage for the past few weeks, and for last December Quints are engagements with "Chuckles From Below," is planning to swing into action again, and this time with a new musical, as yet unnamed.

Kaye Cunliffe of Colborne has been writing on numerous scripts, and the music for the new venture has been composed mostly in France, where composer Dick Gardner has spent several months.

Producer Rhoda Bain has been directing Mrs. Bain's believe supervising rehearsals and getting her ballet students in shape for a recital this June. Mrs. Bain and her sister, Mrs. Cunliffe, (who teaches tap dancing in the Bain Street studio), say they run the dancing school in order to finance their free time in the theatre productions. Coming as they do from a family steeped in theatre, Kaye and Rhoda find this sort of expression as necessary as breathing.

Branching out from musicals Kaye has written an abreviated play, which the company hopes to produce the coming fall, but it not necessarily now . . . it concerns a couple who work their way through an annual plot to the point where they decide to legally "change bridge partners" . . . but it will give the actors a change of pace. This is Mrs. Cunliffe's first attempt at "straight" situation comedy without musical interludes.

Meanwhile, the company has been growing with new faces added to the old in some cases. Plots continue to revolve around Margery Parker, of Lake Ontario Shores, in "Chuckles," for one simple reason . . . by general consensus, she's good.

A casting committee has been set up, and this is headed by Mrs. Bain and Bud Barnes, of Colborne.

NEED FOR PLAYERS

Rodney Coyne of Belleville and Ross Cameron of Colborne head the list of male and eligible males where the casting committee is concerned, but there's a need for male players as is the story with most amateur companies.

Holding a fort in the ingenue department are Beverley Bain and Janet Cunliffe, daughters of the two principals, and holding the purse strings is the treasurer of the company, Mrs. Ida Melvill, Kaye and Rhoda's mother, and herself a trouper from the English stage.

Margaret Barnes and Charles Costanzo are responsible for the tuneful melodies in "Chuckles," and Mary is still with the company as pianist and composer, but the new musical will feature the music of Mr. Gardner.

The company has put on shows in nearly every other Quints centre except Belleville, and is looking for a sponsor there. As any Eastern Ontario audience includes such groups as the Seeley Citizens' Club, who are given complimentary tickets, finances are always at a low ebb and it's hard . . . if not impossible . . . to cover expenses.

Meanwhile, the stalwarts of the company struggle on . . . convinced even they don't know why . . . unless it's a nagging conviction that this area needs little theatre; live theatre.

Jaycees Attend Spring Parley

TRENTON—Jerry Goldberg, 1964-65 president of the Trenton Jaycees, and Jaycee members Claude Martineau and Gary Jamieson attended the spring conference of District Six Jaycees in Kingston over the weekend. Around 90 district Jaycees were in attendance. A leadership course was held Sunday morning and in the afternoon the annual district meeting. Bob Clark of Kingston was elected district president.

Trenton elections will be held at the Gilbert Hotel, Wednesday night, starting at 7 p.m. The officers will be inducted June 1, and the annual meeting is sandwiched between the two events on May 27.

Tonight, the members will decide whether to repeat last year's successful Soap Derby and discuss possible dates for the event.

WILL ATTEND MEETING

Four members of the Trenton Business and Professional Women's Club, Mrs. Violet Kennedy, Mrs. Mildred, Miss Vera Clark, vice-president; Mrs. Helen Coulter-John, second vice-president, and Miss Eva Baker, parliamentarian, plan to attend the provincial club conference in Sault Ste. Marie, April 30 to May 2.

Girl Students Get Guidance For Careers

TRENTON — A Careers' Information Night, sponsored by the Trenton and Frankford Women's Club and the National Employment Service will be held tonight in the employment office on King St., Trenton. High school girls, wishing guidance in the choice of a career will be counselled by various professional men and women.

Last year many students took advantage of this special counselling, and the event was such a success, the two facilities agreed to repeat it this year.

TRYING EXAMS

This week is Aid Cadet Week across Canada but the cadets from Trenton High School 173 Squadron will not mark the week in any special way—for the good reason—the cadets are trying exams.

However, 30 senior cadets via. Red the Royal Military College in Kingston last week and others were taken on a tour of the Bata plant. A similar event is being planned for younger cadets for the near future.

Two Trenton cadets applied for flying scholarships; two for admission to a senior leaders' course at Camp Borden and one for an exchange visit.

Haydn's 'The Creation' Splendidly Performed By Choir and Soloists

By EUGENE LANG

One hundred and sixty-seven years ago this coming Thursday Joseph Haydn's Oratorio "The Creation" was first performed in the Schwarzenberg Palace in Vienna with the composer himself conducting. Its success was practically instantaneous with the result that chorus societies were founded in Haydn's native Austria expressly to perform it. Since that time this sacred masterpiece of rare inspiration and religious majesty, which, by the way was written by the composer in his later years, has been given thousands of times by vocal groups, both large, medium and small the world over to the appreciation of millions of listeners be it held in church, cathedral, auditorium or theatre.

Last evening a masterful performance of this well known Oratorio was presented in Bridge Street United Church, by the Church Choir, added soloists and extra instrumental accompanying forces under the direction of Robert Reid before a well attended congregation.

The text of the work is based upon a section from the Book of Genesis combined with lines from Milton's Paradise Lost, which after the tonal painting of the opening overture depicts the full story of the Creation through the six days from chaos into order. The Biblical words are divided between three Archangels, Raphael (Baritone), Uriel (Tenor) and Gabriel (Soprano) and a chorus, throughout the whole work. may be considered as that of the heavenly hosts. Lastly, Adam and Eve (Soprano and Bass) appear and fulfil the purpose announced by Raphael.

SPLENDID VOICES

There is so much meat to this crowning composition of Haydn's that only a very few choice segments can be noted upon here in the space provided. William Perry, baritone, who took the roles of Raphael and Adam, lent stature and dignity to his singing from opening recitative to closing duet. His rendition of the Aria "Rolling in Foaming Billows" was forceful and fluent yet in closing measures carefully restrained in his singing of Haydn's long phrased lines. The full range of Mr. Perry's resonant voice was given ample chance for display in his interpretation of the majestic "Now Heaven in Fullest Glory Shone."

Tenor Thomas Clarke likewise brought his full vocal powers to the fore in his realization of the lovely "In Native Worth and Honor Clad" one of Haydn's finest examples of bel canto. In his other Aria "Now Vanish Before The Holy Beams" Mr. Clarke again demonstrated his fine tenor voice to fine advantage in its modulatory demands that Haydn injected into it.

Soprano Hazelanne Reid as usual came through with stunning performances in all of her arias, with notable facility of voice in the coloratura leanings of "With Verdure Clad" and a radiant instillation of the graceful "On Mighty Pens Uplifted Soars" in operatic like aria that brought forth the boney bovellings of her lyrical colorings and shadings.

In the Terzetto "Most Beautiful Appear" the composer's wonderful freedom of form was well displayed by the three soloists in the various phases of this tone picture as delivered by the trio of archangels in turn. Again these three were blended with extreme vocal variety in the trio "On Thee Each Living Soul Awaits."

CHOIR EXCELLENT

The Bridge Street United Church Choir was at its best last evening and did justice to nearly every bar required of it. Thrilling was the resounding strains of "The Heavens are Telling" and the very brilliant chorus "The Lord is Great, and Great His Might" was attacked with gusto and grit. Many other moments of glorious sound emitted from the 46 voices and in the final fugal "Sing the Lord, Ye Voices All" the horizontal intertwining of the four parts were accomplished with no blur or back of late enterings, but precision reigned herein.

The Eastern Ontario String Quartette consisting of Stephen Chorus, Marion Stanley, W. Grant and Joachim Reimann added immeasurably with their fine accompanying throughout, along with the many places in the score that their descriptive instrumental entrances lent meaning to the vocal forces, both solo, concentrated and full blown. Added trumpet and by Mr. Phillip Scarrow created that the effect of tonal pilings building up the tonic-dominant structures upon which Haydn builds so much of his musical super structure. S. Alec Gordon at the organ as usual came forth with shaded, yet sharpened accompaniments when required and at other times blazed with soulstirring of powerful splendor and splendid power.

ADDS LAURELS

Mr. Robert Reid, the Director of last evening's performance, must be aware that again he has added laurels to his highly regarded musical abilities and that the tremendous amount of work that he has done in shaping all his musical forces into the final rewarding performance that they gave under his direction has paid off with honors. As in the past, we look forward to more fine musical fare in the future from the discerning intellect of Robert Reid. His productions are always anticipated and the successful results are to his continued achievement in Belleville's musical life.

Rev. Harry M. Davis who welcomed all those present and invoked the opening prayer, also bringing the evening to a close with the final Benediction.

Bayfax Officially Opens Navigation Season in Bay

With a heave-ho and a couple o' ships Spring officially arrived on the Bay of Quinte yesterday.

First boat to open the 1965 navigation season was the Bayfax, bearing 1,400 tons of coal out of Rochester.

Her captain, John Pollard, of Kindarding, received the traditional top hat from harbor master Don Barrett.

However, she wasn't the first ship to dock.

Accolades for that goes to the Kenoki, Department of Transport's 440-ton work boat which has been recharging buoys and dropping them about the Belleville area of the Bay in recent days.

The trim Kenoki and its crew, led by Captain John Bennett of Ridgetown, already were on hand to herald the arrival of the first commercial voyage of the season.

Since the captain ship is in government service he does not rate any silk hat. Hence the award to Captain Pollard of the

Campbellford Parson Not Impressed With Berton's Book Rotarians Are Told

An Anglican parson from Campbellford who said he tried to leave the church 12 years ago, told Belleville Rotarians yesterday that he had been left unmoved by "the recent splurge of soul-searching" on the church's role in society.

He said he was unmoved because he and his fellow churchmen knew so much more about the church from the inside than did outside observers. He was constantly being reminded, for example, that as a minister he was dealing with people as individuals rather than groups.

The Campbellford parson said he had "the most hearty contempt" for Pierre Berton's book "The Comfortable Pew." "It takes a swing at the potential in the society that is the church and misses the qualities in churchmen and in the church itself."

MEET ALL SORTS

"In our work," he said, "you meet all sorts, including the people who see absolutely no point in religion other than the fulfillment of social functions such as weddings, funerals, christenings and the provision of character references."

Last week a parishioner told him he liked going to church because it "takes the cream out of my life." Said Mr. Barrow: "In that, there is something well worth thinking of."

What had impressed him about the church was that in the world, seeing it from the inside, was that "you are dealing with people, not in groups but one by one."

Once, in Terrace Bay, when services were held for construction crews, a drunk wandered into the building used as a recreation hall, cum beer parlor cum church.

"You have never seen such an expression as came over the man's face at the sight of a parson preaching a sermon," said Mr. Barrow. "But he sobered up immediately and walked right up to the front and took a seat."

Later the fellow turned around and surveyed the congregation, saying: "Alas, how few hear this man of God," then he walked to the door and with a parting thrust said: "The trouble with you persons is, you are not humble enough."

Mr. Barrow said this story was one of the ways in which ministers were reminded that their job lay with individuals and not with groups.

Mr. Barrow noted jocularly that he had been warned not to talk about religion or politics and had got around this by telling his audience "what he would have said if he had been given permission to talk on these subjects."

No one seemed to mind as Mr. Barrow went on to say he belonged to the oldest profession in the world, "with all respect to the other one which claims that distinction."

"We know more about what parishioners think than almost any other profession," he said. "We do not need to be told what is obscene or that there is a relaxing of self - respect in society today."

Mr. Barrow went on to d

Faulty Nutrition

In this land of plenty it is a curious experience to observe how little some people eat. Some go so far inadible reasons like the necessity of losing weight, but others with too much problems may be doing themselves harm.

Many teenagers get by on french fried potatoes and a soft drink. While these may be filling they can scarcely be regarded as a satisfactory diet, especially when absorbed on a more or less regular basis and to the exclusion of other foods containing necessary vitamins.

According to Dr. Elizabeth Chant Robertson, a nutritional expert at the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto, the, two main nutritional problems in Canada today are overweight and poor eating habits of teenagers.

She told an Ontario Educational Association meeting that there were no recent Canadian statistics on overweight, but a study in the North-central United States showed that 50 per cent of women surveyed were overweight and 30 per cent were obese.

"We might not be that bad," she said, "but we're bad enough!" One reason for the obesity problem, she stated, was that North Americans had such sedentary lives." The foregoing could be inscribed on the hearts (often the first to suffer as the result of physical sloth) of every citizen. Remember the 5BX air force exercises that so many planned to practice? It would be interesting to know how many are still attempting to help fit in this way.

Of teenage eating habits, Dr. Robertson said that all surveys done in Ontario show similar results: inadequate consumption of milk, vegetables and fruits. For example, many youngsters "are definitely lower in calcium and riboflavin (which come from milk) than is recommended."

French fries, which Dr. Robertson described the "only popular vegetable" among teenagers, give three times the calories of boiled or baked potatoes and about one-third the vitamin C. She said about one-third of the Grade 8 Toronto children surveyed did not eat foods (like oranges, tomatoes) high in vitamin C.

It all adds up this this, young people are not eating properly and as they grow older they are not getting enough exercise. It is a paradox of modern society, this revelation of faulty nutrition in the midst of plenty. And the way to proved nutritional habits and to a judicious mixture of physical exercise surely lies with the individuals concerned. Either they are their best friends—or worst enemies.

Teens Enjoy Skurfing

The new fad of skateboarding, or skurfing it is sometimes called, has not hit Belleville a big way, not yet anyway. But in other cities it is the rage.

Montreal and Ottawa newspapers have had stories and pictures on the sport. In Montreal seems that young people take to the parks for skurfing which, should this continue no problem at all. In the capital, however, about 200 teenage skurfers descended on City Hall after an RCMP cruiser parked across a strip of sloping roadway under Confederation Square which they had been using.

We have to admire those young people. If they were enjoying some exercise, only to give the police some slong and spoil their fun. Undeterred, they went to the city administration and gained a sympathetic hearing from Mayor Ivan Reid.

That the teens' choice of a play area was fairly unsuitable is beside the point; it merely demonstrates the fact that communities across Canada are hopelessly unprepared when it comes to organizing sport and providing play areas for young people. City authorities across the land pay only lip service to sport and recreation.

The very fact that Ottawa's chief citizen involved the young people at City Hall, and proceed that he would do "everything in his power" provide a suitable location for them is proof of our contention.

The teenagers have stuck a blow for healthy outdoor activity in their city. Skurfing is fun. Youngsters may get hurt occasionally . . . well you can get hurt playing hockey and football, too. Let them have their skateboards and their exercise and fun.

Men are apt to mistake the strength of their feeling for the strength of their argument. The heated mind resents the chill touch and tasteless scrutiny of logic.—Gladstone.

Viet Nam Stand-off

Strictly Personal
'Freedom' Has Many Interpreters

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

If, as I suggested yesterday, we cannot agree or define or pin down such seemingly obvious terms as "marriage" and "unemployment" and "delinquency," what chance is there that we can agree on what we mean by so broad and loose a word as "freedom"?

One reason we cannot understand, or come to grips with, the problems of people in under-developed countries is our lack of common basis (and common experience) for talking with one another.

What I mean has been succinctly expressed by Felix Greene, in his book, "The Wall Has Two Sides," published a couple of years ago. Writing about Red China, he explained:

"When a Chinese worker or peasant says he is freer today than he has ever been in his life, he means it . . . Perhaps he does not mean it in our way, for he has never known that particular forms of political and social freedom which have been the precious fruit of our own historical past and which are the fruit of our relative physical security.

"A Chinese uses the word 'freedom' in a very personal, down-to-earth sense. He is not talking about abstractions, but about something real. He means that he is at last free to eat, and not to starve; he is free of the landlord and the moneylender; he is free to learn to read and write, he is free to develop his own personality, and the patient must wear thicker glasses, or contact lenses. But yes, he then can see, and read, and use his eyes very well.

Cataracts are not dangerous in the sense of an illness or infection or heart disease. The result of cataracts is simply that you can't see as well as before. Or, with advanced cataracts, you can't see at all, except to detect whether there is light or darkness.

Cataracts develop gradually. The speed differs in individual cases, but it is gradually progressive. Indeed, an eye doctor can detect the beginning of cataracts long before the patient notices anything. Some folks are astonished when the doctor tells them to "come back next year."

The doctor can tell that it will be some time before cataracts (the cloudiness) becomes dense enough to interfere much. Some people may never require surgery. Others will.

Cataracts Can Be Removed Without Loss of Sight

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Are cataracts dangerous? Is surgery safe? After they are removed, can a person see well again? Is surgery painful? Can you have the operation if you have diabetes? Is there any way to get rid of cataracts except by surgery? — Mrs. D. B.

I've written quite frequently about cataracts, but questions keep coming in. I suppose the reason is that people don't pay much attention to such articles until, one day, the doctor says, "You have cataracts." Then, naturally enough, the patient begins to worry.

Well, I'd suggest that such people should not worry. Yes, cataracts need to be taken care of, but there's no cause for great anxiety.

A cataract is a clouding of the lens of the eye. It may be partial or complete. When this occurs, light cannot pass through well, and vision becomes fogzy.

The ancient Persians knew about cataracts, and in those days, long before anesthesia, doctors simply gouged out the cloudy lens. The results were an improvement sometimes, other times catastrophic.

Today an anesthetic is used, as with any operation. The amount of discomfort afterward is very moderate. The procedure is safe.

After the lens is out, light again can pass into the eye. Only it isn't sharply focussed, so to regain good sight, the patient must wear thicker glasses, or contact lenses. But yes, he then can see, and read, and use his eyes very well.

Cataracts are not dangerous in the sense of an illness or infection or heart disease. The result of cataracts is simply that you can't see as well as before. Or, with advanced cataracts, you can't see at all, except to detect whether there is light or darkness.

Cataracts develop gradually. The speed differs in individual cases, but it is gradually progressive. Indeed, an eye doctor can detect the beginning of cataracts long before the patient notices anything. Some folks are astonished when the doctor tells them to "come back next year."

The doctor can tell that it will be some time before cataracts (the cloudiness) becomes dense enough to interfere much. Some people may never require surgery. Others will.

For an engraver, accountant, jeweler, or such, or for a woman who spends many hours sewing or reading, the operation can (and should) be performed sooner. For a person who does not use his eyes for fine, close work, it may be delayed.

Yes, people with diabetes can undergo surgery for cataracts with safety. There is one word of warning, though, and it can apply to non-diabetics, too: The operation, and suitable glasses will restore sight provided the eyes have not been impaired in some other way, also. If the retina or optic nerve is damaged, removing the cataract will not correct that. But this can be determined by your eye doctor in advance anyway.

Dear Dr. Molner: Are bronchial emphysema and bronchiectasis only not the same ailment? Are they contagious? — H. N.

They are not the same. Emphysema is a loss of elasticity in the lung compartments. Bronchiectasis is a bulging of the bronchial tubes, permitting phlegm to collect, and causing chronic infection, cough and sputum. Neither is contagious; either can be benefited by early treatment.

Note to Mrs. M. K.: Lichen planus is a skin disease involving scaly, itchy patches, and its cause is not known. It is not contagious. It is a nuisance but not serious. There is no specific cure, but sometimes the cortisone-type drugs help, as does plenty of sunshine.

Ottawa Offbeat
Coach Pearson Predicts Good Season for Liberal League

By RICHARD JACKSON
Parliamentary Bureau Chief, Ontario Bureau

OTTAWA — Politics-wise, let us see what a Big Day with the Big Team in the Big Land looks like in the Federal Government Leagues.

It was Coach and Captain Lester B. Pearson of the Liberals who last night, over politics and hockey in something of the same combative sense.

He is running his Government, he observed, when discussing administrative strategy, "just as if we were a majority instead of a minority."

And that didn't surprise it quite the way he wanted so this old semi-pro Ontario-Michigan League ball player put it in terms borrowed from the world of sport.

"We are not playing a defensive game in this Government," he observed, "for if you play a defensive game, and I am thinking now of hockey, you are not going to draw so many penalties but at the same time you're not likely to score many goals. And I like to think we have been scoring a few goals."

He let it go at that, the drooling room with the rest of the reporters and hear what else Coach and Captain Pearson has to say about the way the Big Team has been shaping up.

"Well," said Mike saying with a flip of old Hanover, "we're still out in front, but we've got to keep driving."

TICKET QUERIES

"We can't afford to let down or coast for a moment with the Tory and League stacks up right now.

"We've got to stay up every last minute, for any of the other teams could catch up over one time. That's just how tight things are. If Dief and Tommy Douglas, Bob Thompson and Real Caouette should click in one of their games and we don't, then we're dead. So we can't afford an off night. Just rules for ourselves, and boom, we're done."

So how is the team performing individually?

"We've got some real money players in our veterans the holdovers from the St. Laurent championship teams of 1948 through '57," mused Coach Pearson. "Wife and, there's Fleet Robertson, and Fred Hellyer and Omer Paul Martin who broke in with the old Mackenzie King champions."

The Coach himself played for Uncle Louis for 20 years before taking over the Big Team when Captain St. Laurent retired.

These have been the super stars, season after season, although they've been 10 or 12 years when Dief's Tories clobbered them in the '57 playoffs and beat them in the '58 series.

But Coach Pearson recalled that while the Big Team had only the four real money players, there were other veterans who had been sitting on the Backbench for years before being called to the star line in the '63 playoffs.

These durable and still hustling old-timers included George McIlraith, Alan MacEachen, Hedard J. Robichaud and Bill Benidickson, all of whom formed the St. Laurent Backbench line.

But what about the new blood?

"Well, it looked possible in the fall department we recruited some real talent, and some awful duds."

TOPS AND FLOPS

"You can't beat Mitch Sharp. He was hit the toughest and he made the team and hasn't cooled off since.

"And just look at that Hobarsen-Harry Hays go. We picked him up on waivers from the Tories back in '63 and for a while he didn't show much. Then he picked up this crazy new crackerbarrel style of his and the folks all over the country think he's the best thing to come down the ice since Jimmy Gardiner retired.

"First couple of seasons Walter Gordon looked terrible, but in the last year he has come on fast and is one of the stars we count on in the crunches.

"Judy LaMarsh, you ask? Plenty of spirit; likes to bait the Opposition, but draws too many penalties. She hammers them fast to make 'em stick and this gets us into trouble sometimes that we could have avoided if only Judy would cool down.

"You heard about Yvon Dupuis who we brought up with Guy Favreau, Rene Tremblay, Maurice Sauve and Jean Drapeau from the Quebec league — had to fire him after he got mixed up in some race track thing. May have to retire Tremblay for injuries, and of course, you know Favreau's being watched very carefully with a judge investigating the background of a couple of his plays."

Was the team in shape to finish the season on top?

"Well, we've got our soft spots sure enough; but I figure we're in better shape, actually, than Dief and Tommy and Thompson Douglas' outfit. We're jelling as a team now, with some bad games out of our system, and if we don't let down and everybody keeps up, then I figure we can't miss this season and even next year."

Wilkinson Makes Shirt

Stratford Beacon-Herald

We admit to some prejudice and bias in favor of the Wilkinson Sword Co., a small, elderly British firm which goes on and on in the business of making swords.

The sword business has had a revival in recent years. Three ago so many brand-new independent nations, with newly - elevated officials eager to set themselves up in the ceremonial status league, that there has been quite a rush for swords and scabbards for state occasions.

The Wilkinson Sword Co. deserves the gratitude of every man who shaves with a stainless steel blade. The company's small staff of sword experts conceived, a few years ago, that it should be possible to make a razor blade that would stay sharp for 18 shaves or more, instead of about three. With their relatively small production facilities, they produced stainless steel blades, and exported a few. The big international companies were forced to act to meet the competition, and suddenly discovered that they too could make long-lasting blades.

The latest news from Wilkinson's is that they have a dripdry underskirt on the market that weighs only 16 pounds. This light weight is thought to be quite an achievement, considering that the shirt will stop a 45-calibre bullet. Other bulletproof vests on the market before the Wilkinson initiative started at 28 pounds in weight, and were not quite so flexible. Underskirt is made of titanium and nylon. Prices run from about $180 to $300, depending on size. A fat man, offering a bigger target, has to pay more for protection.

This news should make some contact with the personal experience of at least a dozen middle-aged war veterans in the Stratford area. During the Second World War the RAF sent its airmen who had to fly through semi-tropical flying over Germany were made by Wilkinson.

The word "flak," from "Flugzeug Abwehr Kanone (Warship, Aircraft-Against-Gun), is probably a strange one to younger readers, but those who flew through it had reason to be grateful for clothing that gave a defence against airburst shrapnel.

Ontario Health Minister Tells Plainfield Hospital Board of Grant of $62,000

For the first time in its 14 years of existence, the Ontario Home for the Mentally Retarded Infants at Plainfield is completely debt free.

This was the good news learned yesterday by members of the Plainfield hospital board, who were told by Hon. Matthew Dymond, Ontario' Minister of Health, that the province had made a grant of $62,000 toward hospital capital costs.

He said that the grant would pay off the hospital's outstanding rapid debt.

The Plainfield infants' hospital started 14 years ago as a charitable venture on the part of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Velleman, but is operated by a duly constituted board.

Dr. Dymond said that the Plainfield hospital was one of three similar institutions in the province.

He said the 400 beds available for the care of these young tragedies of human life was not quite enough but stated care must be exercised in opening hospitals of this type.

NEED DEDICATED PEOPLE

"It is not only the beds that must be provided, but the people to care for the patients." The success of this type of an undertaking depends greatly on community involvment, according to Mr. Dymond.

"Mental deficiency is no respecter of persons — it can happen to anyone," Mr. Dymond said, so it behooves all of us to take an interest."

The reason for mental deficiency had so far defied medicine, which had pushed back other vampaets, but accomplished little in this field.

SERVED 14 YEARS

Dr. Hartt said the Plainfield hospital throughout its 14 years of service had provided high quality care for which there had been a vital need. "We are proud of that service," he said.

Dr. Hartt officially introduced Dr. Dymond, at the same time expressing appreciation for the assistance made to the hospital through the local member Clarke Rollins and Dr. Dymond.

Plainfield hospital board chairman Oriel Griffiths added his own thanks and that of the board to Dr. Dymond.

He said the personal support of board members from Mr. Rollins, and the assistance given by Dr. Dymond had been a great incentive to carry on the work.

Also taking in the tour were Oriel Griffiths, chairman of the Plainfield hospital board, Clarke Rollins, MLA for Hastings East, County Warden Fred Beckett and Thurlow Reeve Clayton Hall.

DYMOND IMPRESSED

Dr. Dymond said he had been greatly impressed by the care with which young patients were receiven at Plainfield.

"There was evidence everywhere of the good care being received, and the hospital board and staff members are deserving of the highest credit," he said.

Mr. and Mrs. Velleman, who 14 years ago established what is now the Plainfield home, as the Mentally Retarded, themselves came in for a tribute from the Health Minister.

Dr. Dymond said there had been a "tremendous undertaking" and one which served a very great need.

The Plainfield hospital is now no longer a private charity on the part of Mr. and Mrs. Velleman, but is operated by a duly constituted board.

Cost of New PUC Garage, Storage Building Increased $45,000 Council Is Told

Originally estimated at $250,000 which figure has already been approved by the Ontario Municipal Board, the cost of the Belleville Public Utilities Commission new garage and storage building is now expected to reach $300,000.

Cost of land at $45,000 is one of the items which will increase over-all costs of the building, city council was told yesterday.

However, the design of the new building proposed for the Sidney-College Street area, has not been completed and a actual cost figure of the project will not be known until tenders are called.

ASK EXPLANATION

In the meantime council will ask public utilities representatives to fully explain the reason for the expected increase in costs.

Details of the proposed water rate increase scheduled for Belleville early this summer was asked in council.

Mayor Ellis said however, that he was unable to provide figures as these would not be known definitely until the next commission meeting.

Although taking close to two hours to complete, yesterday's meeting of council saw little more than routine business on the agenda. Much of the time was taken up hearing representations regarding the zoning change request for Dundas Street.

BUY PARK PROPERTY

Council approved of a board of parks management recommendation for the city to purchase the Fry Property on Cannifton Road as the nucleus of a parks development in this area. Cost of the property will be $9,000.

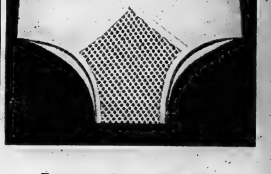
The area in question, council was told, is a wooded area west of Cannifton Road and south of 401 Highway. The property with a frontage of approximately 300 feet includes the burned out wreckage of a house.

Alderman Jack Deacon asked that the city's policy of purchase for property required for street widening be clarified to end the confusion which he said existed.

OWNERS CONFUSED

He said that with the purchase of property for widening of North Front Street from Craig Street to 401 Highway soon due, all owners were confused and he hoped that some formula or understanding would be forthcoming "so that everyone knows he is getting a fair deal from the city."

At the same time Ald. Deacon said he hoped property owners realized that in the proposed street widening they would have a fine four-lane highway, curbs and sidewalks at little cost to themselves.



Mayor Jack Ellis said he felt the assessment commissioner was appraising properties correctly, but agreed for the city manager to bring in a report on the matter.

WILL REPAIR HALL

Council approved of a public works committee recommendation calling for an estimated $1,905 to be spent on repairs and other work to be done at city hall.

The work includes floor tile repairs in several of the city offices panelling of the inner vestibule at the Bridge hall entrances and repair of eavestroughing.

Council authorized the retaining of special council to represent the city in an appeal by Albert College regarding payment of local improvements costs for installation of watermains and sewers.

OFF THE RECORD — By Ed Reed

"Wonderful news, dear, I've given up gambling."

THE LITTLE WOMAN

"Herbert tells me you're his biggest client and I believe him!"

Ann Landers

Daughter Ready to Repeat Mother's Earlier Mistakes

DEAR ANN LANDERS — During the past few months I was pleased to see a once-forbidden subject, homosexuality, discussed openly and intelligently in your column.

Twenty-two years ago, over the violent protests of my parents, I married a man who had confessed to me that he was a homosexual. I was strongly attracted to him and confident that I could get him to change.

A year after our marriage a daughter was born. Within a few weeks my husband was sent overseas. Following his release from the service he said he had met a man he preferred to live with and wanted a separation but not a divorce. I agreed and turned down his generous offer of support since I had an inheritance from my grandparents and didn't need financial help.

ANN LANDERS

My husband add his friend moved to another section of the country and I have seen him only five times in the past 20 years.

Six months ago my daughter began dating a young man who is startingly like her father in appearance. He is brilliant and charming in the same way that her father was. Last week he told her about his homosexual tendencies. I suspected it the first time I met him but said nothing. Now I feel my life has come full circle and my daughter will surely be trapped in a tragedy which duplicates my own.

Should I speak to the young man privately and ask him to stop seeing my daughter? Or should I tell my daughter of my husband's existence and beg her not to make the same mistake?

— M.V.

DEAR M.V. — Do not speak to the young man and do not bring your husband into the picture. Presenting yourself as "the horrible example" will only complicate matters and add to your daughter's problems. Enlist the help of a physician or a psychiatrist and make it a three-cornered discussion, with the physician or psychiatrist doing most of the talking.

Don't be surprised if your daughter marries the young man anyway. People who feel strongly about romantic involvements seldom listen to reason. (You are exhibit A.) They may know, intellectually, that fire is hot and that it burns, but they insist on getting their own blisters, nonetheless.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Our daughter Rosalie has a good job in an office. She is going steady with a fellow who works in the warehouse.

Sheldon takes Rosalie to the movies once a week and then to a drive-in for a sandwich and a malted. This he calls dinner.

Every few weeks Sheldon eats out with us. When the cheque comes to the table he always says, "How much was my dinner?" He hands me the exact amount, to the penny, with never a word about paying for Rosalie's meal.

What kind of a man wouldn't treat his own girl to dinner? My wife and I have been having some arguments over this. She says I am too hard on the boy. I say he is cheap. What do you say? — ROSALIE'S PA.

DEAR PA — This may come as a shock to you, but when a young man accompanies his girl and her parents to dinner he should be treated as a guest. This means Pa pays the cheque. All of it.

U.C.W. Meetings

GILEAD U.C.W.

GILEAD—The Gilead United Church Women held their Easter Thankoffering meeting on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Nellie Huffman with ten members and three children present.

The president, Mrs. Lyle Martin, opened the meeting.

The business consisted of discussions concerning the church services being discontinued and decided that instruction be given present contacts and each Circle member be responsible for his or her given.

Invitations from Shannonville and Melrose to attend their open meetings on April 28th afternoon and May 5th evening respectively were accepted. Date to discontinue of services at Gilead it was decided to disperse with a special thankoffering meeting and the offering was received.

EASTER PROGRAM

Mrs. Gerald Swan, program convener, selected as her theme "The Road to Gethsemane," with Mrs. Earl Ross at the electric organ playing several appropriate Easter selections, followed by an Easter prayer by Mrs. Swan.

An appropriate reading was given by Mrs. Nellie Huffman from the book entitled "Take Time." This proved appropriate depicting the re-opening of many worship centres long since closed with the request of a small son that his father, a former sexton, ring the bells of his childhood church, and a story of the returning soldier to his church on Easter Sunday morning.

The Gethsemane story in solo form was rendered by Mrs. Ethel Yorke and a Biblical reading was given by Mrs. Gerald Livingston.

The meditation given by Mrs. Gerald Swan described Gethsemane before a worship centre of "Jesus pictured in Gethsemane" beneath a spray of Easter lilies and the "Open Bible as a frontispiece which give dignity for the Spirit of Easter."

The reading of poems by Mrs. Wilfred Badgley and Mrs. Swan brought the service to a close.

A vote of thanks was given to the hostess, Mrs. Huffman, and her co-hostess, Mrs. John Huffman.

The May meeting is to be held at the home of Mrs. Clarence Martin on May 12th.

'Family Night' Held by Church Group

"Family Night" was sponsored by the Women's Department of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints on Friday.

Members of the church and friends met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Cassiff at 218 Victoria Ave., for dessert, worship and social time together.

A religious play by members was followed with prayer by Elder W. L. Cassiff. Members of the play were Elder Cassiff, Mr. and Mrs. Jack McCurdy, Mrs. S. C. Elsa, Diane and Carol Cassiff and Teddy Smith.

Following the worship period a social time under the direction of Mrs. W. L. Cassiff was enjoyed by all. Games were played and prizes awarded to the winners.

Out-of-town guests were Mrs. L. McCurdy, her daughter Debbie, and Julia Tretsanow of Ottawa.

W.I. Holds Final Euchre

The last euchre party of the winter season was held on Friday evening at Harder's School. Conveners were Mrs. A. Ketcheson and Mrs. R. Silckle. There were ten tables in play and prize winners were: ladies' high, Mrs. Glen Stickle; ladies' low, Miss Darla St. Hilaire; ladies' lone hand, Mrs. Gerald St. Hilaire; men's high, Ben McMurter; men's low, George Burrows; men's lone hand, Mr. Phillips. Mrs. Harold Dickens won a crocheted dresser set made and donated by Mrs. Lloyd Bewley, president of the W.I. Mrs. Bewly thanked all those members and friends who had made the euchre parties so successful and expressed the hope that next winter the W.I. would be able to have more card parties at the school.

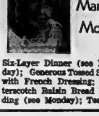
APPLE PUDDING RECIPES

Widow Betsy was married to Dennis B. who was a wonderful provider. He would buy a barrel of apples late in the Fall every year and store them in the root cellar. She used them prodigally but he kept an eye on them to find those that might have a bad spot. These he would bring up and ask her to use in a pie.



Years and years after he died she would lament this - saying she always had to work with the bad apples while good ones were growing older and older until finally they were the bad apples in the barrel.

Do you have a supply of apples in the basement going going gone?

The world cannot then before it is too late I'm giving you two simple apple pudding recipes today.

Six-Layer Dinner (see Monday); Cucumber Tossed Salad with French Dressing; Butterscotch Raisin Bread Pudding (see Monday); Tea.

DUTCH APPLE CAKE

2¼ cups sifted all-purpose flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons sugar, ¼ cup shortening, ½ cup chopped nuts (optional), ½ cup seedless raisins, 1 egg, well beaten, ½ cup milk.

Topping:
2 or 3 cups apples, each cut into twelfths (use 3 medium Spys), ¼ cup melted butter or margarine, ½ cup brown sugar, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon nutmeg or mace.

Sift together sifted flour, baking powder and salt. Add sugar. Cut in shortening with pastry blender until mixture is mealy. Add nuts (if used) and raisins. Combine beaten egg and milk. Gradually add to dry ingredients, stirring to barely blend. Turn into a well-greased, deep baking dish (at least 6-cup capacity as this tends to boil over), making the top level. Arrange apple wedges in circular design on top. Combine remaining topping ingredients and spread evenly over apples. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. for 45 minutes, or until apples are tender. Serve warm, cut in wedges, with milk or pouring cream.

APPLE COCOANUT CRISP

4½ cups sliced apples (Spys), ½ cup granulated sugar, 2 teaspoons lemon juice, 2 tablespoons water, ½ cup butter or margarine, ½ cup brown sugar, firmly packed, ½ cup flour, ¾ cup quick-cooking oats, 1 cup shredded cocoanut.

Arrange sliced apples in a greased 1½-qt. baking dish. Sprinkle with granulated sugar. Combine lemon juice and water. Pour over apples. Cream butter or margarine with brown sugar. Blend in flour and oats. Spread evenly over apples. Top with shredded cocoanut. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. for 45 to 50 minutes, or until apples are tender. Serve warm with milk or cream.

MENU Magic from the Test KITCHEN

Changing Times

Requests for new menu ideas are pouring in again, now that spring is here. And it be a touch of spring fever ? in any case, we suggest trying something new with dairy foods — easy on the budget, good to eat and just as good for the family as the old standbys.

Start with Breakfast

Start the chronic breakfast-skippers off on the right foot nutritionally with a frosty Orange Nog. For two servings, beat together 2 eggs, 2 tablespoons sugar, ¼ cup of skim milk powder and a cup of cold orange juice. Serve up this breakfast-in-a-glass with a slice or two of hot buttered toast. Who'll ever recognize the same old pattern in this new quick-to-drink form ?

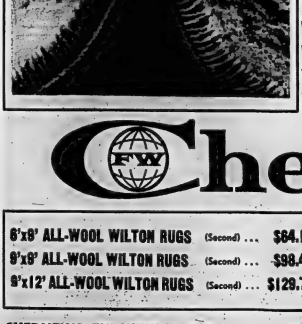
Brunch or Lunch

Ever tried adding cottage cheese to scrambled eggs ? It really makes them light and creamy. A cup of cheese along with ¼ cup milk is about right for 8 eggs . . . blend and cook as usual is melted butter.

Minced Magic

Minced beef inevitably turns up in the menu somewhere during the week. Give it the food value of extra milk by adding skim milk powder . . . ½ cup powder for each pound of meat. This won't alter the liquid in a meat loaf or patty recipe.

Hint o' Summer



If you enjoy refreshing Salad Molds as we do, try this nifty idea. Dissolve a 3-ounce package of lime jelly powder in a cup of boiling water. Then, instead of adding cold water, beat in a 4-ounce package of cream cheese until the mixture is smooth. Add a few crisp vegetables—such as a mixture of shredded cabbage, grated carrot and chopped spinach—and such flavoring ingredients as grated onion, lemon juice, salt and Worcestershire sauce.

Candy Capers

When the children cook for homemade candy, try these Peppermint Humbugs . . . easy to make with skim milk powder. Bring 1 tablespoon butter, 3 tablespoons sugar and 1 tablespoon corn syrup to a boil and simmer 7 minutes. Remove from the heat and quickly stir in ¾ cup skim milk powder and 2 teaspoons peppermint extract. Turn onto a board dusted with skim milk powder and knead lightly. Cut into pieces.

FASHION EXPERT — Rita Ustinov says that a girl who wants to get into the fashion field must be born with a fashion sense; there is no way to teach it. Now fashion co-ordinator for McCall's patterns, the former Rita Chalmers got her first taste of fashion at the age of eight when she cut up some yellow ladies from her mother's dresser and made a dress for Sunday School. With her is artist-husband Platon Ustinov. Actor Peter Ustinov is a nephew. (CP Photo)

Says Top Designer

No Sure Way to Teach Women Fashion Sense

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP)—If you are eight years old and want to go to the top in the fashion world, wait for a weekend when your mother isn't home. Take a length of yellow faille from her dresser, then cut and sew yourself a dress to wear to Sunday school.

That's what Rita Ustinov did when she was a girl of eight in Vancouver, named Rita Chalmers. Mrs. Ustinov became a couturier in Vancouver and now is fashion co-ordinator for McCall's patterns. Two of her Vancouver customers have been named to Canada's list of 10 best-dressed women.

She and her husband, artist Platon Ustinov, came to Toronto from their Manhattan home when Mrs. Ustinov was asked to address the Toronto Fashion Group.

Mrs. Ustinov's job is to coordinate advertising and promotion for McCall's patterns. She says it is typical of the fashion field in that there is no other job quite like it, and no definite way to train for it.

She spent her first six years with the company, from 1952 to 1958, travelling with fashion shows in the United States and other countries. "I know the layout of major stores in most cities and I know the people in the stores." It is useful information men about 450 shows go out of her office across the country every year.

PAYS TO RELAX

She is involved in commenting, radio and television work and printing production. "When we do fashion posters that go into the stores, I'm an art director, and in charge of making the clothes, hiring the model, directing the photographer, choosing colors.

"I never set out to learn techniques. Sometimes I think we press too hard to learn things, to learn formulas. If you just relax, it'll usually come off pretty well.

"It's like commentating a show. If you know your stuff, it's better to ad lib it; it's more exciting."

Mrs. Ustinov says a girl who wants to get into the fashion field must be extremely fond of fashion, but must also get a good basic background in a fashion school. "Then there are quite a lot of fields she can go into—promotion, ready-to-wear, a fabric house, an ad agency as fashion stylist."

Unfortunately, Mrs. Ustinov says, she can think of no way to teach a fashion sense to women.

"I think you are partly born with taste; it isn't something you can learn very well. It is partly individuality, the sort of thing that makes a woman who is buying a hat put her hands up to it and do something with it after the milliner has put it on her.

FOND OF SEWING

"The pattern business is compellive. We are all trying to produce newer and easier and fashion-right methods and patterns. Now a trend in ready-to-wear is available in patterns in a matter of weeks."

Mrs. Ustinov says she still makes most of her own clothes, that the coat she had with her was the first one she had bought in five years.

"I like to sew because it does something for me. My husband will tell you. If a friend sees a blouse she likes, I'll offer to make it for her. I get too interested. He has to ask me to sew buttons back on his rain coat."

Her pride in her husband showing, she says: "My husband has a studio in our apartment. Our work gives us lots of things to discuss which are kindred. He is an intellectual, wonderful to chat with after the business of a day.

"He comes from a long line of people talented in the arts of one kind or another. His grandmother sculpted, and his eldest brother's son is Peter Ustinov and of course he does everything very well."

She says they still manage to spend part of every summer at their home on Salt Spring Island near Vancouver.

Mrs. Ustinov has a conviction which applies no matter what business a person is in. "I have always felt if somebody does something for you, you can return it by doing something for someone else. . . .

"When I was in the couturier business in Vancouver, because of the interest a friend had in me, she introduced me to someone who had a lot to do with my going to McCall's.

"When we can do a show for charity or guide a girl who wants to get into the field, I like us to do it. We are going so fast today, too many people don't even take time to say thank you."

NO MORE STICKY PASTRY

Dear Susanna: I'm newly married and just learning to make pastry. Somehow I seem to be plagued with pie crust stick-i-tus. No matter how much flour I use the pastry still clings to the rolling pin instead of lying flat on my work board. I try to follow the recipe exactly and do everything I've been told, but I'm getting pretty discouraged. — Mrs. A. Allen

Don't be sad, you'll have a great time with the little idea I've got in store for you. Now, everyone knows what a set I am about finding new uses for old rythms — well, you've just brought to mind one of the darlingest uses of all.

Take the leg part of a nice clean stocking and slip it over your rolling pin. Fasten it neatly and tightly with elastic bands over the handle at each end. Now I defy your dough to stick. Just rinse it out afterwards, hang to dry, and pop it into the kitchen towel drawer ready for the next time. — SUSANNA

QUICK TRICK

Dear Susanna: Do hope your readers will enjoy my fun-formula for refrigerator fudge. It is easy for children to make in a hurry if they are having a few friends in for a bit of an evening. It goes over especially well at the cottage where no one wants to be bothered with anything that is a great deal of trouble.

Just melt together in a double boiler, 2 ounces each of peanut butter, chocolate chips and coconut. Stir well and place in cake pan. Cut into squares before cooling.

In addition, how do you like the uses I have for old fish balls? It depends of course upon the size. I cut them to make insoles for shoes. Trace the shape on the felt. They are nice and warm for walking out when the weather is cool or damp. — Miss Carnegie.

From head to toe — how about that! — SUSANNA

FASHION EXPERT — Rita Ustinov says that a girl who wants to get into the fashion field must be born with a fashion sense; there is no way to teach it. Now fashion co-ordinator for McCall's patterns, the former Rita Chalmers got her first taste of fashion at the age of eight when she cut up some yellow falle from her mother's dresser and made a dress for Sunday School. With her is artist-husband Platon Ustinov. Actor Peter Ustinov is a nephew.

No Sure Way to Teach Women Fashion Sense

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP)—If you are eight years old and want to go to the top in the fashion world, wait for a weekend when your mother isn't home. Take a length of yellow faille from her dresser, then cut and sew yourself a dress to wear to Sunday school.

That's what Rita Ustinov did when she was a girl of eight in Vancouver named Rita Chalmers. Mrs. Ustinov became a couturier in Vancouver and now is fashion co-ordinator for McCall's patterns. Two of her Vancouver customers have been named to Canada's list of 10 best-dressed women.

She and her husband, artist Platon Ustinov, came to Toronto from their Manhattan home when Mrs. Ustinov was asked to address the Toronto Fashion Group.

Mrs. Ustinov's job is to coordinate advertising and promotion for McCall's patterns. She says it is typical of the fashion field in that there is no other job quite like it, and no definite way to train for it.

She spent her first six years with the company, from 1952 to 1958, travelling with fashion shows in the United States and other countries. "I know the layout of major stores in most cities and I know the people in the stores." It is useful information now when about 450 shows go out of her office across the country every year.

PAYS TO RELAX

She is involved in commenting, radio and television work and printing production. "When we do fashion posters that go into the stores, I'm an art director, and in charge of making the clothes, hiring the model, directing the photographer, choosing colors.

"I never set to learn techniques. Sometimes I think we press too hard to learn things, to learn formulas. If you just relax, it'll usually come off pretty well.

"It's like commentating a show. If you know your stuff, it's better to ad lib it; it's more exciting."

Mrs. Ustinov says a girl who wants to get into the fashion field must be extremely fond of fashion, but must also get a good basic background in a fashion school. "Then there are quite a lot of fields she can go into—promotion, ready-to-wear, a fabric house, an ad agency as fashion stylist."

Unfortunately, Mrs. Ustinov says, she can think of no way to teach a fashion sense to women.

"I think you are partly born with taste; it isn't something you can learn very well. It is partly individuality, the sort of thing that makes a woman who is buying a hat put her hands up to it and do something with it after the milliner has put it on her.

FOND OF SEWING

"The pattern business is competitive. We are all trying to produce newer and easier and fashion-right methods and patterns. Now a trend in ready-to-wear is available in patterns in a matter of weeks."

Mrs. Ustinov says she still makes most of her own clothes, that the coat she had with her was the first one she had bought in five years.

"I like to sew because it does something for me. My husband will tell you. If a friend does a blouse she likes, I'll offer to make it for her. I get too interested. He says to ask me to sew buttons back on his rain coat."

Her pride in her husband showing, she says: "My husband has a studio in our apartment. Our work gives us lots of things to discuss which are kindred. He is an intellectual, wonderful to chat with after the business of a day.

He comes from a long line of people interested in the arts of one kind or another. His grandmother sculpted, and his eldest brother's son is Peter Ustinov and of course he does everything very well."

Comrade Boyle asked the blessing and everyone proceeded to enjoy the steak dinner, cooked and served by Comrade G. Fitzgerald, and her assistants, who were thanked for the lovely meal.

Three draws were made and the lucky winners were: P. Rousky (glassware), F. Mawdsley (dessert forks), M. Dracup (glassware.)

Comrade Boyle presented both "A" and "B" trophies. "A" trophy was won by the Rovers, captained by E. Smash, sub-captain, W. Foxan, H. Brunton, E. Sills, L. Fournier and F. Chatterson.

WOMAN HUNTS WORMS

HALIFAX (CP) — Helen McCarney has work for 300 students or part-time laborers, but finds it hard to get people to take her seriously. She wants them to pick worms. After 11 years in the earthworm business in Quebec Mr. and Mrs. McCarney moved to Nova Scotia where, she says, "the soil and temperature are perfect for night crawlers."

Church Groups

ST. MARK'S W.A.

BONARLAW — The April meeting of St. Mark's Anglican W.A., Bonarlaw, was held at the home of Charles Wellman.

The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. Barlow. Mr. Stewart was in charge of the prayer and meditation.

In place of the usual Scripture reading, Mr. Stewart showed a descriptive and explanatory film of the existing conditions at the time of the Lord's crucifixion. In a simple way, it linked the Old Testament with the New and gave a logical reason for the importance of the Creed. Everyone believes in something and there is a necessity for faith and belief in what one does no matter what the field of work.—This bolted and faith makes it easier to obey.

A letter was received from Mrs. Kenidon, a diocesan member of Gananoque, asking that the names of deceased members be sent to right away to be enrolled in the memorial book before the annual Diocesan meeting. Mrs. Wellman's name was sent in.

The Dorcas secretary reminded the members of the Arctic bale to be sent. A quilt has been finished and the members were asked to donate a gift for the bale. The entre-cent-by collection was taken up and several handed in their thank-offering.

This must be handed in before the delegate leaves for the annual meeting May 4th and Mrs. Everett Heath is to be the delegate.

The need for new tables for the church hall was the topic for discussion; it was decided that new tables be purchased and Mrs. A. Burkitt will be responsible for this task.

The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. A. Frost.

A short program followed, consisting of a reading by Mrs. E. Heath and a Biblical quiz, conducted by Mrs. Ronald Brown. Mr. Stewart was the winner.

The hostess served a dainty lunch and a social half hour was enjoyed.

Successful Living

Beauty Is Only Skin Deep, Personality Counts More

DEAR DORIS — I have had a bad complexion since I was 13 (am now 16) and have followed all the rules to a lovely skin but to no avail. Now I just use medicated make-up to give me self confidence.

To those girls who complain that acne hampers them from realizing their desires I say, rubbish! Beauty is only skin deep; it is a nice personality that counts. Good grooming is also a great help.

Absolutely no fellow in his right mind is going to take out a simpering self-centred excuse of a female. Forget your pimples, I say, it won't last forever; and develop your good points. Personally, I have a whopper of a case of pimples, but I never lack for a date and sometimes I have too many offers.

I used to feel sorry for myself until I woke up and saw that I was missing out on all the fun. So, Doris, please tell those silly girls that they are not hopeless wallflowers unless they make themselves that way. — ENLIGHTENED ACNE SUFFERER.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR ENLIGHTENED — Bravo! It's personality that pays off!

But there's more than medicated make-up that can help. Diet counts; also scrupulous cleanliness, featured by frequent scrubbing with soap. The leaflet on acne goes into all this.

(P.S. to readers: Recent requests for this leaflet were well-nigh overwhelming, but many failed to include the five-cent-stamped envelope along with their ten cents. Isn't the healthy route to a clear skin worth it?)

DEAR DORIS — At home my brothers are always making fun of me and Dad finds something wrong with everything that I do.

When there is work to be done I always get the worst part and my older brothers are let off easy. Although I am a boy and the youngest, I don't see why I should be treated so. What do you think I should do? — TROUBLED.

DEAR TROUBLED — Does Dad come home grumpy and tired? The big boys too? Maybe they work harder than you know, when they are away from the home.

Anyway, there's no excuse for constant carping. And a dandy reason for praising instead. But they all care about you. If you got sick or had an accident they'd feel terrible.

One of these days talk with your Dad about this. Ask for a pat on the back. Show him this column.

DEAR DORIS — It's too easy to say hurtful words that can't be recalled, pass the rash judgment, make accusation without proof. Yet why is it so hard to say I'm sorry? — GYPSY.

DEAR GYPSY — Apologies come hard to those who feel like two cents anyway. It is only the well-balanced person who is willing to admit it when he has done or said a wrong thing.

DEAR DORIS — Lest you as a member of our high school newspaper staff I wrote a farcial "Advice to the Lovelorn" column under the pen name of Phoebe, based on columns like yours. This column published absurd, fictitious letters written by myself to which I again would give equally absurd advice, all for the purpose of getting a few laughs for the paper and satirizing the often ridiculous "Advice" columns.

Recently I just chanced to glance at your column and noticed one of these aforementioned letters from last year copied verbatim, the one signed "Just Unlucky." This letter was one of my poorer attempts.

Are your letters actually for real? — PHOEBE.

DEAR PHOEBE — I'd love to see one of your good ones. I published "Just Unlucky" for its comedy relief. It came unsigned.

Indeed my letters are for real. So many of them that it's all I can do to keep ahead of them. And problems so urgent that they would challenge the most understanding and skilled counsellor.

P.S. — I'm interested that it's Mister Phoebe.

Confidential to SHY — Write again, this time enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and ten cents for the leaflet and reading list entitled "Don't Be Shy." This will give you some helpful pointers.

BUDGET DOLLAR — Graph shows where the government will get its budget dollar in the 1965-66 fiscal year and how it will be spent. Most important change is a 10 per cent drop in personal income tax. The government hopes to make up for a decline in revenue from personal tax with more revenue from corporation and sales taxes. Finance Minister Gordon forecasts revenue of $7,350,000,000 and expenditures of $7,650,000,000. (CP Newsmap)

Opposition Spokesmen Assail Federal Budget

By BEN WARD

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition party spokesmen assailed the new federal budget Monday night, describing it as "fiscal insanity," "an abdication of opportunity" and a monumental farce."

Conservative Leader Diefenbaker said the personal income tax reductions offered by Finance Minister Gordon are "practically meaningless," providing as little as three cents a day for those in the lowest income groups.

"It was a disappointing performance," he told reporters. "In summary, the Liberal backbenchers came to cheer and ended up completely dumbfounded by the inadequacy of the proposals."

It amounted to a grandiose and inflated budget, little more than fiscal insanity, Mr. Diefenbaker said.

"It's those in the $20,000-a-year bracket that get the help."

Colin Cameron, financial critic for the New Democratic Party, said the $265,000,000 in tax cuts will not stimulate the economy because most of the benefit goes to the rich rather than to those with average incomes.

"It is an abdication of responsibility," was his summary.

Mr. Cameron, MP for Nanaimo - Cowichan - The Islands, complained that the proposal for a Canada Development Corporation was not handled properly. Instead of taking over a government operation like the Polymer Corp., it should have been aimed at extending the economy into new areas.

Creditiste Leader Real Caouette said the income tax cut was intended to fool the public. A married taxpayer with two children and an annual income of $3,000 would save only $3 this year.

The budget was a monumental farce that would give most of its benefit to the rich.

Criticizing the Canada Development Corporation, he said the fund was doomed for government to interfere in the investment sector. Private capital could develop the economy much more effectively if it were left alone.

Social Credit Leader Thompson said the budget was an improvement but he had been hoping for a balanced one and regretted the forecast of a $300,000,000 deficit in the current fiscal year.

The finance minister had taken credit for the upswing in the economy which rightfully belonged to businessmen and workers.

George Nowland, the only critic who had an opportunity to make his remarks in the Commons before the night's adjournment, attacked the income tax cut.

A married man with two dependents and earning $3,000 would get a tax cut of 25 cents a day. "This is a two-bit reduction by the two-bit boys," the former Conservative finance minister said.

The whole country had been expecting estates and the 11-per-cent sales tax on building materials and production equipment, based on Mr. Gordon's 1963 budget. This was the most glaring deficiency in "this alleged budget."

Mr. Nowlan complained about the Liberal finance minister taking credit for the economic upswing of the last two years. It was actually a continuation of the surge that began during the Conservative administration whose economy-spurring policies had been adopted wholesale by the Liberals.

Filibuster On Medical Care Seen

TORONTO (CP)—The third session of Ontario's 27th Parliament resumes after an eight-day Easter recess today and shortly afterwards may find itself facing the first full-blown filibuster within the memory of most present MPPs.

If the filibuster develops it will be spurred by the government's proposed medical services insurance legislation, which Premier Robarts has promised to bring forth at this session. He did not do so during the first 58 days.

Both opposition parties have geared their strategy for the remainder of the session towards the handling of the medical services bill. They will fight the principle of private carriers having control over medical insurance for the Ontario populace.

Earlier in the session, the government - appointed Hagey committee on medical services insurance submitted a report endorsing the Conservative government's proposed non-compulsory scheme but limiting medical benefits to physicians' services alone.

Both the official Liberal opposition and the New Democrats had called for publicly - operated, compulsory plan insurance that would be compulsory and comprehensive in nature. But such a plan has been rejected by the government in 1963.

On July 7, Mrs. MacMillan phoned Philip Garbe, Toronto assistant manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia, and asked for a loan of $274,000 to complete an underwriting of Windfall shares.

Mr. Dodd told the commission that by the time the shares went into the bank head office an hour later, he had obtained approval in principle for the loan.

He said the funds were to be made available to Canadian Delta Services Ltd. and Golden Shaft Mines Ltd.

The bank was in addition to a loan account on which a balance of $30,745 was owing to the bank at July 1, he said.

Collateral included about 785,000 negotiable Windfall shares then valued at about $1.30 each and other securities valued at about $13,000.

Mr. Dodd said the bank considered this adequate collateral for a loan of three or four days.

Meet British Complaints About Customs

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian government will seek to remove a long-standing British complaint against one of its duty provisions as a "clear signal that we welcome their trade," Finance Minister Gordon said in his budget speech Monday night.

He said the action follows Britain's claim that the provision discriminates against some of its exports to Canada, compared with the export of similar goods from other countries.

The proposed change would also apply to other countries.

The British complaint concerns the valuation of goods for duty purposes on the basis of the quantities of goods sold and the trade level at which they are sold in the country of origin.

Britain has argued that because of its system of distributing goods — frequently directly from manufacturer to retailer, and not through a wholesaler as in Canada—unrealistic duty appraisals can be made when goods are shipped to Canada.

The proposed change would permit the value to be a value for duty, not less than an amount equal to cost of production plus a reasonable gross profit in the country of origin.

In other proposed changes in the Customs Act, Mr. Gordon suggested the department of national revenue be allowed to accept bonds to cover temporary non-payment of duty, so imported goods may be cleared through customs with a minimum of delay.

Tax Table Shows Effect Of Reduction

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian taxpayers will receive the full benefit of Finance Minister Gordon's income tax cuts in 1966.

The reductions announced Monday night in the budget speech are effective July 1, meaning that in 1965 taxpayers will pay half-way between the old rate and six months at the new.

Following table shows combined federal and provincial personal income tax (less old age security) before reductions, the 1965 tax less the half-year's reduction, and the 1966 tax with a full year's reduction (assuming no change in federal rates next year):

Only Half Tax Reduction To Be Effective This Year

OTTAWA (CP)—The personal income tax cut most Canadians will be receiving in 10 per cent reduction under the $800 minimum clause. A married tax-payer without children earning $20,000 would get a $2-per-cent reduction, and a married tax-payer with two children earning $20,000 would get a $4-per-cent cut.

Other changes in the Income Tax Act will mean that:

Taxpayers who support nieces or nephews can receive the same income allowance as applies to their own children—$300 if they receive family allowances and $500 if they do not.

However, this will apply only if the father of the niece or nephew is dead or mentally or physically infirm, or if the mother is divorced or separated and is receiving alimony or similar payments. To qualify, the niece or nephew must be under 21 years of age, and must be in school or university or mentally or physically infirm.

Taxpayers may also deduct $550 if they support an aunt or uncle who is mentally or physically infirm.

Annual membership dues in a trade union, an association of public servants, or a professional organization "to maintain professional standards" now will be allowed as a deduction from taxable income — apart from the standard $100 deduction. The latter previously included these along with unspecified charitable donations and medical expenses.

Taxpayers now will be allowed to put up to 20 per cent of their income into a registered pension plan without paying tax on it. The previous limit was 10 per cent.

This money is taxable when it is paid back out of the plan.

Employees who receive a lump sum when they leave their jobs will no longer have to include this in taxable income provided they transfer it into a pension plan, a retirement savings plan or a deferred profit-sharing plan.

At the same time, Mr. Gordon moved to plug a loophole in connection with lump-sum payments. It involves section 36 of the act, which provides relief for certain lump-sum payments that go to taxpayers, usually from pension schemes or profit-sharing plans.

The minister said some taxpayers arranged to have "inordinately large amounts" placed to their credit and then receive if when they leave their jobs. Under section 36 as it exists, the rate of income on this money is the same as the average rate paid by the taxpayer on his income over the last three years. In future, the amount he can claim under this clause will be restricted to $1,000 times the number of years he was a member of the plan.

In the case of a lump-sum payment for long service or in respect to loss of employment, the eligible amount will be $1,000 times the number of years of employment.

Another loophole involves taxpayers who have income from Canadian businesses and who pay only the 15-per-cent withholding tax by having the money go to non-resident beneficiaries. In future, such money will be taxable at regular rates.

Canada Warned It Can't Depend On Foreign Capital

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian economy is expanding at a rate that is "unsustainable" and Canada cannot depend indefinitely on foreign capital to finance expansion, Finance Minister Gordon said in his budget speech Monday night.

"We must avoid excessive deficits on international payments," he said.

Mr. Gordon said that since economic expansion is now proceeding at a rate that is unsustainable, the government's objective is a healthy rate of sustained economic growth.

"Canada cannot depend indefinitely on foreign capital to finance expansion and must avoid excessive deficits on international payments.

Quick Test for Whooping Cough Is Devised by Toronto Biologist

TORONTO — Grandma may have thought she was right, but sometimes she was really wrong, with the result that her diagnosis of whooping cough just helped spread it around the community.

Although immunization against this disease is generally available everywhere, it is still a menace to child health, usually among infants who haven't been immunized or children from outlying areas. More than 100 a year reach The Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, many of them seriously ill.

Because it is highly infectious, its victims must be isolated quickly. But to distinguish the disease from others like croup was difficult; both usually produce honking, barking coughs. Whooping cough should be treated early; bronchitis or pneumonia may follow it, and its paroxysms of coughing can cause brain damage.

Wrongly diagnosed, children with croup can be put in isolation and there pick up whooping cough. Or children with the disease may not be isolated and infect others. For a long time the only certain diagnosis was to take a swab of mucous from the child's throat and incubate it to see if the germs were there. This took up to five days and chaos could occur meanwhile.

At The Hospital for Sick Children, Dr. Norma Chalvardjian, research biologist, took a short cut by using a known principle. Antibodies form in a body that is attacked by an infection. So she infected rabbits with whooping cough and extracted the antibodies from their blood. She used these as detectives to investigate the mucous from the babies. Fluoridated so they glow in ultraviolet light under a microscope, she can see in minutes if they are assailing something. The result is a positive diagnosis, obtained promptly.

Though mortality reports still show deaths from whooping cough — about 500 a year in the U.S. — in The Hospital for Sick Children no deaths have occurred for several years, despite an average population daily that includes about 300 sick infants among the 700-odd patients.

the two-bit boys."

The income-tax cuts represent the first reduction in the rates since the 1957 budget. Mr. Gordon said they would "encourage and stimulate our working forces—including those in management and the profession—upon whose efforts our prosperity and progress depend."

After July 1, the 10-per-cent cut will apply in full to virtually all taxpayers earning less than $30,000 a year. But because the rates are scaled, ranging from 2 to 3600 in a full year, those earning above $30,000 or $60,000 abouts will enjoy a smaller percentage cut.

Federal revenue from personal income taxes will be lowered by 12.7 per cent under the arrangement. Revenue from the 10-per-cent reduction is to apply to individuals, in all provinces, regardless of the province's income tax abatement, now 21 per cent.

If the abatement was not taken into account, taxpayers in some provinces would get a bigger reduction than those in others.

There is nothing to stop provinces from stepping into the tax vacuum and imposing higher taxes on its own. But Mr. Gordon said that when the cuts are being implemented for economic reasons, "I would not expect any province at this time to move in to raise their income taxes to take advantage of our action."

PAY $34 LESS

On the basis of a $9,000 income, a single taxpayer now pays a total income tax of $236 would pay about $36 less under the new reduced rates. A married taxpayer with two children would have his $33 tax bill chopped to $2.

The four-per-cent old age security tax is not included in these examples.

Other changes in the income tax regulations will allow taxpayers to claim dependents in the form of children or grandchildren provided their father is dead or mentally or physically infirm, or the taxpayer is divorced or separated without alimony.

The taxpayer can claim $300 if nieces or nephews receive family allowances and $350 if they do not.

A taxpayer will also be allowed to claim $350 if he supports an aunt or uncle who is mentally or physically infirm.

Under the new regulations, dues paid to trade unions, public servants' associations and professional organizations will also be allowed as deductions from taxable income.

$100 STANDARD

This will not affect the standard $100 deduction, which previously was allowed. It has included these dues, along with unspecified medical expenses and charitable contributions.

Also, taxpayers now will be permitted to put 20 per cent of their income to a maximum of $2,500 into a registered pension plan on a tax-free basis. The upper limit has been 10 per cent.

Employees who receive a lump sum when they leave their jobs won't have to pay tax on this provided they transfer it into a pension plan a retirement savings plan or a deferred profit-sharing plan.

Some of the measures in the budget have been before the House before, in one form or another. One of these involves foreign publications.

Mr. Gordon said that after next Dec. 31 he will disallow, as a business expense, the cost of advertising in foreign-owned publications aimed at the Canadian market if there is already established in Canada. The latter include Time, Reader's Digest and two large weekly newspapers he did not identify.

The budget also said that farmers will be allowed to deduct amounts spent on clearing land or laying drainage tile for farm operations.

HITS POLLUTION

Businesses spending money to prevent their waste products from polluting lakes and streams will be allowed to deduct from taxable income 50 per cent of this expenditure between now and the end of 1965.

The cost of building grain storage facilities, in areas where such facilities don't exist, can be written off for tax purposes in four years instead of the existing 6 years for masonry buildings and 20 years for wooden structures. This will apply between May 1, 1965, and Dec. 31, 1965.

Tax allowances will also be made on the cost of investigating industrial sites, landscaping business property, cancelling a lease or obtaining a licence, franchise or trademark.

The fast write-off for machinery and equipment purchases by Canadian - owned firms, a Canadian owner or chairman of the board with 75 per cent of its directors Canadian and 75 per cent of its stock of which has value held by Canadians.

"The purpose of this measure as it applies to taxpayers is purely preventive," the minister said. "No existing commercial practices will be affected, nor will any changes in existing advertising patterns be required.

"Foreign newspapers can enter Canada freely and will continue to do so, but we intend that our Canadian newspapers shall remain under the control of Canadians."

They will be as free as ever to determine their own editorial content, and will be free to use whatever foreign commentaries and other features they wish; they will be free to rely upon whatever foreign or international news services they favor."

DOESN'T GIVE REASON

Mr. Gordon gave no indication that Time and Reader's Digest, either of which meet the definition of a "Canadian" definition, are being exempted.

But Prime Minister Pearson, in answering questions on March 1 a year ago, said it was because "these special editions have been published in Canada a few some years and have made a place for themselves with Canadian readers."

While Time and Readers' Digest will be exempt from the ban on deductibility, Mr. Gordon indicated they face government action on another front.

"The question of the subsidized postal rates now enjoyed by certain categories of magazines and Canadian periodicals will be studied as part of a general review to be made of postal rates," he said.

Spokesmen for the Canadian magazine publishing and related trades previously pressed the government to include Time and Reader's Digest in the new Canadian category.

Similar pressure has come from within the Liberal party, some members of which have made speeches in the Commons criticizing the proposed exemption.

FREE DISCRIMINATION

Time and Reader's Digest, which have been operating "Canadian editions" since the 1940s with a circulation of 290,000 and 1,000,000 respectively, have argued that to include them in the non-Canadian category would be to discriminate against many Canadian-owned which have become well established in this country.

As well as these two major consumer magazines, said to number about 70, the Canadian magazine advertising market, two small foreign - owned weekly newspapers also would be exempted. They were not identified.

In addition, catalogues and periodicals promoting the arts, scholarship and religion will be exempted.

The twin measures to discourage Canadian advertising in foreign publications—the budget contained advertising in foreign publications—the budget contained a 1961 royal commission headed by Montreal businessman Senator M. Grattan O'Leary, president of the Ottawa Journal.

It reported after nation-wide public hearings that the Canadian periodical industry suffered from unfair foreign competition and deserved some government assistance.

FOLLOWS SUGGESTIONS

Although the Gordon proposals generally follow its main recommendations, the commission would have gone further by including Time and Reader's Digest in the non-Canadian category and banning all foreign magazines with advertising directed primarily at the Canadian market, without any five-per-cent limit.

The former Diefenbaker government first introduced legislation in 1962 based on the commission's recommendations. A year later, however, its proposed resolution exempted Time and Reader's Digest and this legislation was maintained in the proposals set forth last year by the Pearson administration.

Each time the legislation has been introduced, it has been given an unenthusiastic reception by the United States government.

State department officials in Washington have termed it "neither a proper nor a practical solution" to the problem.

Treasury Secretary Douglas Dillon, during a visit here last year, said he felt such legislation might violate the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) and that the U.S. might "have to ask for equivalent concessions."

Ads in Foreign Magazines, Newspapers Will Not Be Deductible Expenditures

OTTAWA (CP)—The government moved Monday night to re-introduce a program to aid Canadian periodicals and extend it, as a "preventive" measure, to cover daily newspapers as well.

Finance Minister Gordon's budget speech disclosed that legislation to prohibit tax deductions for advertising in non-Canadian publications and ban the entry of foreign magazines with advertising aimed at the Canadian market will be placed before the Commons for a fourth time.

The provisions will take effect on July 1, 1965.

The "Canadian editions" of Time magazine and Reader's Digest—the principal targets of groups seeking such legislation —will be exempted from it.

With the exception of the added provisio covering newspapers, the two resolutions proposed by Mr. Gordon are largely non-identical to those introduced in past years, but never acted upon.

ARENT DEDUCTIBLE

They provide for:

Denying expenditure as a deductible expense for income tax purposes of expenditures for advertising in any non-Canadian periodical or newspaper.

A tariff ban on entry into this country of any foreign publication containing "split run" advertising aimed at Canada and not appearing in the publication in quantities more than five per cent of its advertising aimed directly at Canada, except that it is in other editions or not.

Mr. Gordon said that, while the measure is not aimed at the moment within the Canadian newspaper business, there is no doubt that it is powered a foreign take-over.

"Given the vital role newspapers play in influencing public opinion, we do not believe that control of them should be in falling under foreign control."

The operative provision, as it affects non-Canadian newspapers is concerned, is a definition of a Canadian publication that must be met to avoid the non-deduction tax penalty.

It also requires that the publishing company be headed by

The program under which firms were able to claim a 130-per-cent deduction for scientific research will be replaced by grants of 25 per cent of the expenditure. The present 20-per-cent program, effective in 1967, will provide grants automatically up to $150,000 and will allow larger amounts by prior agreement with the federal industry department.

AWAITS REPORT

Mr. Gordon also said he is awaiting the report of the federal sales tax on drugs if a special Commons committee recommends the step. The committee has been studying drug standards and production costs in the past session, but it hasn't yet dealt with costs.

Much of Mr. Gordon's economic review was similar to the pre-budget white paper, tabled several days ago, which painted a bright picture of the country's growth. The increase in the gross national product, the value of all products and services—increased by 8.9 per cent last year. He predicted an increase of more than seven per cent this year.

Without tax cuts, the treasury would have a deficit of $125,000,000 this year, he said. This would be based on estimated revenues of $7,525,000,000 and expenditures of $7,650,000,000. Cuts in personal income tax would reduce revenues by $170,000,000 and tax changes in changes by another $5,000,000.

The government's basic capital spending program is normally increased during the year through introduction of supplementary estimates. The budget main estimates were tabled in the House of Commons calling for expenditures of $7,396,727,400.

Among the big expenditures this year are defence, up to $1,550,000,000, an increase of $25,000,000 over last year; health department up by $119,442,950 to $1,390,794,800, and public debt charges up $63,163,400 to $1,101,056,400.

Debate on the budget will begin Thursday.

Output

said the robust expansion of the last two years must be continued.

"With the budget under control, we must use our fiscal policies to achieve the nation's goals," he said. "Our objective now is a healthy rate of sustained economic growth."

Both the country and almost all types of industry and agriculture were sharing in the growth of the economy's productive capacity was being added, and "we have the most rapidly growing labor force in the industrialized world, and it is better trained than ever before.

But he warned rapidly-rising production could lead to large deficits in international payments and said "these must be avoided."

In order to provide jobs to match the quite exceptional growth of our labor force we will need high levels of capital investment in the next few years, higher than the present physical capacity of the economy can be expected to meet."

He did not believe the difficulty in finding foreign capital but said Canada cannot depend on foreign capital for growth. The major source, the United States, was restricting its investment outflow.

"We would be foolhardy if we assumed over the long term the capital inflow to cover our continuing current account deficits. Canada must look to other sources for a general reduction in trade barriers.

Canada was worried about her trade deficit with Canada, but as Canada was worried about Britain's economic imbalance with the United States.

"It would be better in both cases" if increased exports enabled these large bilateral deficits to be reduced.

Britain's sales to Canada were up in 1964, with a 100-per-cent increase in automobile exports to this country.

"Here is a real example of energetic efforts aimed at adapting their products and their dealer and service organizations to meet the needs of Canadian consumers," Mr. Gordon said. "We expect now to see further substantial improvement in the sale of British products in the Canadian market."

On domestic affairs, Mr. Gordon said the federal government's responsibility in fiscal, monetary and trade policy "is greater than ever before." But federal, provincial and municipal governments must work together if we are to achieve the country's potential.

The provinces and municipalities have a larger role to play than the federal government, and the Canada Pension Plan and medicare "could greatly affect the national economy."

Current federal-provincial arrangements would come up for another five-year renewal in 1967 and would probably be reviewed and revised in the next 36 months.

He said he endeavor to find a division of the tax fields and a formula for equalizing fiscal capacity which will enable the Parliament and to each provincial legislature effective means of carrying out its own responsibilities under the constitution."

The royal commission on taxation headed by Toronto accountant Kenneth Carter, appointed in September, 1962, was expected to report in time for the budget, but there is no structure in this budget. But Mr. Gordon said the report now will not be available before autumn and a thorough review of federal tax law has been deferred.

AWAITED REPORT

In his budget speech last year, Mr. Gordon said it would be premature and unwise to make major changes at this time in tax laws, pending receipt of the Carter report.

Paper Purchase Did No Harm

OTTAWA (CP)—The restrictive trade practices commission found that "no detriment to the public interest has been caused or to result" from the 1962 acquisition of the Fort William, Times-Journal by Thomson Newspapers Limited.

Report of the investigation was released today by Justice Minister Favreau. He said that in view of the findings of the commission, "no further proceedings are contemplated."

New Budget Has Looks Of Insurance Policy Against Day of Calling Election

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — Despite official disclaimers, Finance Minister Gordon's new budget has all the appearance of an insurance policy against the day when a general election may be called.

Political observers doubt that the new budget is a sure signal the government will call an election this spring or fall.

But it has all the elements necessary, either by defeat of the minority Liberal government in the Commons or by such a stalemate in parliamentary affairs that nothing else can be done, the budget is regarded as one on which the government could go to the polls.

As one observer put it, parodying a famous remark attributed to the late Mackenzie King during the Second World War conscription crisis: An election if necessary, but not necessarily an election.

Mr. Gordon declined to associate his budget with election prospects when interviewed by reporters after delivering his speech in the Commons.

"This is a budget," he said, "I don't think we should consider tax cuts and elections in the same breath."

But he made clear he expects the budget to have more long-range effects, immediate effects on the economy.

The 10-per-cent cut in personal income tax rates, a maximum of $600 a year will put more money in the pockets of a great number of taxpayers—though the amount will not be large in lower-income brackets. However, it will also point $470,000,000 more purchasing power into active use this fiscal year.

And, Mr. Gordon told reporters, there are other parts of the budget which he expects will have an invigorating effect on the business community later this year and running into 1966. This is the time when many economic forecasters predict a decrease in the rate of growth from the high level of the last 12 to 15 months.

Moreover, the finance minister is earnest and confident in his belief that Canada will continue to grow and expand in the long-range future. For this reason he is certain that investment in the new Canadian Development Corporation will pay substantial returns in the long run.

The $1,000,000,000 corporation will start by buying Polymer Corp., the Crown-owned synthetics plant with headquarters at Sarnia and branches in four foreign countries.

Mr. Gordon remarked to reporters that Canadians now have $9,000,000,000 tucked away in savings. A large part of this is in insurance, and the insurance companies have said that as far as permitted under federal law in investing this money in Canadian enterprises.

If some of the private savings of Canadians is invested in Canadian industry the new development corporation will contribute markedly to Canadian prosperity in the years ahead.

What appears to be the line of thinking behind preparation of the budget. It won't affect the interests of an immediate general election, but is a step to inspect the government could hold an election, should it a snap election does come about.

U.S. Ready to Participate In Cambodia Conference

By BORIS MISKEW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

An international conference on Cambodia could result in informal talks on Viet Nam and possibly pave the way out of the current Vietnamese dilemma.

The United States said it would "gladly participate" in a Cambodian conference if it takes place—and named Averell Harriman, U.S. ambassador at large, to lead the delegation.

He will be accompanied by a secretary of a South Pacific proposal calling for such a conference.

The big question now is: What will Prince Norodom Sihanouk of Cambodia, chief of state, think of the idea? The Prince originally sought a conference on Cambodia's last summer to get firm guarantees of the neutrality and territorial integrity of his country.

The U.S. at that time rejected Cambodia's request on grounds what actually was needed was strict enforcement of the provisions of the 1954 Indochina conference on Southeast Asia that split Viet Nam into north and south at the 17th parallel.

NEW DANGERS

Whether the war in Viet Nam reaching new dangers, the U.S. has changed its mind about a conference. Washington says a move obviously aimed at resolving the Vietnamese crisis.

Harriman will attend the recent decision by President Johnson to enter into unconditional negotiations as well as the 1962 conference on Laos, are backing for the idea of a Cambodian conference as a possible arrangement for talks pointed toward ending the war in South Viet Nam.

The Geneva conference had been called to settle problems in Indochina and was attended by nine participants — Britain, France, the United States, the Soviet Union, Communist China, Viet Nam, Laos, Cambodia and pro Viet Minh, the rebels who had been fighting the French.

Whether the U.S. and North Viet Nam can get to a conference table on the Vietnamese crisis through Cambodia's good back door is largely in the hands of Prince Sihanouk.

PRINCE OPPOSES U.S.

The prince is reported as opposing the invitation of the United States and South Viet Nam to a conference to guarantee Cambodia's neutrality. He said also he will not attend any meeting that is only a pretext for talks on Viet Nam.

Mr. Gordon Walker, British's special envoy, conferred Monday in Phnom Penh, the Cambodian capital with Foreign Minister Koun Wick and later held a press conference but international conference would be limited to the member countries of the 1954 Geneva conference.

The participants in any Cambodian conference would likely agree that Cambodian neutrality be the sole subject of the discussions but this would not prevent informal contact by the delegation of the U.S. North Viet Nam, which is ruled by Communist China.

Such informal talks could set the stage for formal negotiations exclusively on the Vietnamese stalemate.

ernment owning business — utterly against it . . . I think the government has enough to do governing without getting into the business area."

Lt.-Gen. Howard Graham, president of the Toronto Stock Exchange, Canada's largest securities marketplace, said: "It is a matter of principle, I think it unfortunate that the government has found it necessary to get into this kind of business."

The Montreal and Canadian stock exchanges said the corporation "does not appear to have much merit."

In a joint statement the exchanges added that "we cannot see where government intervention in this field would be an inducement to accelerate either investor interest or Canada's growth."

The lack of a corporation tax cut brought reaction ranging from "disappointing" to "deplorable."

A. T. Lambert, president of the Toronto - Dominion Bank, said he was "disappointed corporate income taxes were not slashed. . . . I had hoped we would have been brought closer to the U.S. pattern."

SHOULD CLOSE GAP

Mr. Lambert's remarks came as the U.S. in 48 per cent of income and in Canada 53 per cent. "I should think the budget would go a long way to close the gap through the changes for."

A. O. Aalborg, Alberta provincial treasurer, said a corporation tax cut would have been better than the five-per-cent personal income tax cut.

He said combining the income tax cut with the $1,000,000,000 deficit for fiscal 1965-1966 is "questionable financing."

J. K. S. Manuel of Saint John, N.B., president of the Maritime provincial board of trade, said the budget fell short of giving the clear signal of confidence business the tax break it sought.

Main criticism of the personal income tax cut was directed at the fact it will benefit those in the higher income groups more than those in the lower.

RAISE EXEMPTIONS

H. J. Waiagiaas, research director of the United Steelworkers of America (CLC), said: "Mr. Gordon should have raised the ($1,000) income tax exemption level instead of those in the lower income groups would get the most, relatively speaking."

Donald MacDonald, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Labor Congress, said the budget was "thin and unimaginative." He said the income tax cut will give most benefit to those in the higher tax brackets.

Saskatchewan Premier Ross Thatcher said he was happy to see the reduction in personal income tax rates. He said this is because there was no change in corporation taxes.

Quebec Premier Jean Lesage said the budget was not necessarily "an election budget."

Robert Winters, chairman of British Newfoundland Corp., said in New York the budget provision for full depletion on the cost of investigating new oil development sites was a step in the right direction. He said broad interpretation bestows its full impact could be gauged.

Bronco has a 41 per cent interest in a projected 6,000,000-horsepower hydro development in Labrador.

David Mcclellan, general manager of the Graphic Arts Industries Association, said Monday night at Ottawa the industry welcomes budget proposals to aid Canadian magazines.

He said in an interview he agrees with action to ban the entry of "split run" publications into this country and also supports the government's decision to exempt the "Canadian editions" of Time magazine and Reader's Digest from the program.

He said the two magazines do all their printing in Montreal using Canadian paper and printing ink.

"As such they are an important part of our economy," Mr. Mcclellan said. "They provide tangible economic benefits."

As for the split run—foreign magazines with special advertising inserts aimed at the Canadian market—he said these had "a potential to cause a lot of damage."

"They add nothing to our economy," he said. "They are produced in this form solely to attract advertising from Canadian sources."

Cut Will Not Appear Large On Pay Cheque

OTTAWA (CP)—The cut in the basic federal income tax proposed by Finance Minister Gordon will be larger on paper than it will in the pay envelope.

As Mr. Gordon mentioned in his budget speech Monday to Commons, the main reason for the cut is to counter-act an expected drop in the level of state spending as a result of collections for the new contributory pension plan scheme.

When collections begin next January, the average wage earner probably find his take home pay down—though not as far down had there been the tax cut.

For the man earning $5,000 a year the 10-per-cent reduction would reduce to $308 from $388 the basic tax for a married person supporting two dependents over a full year.

This year the saving would be $13 since the reduction is not scheduled to take effect until July 1.

Starting next Jan. 1, a man earning $5,000 annually will contribute about $98 a year to the Canada Pensions Plan.

Too Blake loosened his verbal six-shooters in Chub Bolsters, charged from the Habs' corral and headed hell-bent in the general direction of the officials after that Sunday night puck rockus in Chicago.

Two of the Habs' training staff followed in hot pursuit and persuaded the fire-eating Toe that the varsuits sweat thataway and steered him into the safety of the Canadiens' dressing bunkhouse.

It seems Jim Roberts, one of the Habs' powerplay gunsels, had whispered a sweet nothing in the ear of the officials after being tabbed with a two-minute sentence and was promptly banished for a ten-minute vacation.

That happened after Blake had committed the unpardonable sin of removing the strip of animal-tamer Claude Provost from the tail of the Black Hawk tiger, one Bobby Hull.

Hull was quick to sense his opportunity. He took advantage of his sudden new-found freedom to blast a rocket from sixty-feet out that Charlie Hodge has yet to see.

Roberts' ten-minute miscondict took a lot of the effectiveness out of the most powerful penalty killing unit the National League has seen to date.

At the other end the sting-robbing Hawks' ensemble looked like a pea-shooter against a machine gun in comparison.

Three times two stanley Habs sat in the pokey — and three times the Habs' killers thrust back the wild Chicago drives and in fact staged not a few dangerous offensive sorties of their own.

Tonight the scene of battle changes. It is a brand new series and this evening's haste could very well swing the cup gold and glory either way.

If the Hawks can come through in hostile territory they will have a double-stranglehold on the mug money. They should be able to take the sixth hassle on home grounds before some 28,000 howling Windy City fanatics.

If the Canadiens can turn back the Chicago bid they should reign favorites to take it all. A loss in Chicago in the sixth will give them the seventh and deciding battle in their home forum.

Chicago hopes took a turn for the better with Bobby Hull breaking the Provost jinx, albeit he scored the first of his two goals while his .007 nemesis was off the ice.

His second goal was a picture masterpiece, breaking away and cutting across the goalmouth to score with a low blazing blast.

Provost had done an airtight job, clutching and twisting the "Tiger's Tail" up to Sunday. And you can bet your bottom dollar he will have a double grip on the appendage tonight.

Supporters of Hull say it had to come some time. Bobby is too good a hockey player to be "choked" consistently. Now that he has tasted scoring blood and found that the "Toe Tail" can be shaken, he could very well spearhead the Hawks to the big slice of the playoff's melon, a victory cigar, victory parade, a civic reception and whatever spoils go to the victors.

As Gordie Howe once said after being shadowed by the ghosts of opposing teams, "The main thing is not to let it get you down. If you keep plugging away the night will come when the shadows fade enough to let you rip one in and after that you may fill your hat."

So tonight's hockey story could be a tale of two tails, one the Tiger of the Hawks, the other the shadowing ghost of the Habs.

Torn Thigh Muscle ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ Hodge Gets Nod

'Gumper' Could Be Out For Series

By AL McNEIL

MONTREAL (CP)—"It's definitely a torn thigh muscle . . . I'll take treatment tonight and again tomorrow."

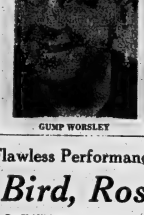
This statement came from ailing netminder Gump Worsley Monday as he limped—favoring his left leg—off the train that returned Montreal Canadiens from two defeats on Chicago Stadium ice.

The Gumper, who managed his first playoff shutout against the Black Hawks in the second game of the best-of-seven Stanley Cup final series in Montreal last Tuesday, refused to speculate on when he would return to action.

In addition to playing well in the semi-final series, which saw the Habs oust defending cup champion Toronto Maple Leafs in six games, Worsley was in the nets against Chicago when the Habs won the first two games 3-2 and 2-0. He lost the third 3-1 at Chicago.

Worsley was injured in the pre-game warmup for Sunday night's fourth game when he slid the rolls to save on a corner shot by centre Ralph Backstrom.

SERIES TIED



Charlie Hodge, the Habs' regular netminder over most of the regular season, replaced Gump and wound up on the short end of a 5-3 shellacking at the hands of the resurgent Hawks. The series now is tied 2-2.

Hodge will again face the Hawks in tonight's fifth game, with Ernie Wakely of the American League Quebec Aces getting the standby call. The Habs moved off to their Laurentian Mountains retreat shortly after their return home and plan to remain there until shortly before game time tonight.

General Manager Sam Pollock and coach Toe Blake ducked reporters by detraining in suburban Dorval, while the team continued on to downtown Central Station.

GLENN HALL

GUMP WORSLEY

Blake had to be restrained following Sunday's game by his players and trainers' staff after he took to the ice in search of referee Vern Buffey.

However, Clarence Campbell, National Hockey League president, said Monday he would not take disciplinary action against the Montreal coach for his postgame activities.

"A coach is entitled to go onto the ice if he wants to when a game is over," said Campbell, who returned to his office Monday following a stay in Toronto and Montreal hospitals.

HALL BRILLIANT

The Black Hawks have received brilliant goaltending from veteran Glenn Hall throughout the series.

The Chicago goalie was brilliant even in the two defeats he suffered on Montreal ice. Sunday night he kept Montreal at bay as he came up with key saves on Jean Beliveau, Yvan Cournoyer and John Ferguson.

Unlike Canadiens, who have hit a scoring famine since the first two games of the series, Chicago has managed to spring a surprise in the form of their so-called third line.

Bill (Red) Hay, rookie Fred Stanfield and veteran Eric Nesterenko gave them plenty of milcage and scoring punch Sunday. Stanfield netted the second playoff goal of his career, while Hay got his third since the regular season ended.

The teams return to Chicago for the sixth game Thursday and if a seventh game is required to decide the issue they return to Montreal for a Saturday night contest.

Flawless Performance

Bird, Ross Maintain Rally Lead

By CLAUDE HENAULT

PORT ARTHUR (CP)—Last year's winners of the cross-Canada 4,000-mile rally turned in a flawless performance Monday to maintain their lead in this year's running of the event.

John Bird and Klaus Ross, both of Toronto, again driving a Volvo, covered the 700-mile route between Sudbury and Port Arthur without picking up a single penalty point. In the first leg they had 10.

Drivers termed the route "very demanding", as far as Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

A short distance before the lunch break at Sault Ste. Marie, a car - gobbling bogbold delveloped.

Bill Woodward, member of the team driving a BMW from Anchorage, Alaska, said that when he got into the mud hole there were already four cars trapped in it and that the numbers increased.

Second place remained in the hands of Paul McLennan of Toronto and John Wilson of New Dundee, Ont., driving a factory Mustang. The Mustang came through Monday's leg with 70 penalty points, raising the car's total to 90 for the first two days of the six-day Montreal-Vancouver rally.

McLennan and Wilson lost their points for getting stuck in the same mud hole that plagued so many other competitors.

Third spot was taken over by Henry Taylor's Ford Cortina. Taylor, of London, who's competing in his first North American-style rally, came through with only a 10-point penalty, raising his total for the whole rally to 100.

At the start of the day's run, Taylor and his navigator, Robin Edwards of Fabreville, Que., had been tied for sixth place.

Another team that made a big jump in the point standings was that of Ewen Graham of Midnapore, Alta., and Henry Acteson of Calgary, driving a Volvo.

MOVE TO FOURTH

They moved from eighth position to fourth in the Monday section of the rally, the car got through with only 20 points increasing their total to 120.

There was a tie for fifth place between the Volkswagen 1500 of Fritz Hochreutel and Fred Andrecks of Toronto and the Mustang of Ephi Weltzes and Eric MacDuff of Oakville.

The Volkswagen had been in third place and the Mustang in fifth place. The scores of the teams were 140 Monday.

In teams competition, the Mustangs were still leading with 410 points for the three-car team. Second was a Volvo team with 450.

Results in team standings were not complete, but officials said the Chevelles were in third spot.

STRETCH IS EASY

Drivers said that the rally was hard right up to Sault Ste. Marie, but that the final fifteen along the north shore of Lake Superior to Port Arthur was easy.

Today the rallyists begin the longest and perhaps most exciting stretch of the rally, which started in Montreal Saturday and ends at 1,000 miles from Port Arthur to Regina with a stop at Winnipeg.

There will be three closed sections in the event.

Closed sections are segments of the rally closed to the public and on which rallyists are urged to go as far as possible. Locations of the closed sections are kept secret.

A rally is not a race, but an extended test of the precision and endurance of man and machine. Entrants are required to cover prescribed distances at legal speeds and to arrive at their desaination at a stated time. They are penalized for arriving too late or too early.

The rallyists were to leave here at 12:30 a.m. EDT today and arrive in Regina 21 hours later.

Results were not available on the women's competition, but Diana Carter of Toronto and Jean Stegall of Merchantville, N.J., were reported leading their only competitor.

Carter and Stegall, winners of last year's women's competition in a Volvo, are opposed by Anne Combes and June Taylor of Toronto in a Japanese Isuzu.

Cater, the young outfielder of Chicago White Sox obtained from Philadelphia last December, leads the American League with four.

A USEFUL SHOT TO KNOW

Golfers who are not blessed with a sand wedge, and those who frequently play to usually hard greens, will find great value in learning the "cut" shot.

This shot will move the club-head through the sand readily and not allow it to cut too deeply, even if you are swinging a 9-iron or pitching wedge. From the fairway, the cut shot pitches the ball high into the air with a great deal of back-spin so that it will settle quickly on hard greens.

In the illustration I show the things you must do on the cut shot. Note that I play the ball forward in my stance, about opposite the left heel. My stance is open, with my left foot pulled back further from the target line than my right. I make sure that my left hand remains firm on the downswing and does not allow the clubface to close in the hitting area. If anything, the clubface should be slightly opened — facing to the right of target — on this shot.

Phils Catch Up With Sandy Koufax

Astros Win Fifth

By MIKE RATHBY
Associated Press Sports Writer

Philadelphia Phillies finally have caught up with Sandy Koufax but the National League still hasn't caught up with Dave Giusti.

While the Phillies were edging Los Angeles Dodgers 4-3 Monday night and beating Koufax later for the first time since 1961, Giusti pitched Houston Astros to their fifth straight victory with a four-hit, 2-0 job against Pittsburgh Pirates.

It was the first complete game of Giusti's major league career and gave the 25-year-old right-hander a remarkable record of three victories in Houston's last five games. In four appearances this season, the former Syracuse University standout has an eye-opening 0.64 earned-run average.

Giusti was overpowering against the Pirates, striking out six and walking none. The triumph lifted the Astros one game above .500.

PLAYS KEY ROLE

Walt Bond also played a key role as he drove in two runs and set off Bob Friend in the seventh inning. Singles by Jim Wynn, Bond and Pat Desmond produced one run and Bond scored the other on Bob Bailey's error after knocking in the third for Rusty Staub's long fly.

The Dodgers and Phillies tangled in the only other game scheduled in the majors, with Koufax going for his 10th straight victory against Philadelphia.

But the Phillies, triggered by Johnny Callison's homer, jumped on the ace Dodger southpaw for three runs in the first inning and that was it.

There was no indication that Koufax had suffered any recurrence of the arthritic condition that has troubled him this season. He was lifted for a pinch hitter in the sixth inning after surrendering seven hits.

START DOUBLES

After Callison's homer with one out, Richie Allen singled and Dick Stuart drove him in with a double. Stuart scored when Al Ferrara misjudged Cookie Rojas' drive and it sailed over his head for a triple.

Rojas scored the final Philadelphia run in the ninth when he beat out a double and came home on Clay Dalrymple's single. That turned out to be the clincher.

The Dodgers scored single runs in the fourth and sixth, then made it 4-3 in the seventh on singles by Dick Tracewski, Wes Parker and Tommy Davis. Jack Baldschun, who came on in the seventh, preserved the victory for Chris Short, now 2-1.

Inter-city Badminton Championship

Peterborough Tops Field

The Peterborough team captured top honors as the badminton season wound up here Saturday, outpolishing the host Belleville Garrison Club and a combined Napanee - Picton squad for the Doug Grant Trophy.

This was the first annual Inter-City Championship tournament. A Kingston entry was unable to field a team and withdrew from the competition.

Team points were compiled for victories in men's singles, men's doubles, women's doubles and mixed doubles.

The winning Peterborough club totalled 28 points, followed by Belleville with 17 and Napanee-Picton with 14.

In men's singles, Peterborough won six matches, Belleville and Napanee-Picton three each. The champs won six events in men's doubles with Belleville taking two and Picton-Napanee four. Belleville women fared well, winning seven matches compared to four for Peterborough and one for Napanee-Picton. Peterborough held a big 12-6 margin over Picton-Napanee in mixed doubles with Belleville winning five.

At a wind-up party, held after the tournament by the Garrison Club, Doug Grant presented his trophy to the Peterborough club.

Peter Grant had swept all his single events, teamed with Al Ano to sweep their men's doubles and teamed with Pat Lean to win all their mixed events, picking up five points for Belleville.

Another big winner for Belleville was junior player Jackie Thompson. Filling in at the last minute with Kelly Bonnell, a partner she had never played with they won two women's doubles matches against senior competition.

Leading the Peterborough club was junior Hugh Montgomery, who after winning all his singles matches, teamed with Joop Unck to sweep their men's doubles matches and with his mother, Jean Montgomery, to take all their mixed matches. It was a five-point performance.

Most points gained by a Picton-Napanee player went to Rod Dulmage, of Picton, with three. He got one point in men's doubles while teamed with Andy Maxwell, of Picton, teamed with M. Harrington, also of Picton, to gain two in mixed play.

Says Ruling Violates Rights Code

NELSON, B.C. (CP) — Warroad Lakers, having survived elimination from the Allan Cup picture Monday night despite a shortage of two defencemen, are taking steps to plug the gap.

The Minnesota club, the only non-Canadian entry contending for the Canadian senior hockey title, got a stout effort from its undermanned defensive corps in defeating Nelson Maple Leafs 3-2 to end the Leafs' lead in the best-of-five western final to 2-1. The teams meet again here Wednesday night.

Playing coach Dayton Graffstrom said the Lakers have summoned George Myleuchuk from Warroad to replace Bill Janda, the National Hockey League veteran, who is out for the series with an injury.

Graffstrom also hopes for the return of Henry Ackervall, captain of the 1963 Canadian national team, who had to miss Monday night's game to return to his job in Port Arthur.

Ray Addurn, Roger Christian and Sam Graffstrom scored the Warroad goals. Mike Laughton and Harry Smith replied for Leafs.

BMSA Reports Record Season

Minor Sports Forging Ahead

Optimism was the keynote for the coming activities of the Belleville Minor Sports Association at the annual meeting of the organization.

Reports of various branch presidents revealed a record season for softball, baseball and hockey.

All sports, it was stated, operated within their budget limitations and enabled hundreds of city children to take part in the sport of their choice.

Close on the heels of a successful hockey season BMHA president Ed. Adamson said he is already laying plans for next winter's activities.

BMSA president Gord Hutchison outlined his aspirations for another fine season while BMBA president Ron Lupinetta reported baseball will be forging into a bigger and better season.

Floyd Bell was elected president of the association for the coming year with Gord Burnette named secretary and Richard Ellis, treasurer.

An innovation this year was the installation of the heads of the softball, baseball and hockey divisions as association vice-presidents. This, it is felt, will result in a hard-hitting executive.

The meeting spent some time streamlining the constitution with provision made for liaison between the various divisional executives.

Individual suspensions in one sport will automatically call for a review of the circumstances by the BMSA prior to participation in another sport.

Appreciation of the generosity of city merchants, service clubs and individuals in supporting the various teams. Tribute was also paid to coaches, assistant coaches and managers for the tremendous amount of work time and energy they contributed to the association and its branches.

An organizational meeting of the new executive and committees is slated for May 1 at seven o'clock at the home of Richard Ellis to formulate plans for the coming year.

"And Away We Go!"

City entries in the Belleville and District Softball League are looking for good weather as they open their practice sessions this week.

Eddie Juniors, under coach Harold Reid, have open workouts slated for the CNRA Park diamond tonight and Thursday, at six o'clock.

Trenton Motor Seniors, handled by coach John "Shaker" Baker, will practise at the Fairgrounds Wednesday night at 6.15, and Sunday afternoon at one o'clock. They, too, are open practices.

Both clubs have extended invitations to all players who think they can catch a berth to attend the workouts.

Lakers Win First From Nelson BC

CALGARY (CP) — Pat Mahoney, president of the Canadian Football League, said Monday night the CFL's player roster amendment limiting CFL teams to three naturalized Canadians appears to violate the Ontario Civil Rights Code.

Mahoney, speaking to the Calgary Booster Club's Sportsmen's Dinner, said the violation is indicated in a legal opinion received from Professor Bora Laskin of the University of Toronto.

He said the CFL will hold a special meeting in Calgary May 7 to take another look at the ruling.

Among its provisions, the code prohibits restriction of employment on the basis of nationality. Three CFL teams—Ottawa, Toronto and Hamilton—play in Ontario.

Mahoney also said CFL commissioner Jake Helier of Winnipeg will retire within a year. A replacement will be named before February.

To First Division

Northampton Promoted

LONDON (Reuters) — Northampton Town, the surprise team of 1964-65, has reached the English soccer First Division for the first time in its history.

Northampton's triumph is a lesson for all those experts who say that a successful team must have a number of high-priced and massive financial support.

With no stars and average home attendance of little more than 10,000, Northampton climbed from the Fourth Division to the first in five seasons.

The man behind Northampton is manager Dave Bowen, who has instilled a spirit of enthusiasm into his players that many other managers have envied.

The big surprise of the season was the relegation of Wolverhampton Wanderers, one of England's finest post - war teams. The club started the season badly, losing its experienced manager Stan Cullis, and nothing seemed to go right afterward. Wolverhampton lost 3-1 to Liverpool Monday.

Tottenham Hotspur, another great post - war side, also played in 1964-65 that it was glad its peak.

The London club's away record, out of the ordeals of the season, was as miserable as its home form was good. It won only one league match away from home and drew only four others—the worst away figures of any club in the first and second divisions.

This is the same team that won the English Cup and league "double" in 1960-61 and followed it up by winning the cup again the next season.

The most convenient thing to happen to beer since the bottle.

Take a second look and check the advantages of cans. When you're finished, you'll probably like the idea of beer in cans even before you try them.

To start with, cans are lighter so they're easier to carry. And they're smaller: take up less space in the trunk of your car; take up less space in your fridge.

Cans chill faster—a big advantage in the summer months ahead. They protect the flavour. And, obviously, cans can't break.

Cans need no deposit. Need no return. So no more storing up the empties.

And these new beer cans need no openers. Just lift the tab, zip open and pour.

People who like convenience are going to like beer in cans.

In short, cans are the most convenient thing to happen to beer since the bottle. Try them.

Canadian Football Prexy Speaks Out

US Competition Won't Affect Our Brand

By DAN POWERS

CALGARY (CP) — The new president of the Canadian Football League is convinced the inflationary battle to sign name players in the United States will eventually come to an end.

In the meantime, says Pat Mahoney, he doesn't think the quality of football in Canada will suffer from the effects of competition between the National Football League and newer American Football League.

The 36-year-old Calgary lawyer figures there will be two or three "rough years" for the CFL teams trying to recruit players in the U.S.

"But within these years the NFL will be driven to the realization that the AFL is here to stay. Then this absolutely ridiculous bidding for players will come to an end.

"During that two- or three-year period our own Canadian players will be getting better. There certainly won't be any deterioration in quality.

"Sure, we might miss signing some big-name U.S. players, but how many of the big names have stuck?"

As CFL president, the Calgary Stampeders' official must submerge his team loyalties for a year while he attempts to guide the league over several contentious hurdles. But this doesn't mean he has abandoned the views he has held as a Stampeders' official.

RECONSIDER RULE

One instance involves the rule that limits each club to three naturalized players permitted to play as Canadians. It was opposed by Calgary, Vancouver and Toronto, and several players have threatened to challenge the rule in the courts.

Mahoney asked CFL Commissioner G. Sydney Halter of Winnipeg to obtain a legal opinion on the roster rule and Prof. Bora Laskin of the University of Toronto was given the task.

Mahoney says he personally believes the ruling, intended to bring about more balance between rich and poor teams and to encourage greater development of Canadian players, was "too hastily disposed of" at an Ottawa meeting.

"I hope the clubs will not refrain from changing the ruling because of the impression that they might be bowing to pressure from the press."

An affable 200-pounder with greying, close - cropped hair, Mahoney was born in Winnipeg but moved to Calgary as a child and has been an avid Stampeders fan ever since.

A 1951 graduate in law of the University of Alberta, he articled in Lethbridge and returned to Calgary in 1952.

The following year he joined Mervyn (Red) Dutton in Standard Holdings Limited, which operates 40 firms including Consolidated Concrete Limited, Burns and Dutton Construction, Stampede Motors and Chinook Shopping Centre. Mahoney is the firm's general legal counsel and executive vice - president.

JOINED STAMPS

In 1956 Dutton and George McMahon asked him to take over secretarial duties of Stampeders during a club reorganization. Since then he has served in numerous executive capacities with the team, taking time from a hectic business schedule to devote at least half his working day to football.

Now, as CFL president, he figures to be even busier. One of his first jobs will be to receive a report from Gordon Lawson of Winnipeg and J. Barry O'Brien of Ottawa, appointed last October to study methods of bringing about greater integration of the Eastern and Western conferences.

A national management firm has been hired to help Lawson and O'Brien obtain financial data from each club and this information will form the basis of a preliminary report for the league's semi-annual meeting.

Mahoney says they'll likely recommend expansion of the interlocking schedule, greater sharing of revenues and increased efforts to exploit revenue sources"the national level.

However, he's opposed to a full interlocking schedule. "We should retain the WFC - EFC division because of the unique position of the Grey Cup."

Mahoney says the league needs a "full - time commissioner, whose logical office would be in Toronto, close to the television networks, promotional and advertising organizations and the financial heart of the country."

He adds that the EFC could use a fifth team. "There is talk about a London, Ont., entry. Quebec seems like a good idea, too."

Giants Agree With Japanese

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—San Francisco Giants told Japan's baseball commissioner Monday that if pitcher Masooori Murakami reports to the Giants for this season, he can choose where he will play in 1968.

Murakami became the first Japanese hitteen to play in the U.S. major leagues when he worked as a reliever for the Giants in the latter part of 1964.

Both the Giants and Nankai Hawks of Japan claimed his services this season. Murakami, 21, said last Wednesday he does not intend to come to the United States to pitch for the Giants unless he gets a written guarantee that he will be returned to Japan next year.

The Giants sent a telegram to Yushi Uchimura, baseball commissioner of Japan, under the signatures of president Horace Stoneham and vice-president Charles Feeney, saying that if he elects to return to Japan, he will be placed on the Giants voluntary retired list.

NHL Vetoes Airing Full Games

OTTAWA (CP) — National Hockey League clubs have refused to allow televising of full Saturday night games during the regular season, State Secretary Lamontagne told the Commons Monday.

Rights to televise the games are owned by an advertising agency, not the CBC, the minister added in written answer to a question by Jean-Eudes Dube (L — Restigouche - Madawaska).

The number of letters and petitions asking for complete game coverage during the regular season has dropped since the CBC started picking up the games at 8:30 p.m., cutting in usually near the end of the first period, instead of 9 p.m. and carrying taped highlights of the first period, the reply stated.

Nationals Based In Winnipeg

WINNIPEG (CP) — Officials of the Canadian national hockey team have agreed the national team should be based in Winnipeg again next season.

The recommendation will be presented to the annual meeting of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association May 24 in Victoria.

The CAHA will also be urged to assemble all national hockey team personnel under one roof to overcome difficulties the team faced.

Last year many of the players attended universities and colleges outside Manitoba and were not available for several exhibition games and practices.

HEADED FOR STARDOM—Catherine McKinnon is a pert 21-year-old Saint John, N.B., native who has become a hit among teen-age music fans in Canada. In three months an album by her sold 30,000 copies. She is a regular on two CBC network shows, Don Messer's Jubilee and its summer replacement, Sing Along Jubilee, both produced in Halifax.

Catherine McKinnon Sings Way to Top on CBC Shows

By ERROL WEAVER

HALIFAX (CP) — Sixteen years ago at Camp Shilo, Man., the five-year-old daughter of an army man treated her classmates to a rendition of All I Want for Christmas is My Two Front Teeth.

"The hilarious part about the song," says Catherine McKinnon, "was that I really did need those two front teeth and had to lisp my way through the song."

Today, at 21, Catherine is still singing—without the lisp—and her audience has grown more than a little.

She's a regular performer on the CBC Television show, Don Messer's Jubilee, and its summer replacement, Sing Along Jubilee. And more than 30,000 copies of her own record album have been sold in just three months.

Catherine dreams of some day appearing in a Broadway musical but with an income of $200 to $600 a week she isn't in a hurry to give up her fashionable apartment in south-end Halifax and try her luck in the big time.

"Halifax has afforded me a great opportunity," she says. "I now appear on national television almost all year. I suppose I could move on to Toronto or to the United States but there are so many wonderful things to do right here, why change it, at least for the present!"

TRAVELLED WIDELY

Born in Saint John, N.B., Catherine got started by appearing on local radio and TV talent shows in her home town as well as London, Ont., and Halifax. She attended nine schools as her father, an army dental technician now retired, was often transferred while the family was growing up.

Her break came in the spring of 1962 when, as a student at a private girls' school here, she auditioned for a chorus spot on Sing Along Jubilee.

"It was the most frightening night of my entire life. I didn't know the folk field . . . but it's unbelievable how much I wanted a place in the show. Fifth, paid $62.50. When the producer phoned the next day to say I was accepted I think I screamed in his ear, it was wonderful."

From that moment it has been straight up for the pretty, slender girl who likes clothes, sassy sunglasses, odd - shaped furniture and the Beatles and sings in a clear soprano voice.

Another talented member of the McKinnon family, 16-year-old Patricia, is also an up-and-coming singer. Although still in high school here, Patricia is a regular on another national CBC TV show, Music Hop.

The sisters often team up on radio and television guest appearances and Patricia shares the spotlight with Catherine on two numbers on the album.

The album went on sale in England in March and will be released in the United States shortly. In addition a single recording will be released soon.

The Tracks

FORT ERIE, Ont. (CP)—Greek Salt, top contender for the Queen's Plate at Woodbine later in the year, made his first start of the season in the prep each race at Fort Erie Monday —and it turned out to be his last race.

The three-year-old colt, rated second-best two-year-old in Canada last season, broke his right foreleg in heavy mud just before reaching the quarter-mile marker of the six-furlong Ardmore Purse.

The colt, owned by Conn Smythe of Toronto, had to be destroyed.

A winner of seven of his 12 starts, Greek Salt won $35,685 as a juvenile, including victories in the Clarendon Stakes, Carleton Stakes and the Yearling Sales Stakes.

Victorian Era, owned by Allan Case, won the race Monday.

The daily double of Last Shot and Maytown returned $61.30 while the quinella of The Pilot and Mooncone, in the fifth, paid $62.80.

Perfectionist in Violin Seeks Talented Students

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—"I am a teacher; I need students." With that simple comment, violin virtuoso Jascha Heifetz issued a call for young musicians to study under his guidance.

Heifetz is a perfectionist in all things. He devoted his entire life to the violin, and no one surpassed him in artistry. In his new work as a teacher he strives for perfection on a smaller scale, but perfections nonetheless.

He has been disturbed by the progress of his classes at the University of Southern California. He feels they have been successful, but limited. That was what he wanted to talk about one afternoon at his villa atop Beverly Hills.

"I want to let students know that I am looking for outstanding talent," he said. "I know there is talent out there, but I haven't been getting it in large enough numbers. I would like to appeal to the violin teachers and professors of the country to loosen up and send me their best pupils.

"They should not be so stingy. I believe in exchange. I send them students, and I wish they would send me students. I will audition them and send them back if they do not qualify."

STANDARDS CURIOUS

The Heifetz master class, a title he is a bit uneasy about, is a curious one by academic standards.

"We don't go by the book," he explained. "I give no medals, no diplomas, no grades. Students are not per cetedit for the course, but that is something terrible I do not like giving grades. I may flunk a student. I am a teacher; it is my duty. We meet once a week, but there is no set time for the length of the class. There are also seven to be class auditors plus auditors. Each student plays with the others' listening; that is how they learn. A student might play five minutes or two hours, according to how well prepared he is."

Heifetz said, some of his students have gone on to concert and orchestra work. One of his problems is that they want to move too fast.

"One semester and they want to start on concerts," he said shaking his head. "There is too much money around, too many prizes and scholarships. The students don't study enough for the greatest lack today is discipline. They must practice self-denial in order to achieve."

Manchester League Champions

LONDON (AP) — Manchester United won the English League soccer title Monday night by defeating Arsenal 3-1. Manchester returns to European championship football next year for the first time since the 1958 Munich air crash which killed eight of the team's players.

While Manchester was defeating Arsenal, Burnley and Leeds United tied 3-3 with Birmingham. This was Leeds' last game, while Manchester still has one game to play.

This left the top of the premier league table: Manchester United 61 points; Leeds United 61 points. But, Manchester is way out in front by virtue of a much better goal average.

Amateur Champion Defeated

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP)—The first round in the North and South Amateur golf tournament produced the defeat of defending champion Don Moray and a bumper crop of hotly contested matches.

Moray's one-up loss to Bill Buppert of Arlington, Va., was one of 13 matches that went the distance Monday.

Eric Hanson of Toronto survived the first round, defeating George Pottle of Spring Lake, N.J., two up. A second Canadian, Jim Currie of London, Ont., was beaten 4 and 3 by Don Allen of Rochester, N.Y.

Gleason Not Prepared To Say What's in Cup

NEW YORK (AP) — "What does Jackie Gleason drink from his cup? asks a reader. "Is it coffee?"

"This occasional obsession with me once decided that if there is coffee in Mr. G's cup, it may possibly be the worst coffee in the world if one judges by the great one's reaction to an occasional sip.

Attempts were made to get a more authoritative answer. Gleason, however, was incommunicado while cutting a new record album.

"Ah, yes," said the Gleason authority at CBS. "We get many requests for this information."

"We tell them that he says it is coffee."

That is, however, an unconfirmed rumor around Miami that the beverage in the cup is champagne. Also, too, may be discounted, because, unless it is very good champagne indeed, an connoisseur ever had such a violent reaction to a sip of a fine wine.

Earlier this season, NBC's Dr. Kildare drew boos when Dean Jagger, who played the school principal, retired because of poor health. Surgeon Meredith moved in to the headmaster's office.

The switch has not made much difference in the tone and pace of the series although Jagger is missed.

Next season, another series will have a new creator: ABC's Ben Casey. Sam Jaffe, the distinguished character actor who made a hair raising success of mannerisms became part of the many lampoons of the show, will retire Dr. Zorba, Ben's boss and chief of neurosurgery.

Franchot Tone, a suave actor with an entirely different style, will take his place.

Recommended tonight: Telephone Hour, NBC, 11-12 EDT—29th anniversary program with repeats of taped segments by Harry Belafonte, Joan Sutherland, Maurice Chevalier and Rudolf Nureyev, among others.

Voters Turn Down Liquor In Lounges, Dining Rooms

PICTON (Staff) — Picton voters turned down both cocktail lounges and the sale of liquor in dining rooms, Monday night in a plebiscite which saw approximately 70 percent of the voters out despite the poor weather.

The lounge vote received a total of 851 yes and 850 no votes, giving a 47.8 percent in favor of lounges—however, a 60 percent vote was required.

In dining rooms there were 894 yes votes and 902 no, giving 49.8 percent yes votes and also here a 60 percent vote was required.

Campaigning and advertising by both wets and drys had been concentrated on the last few days before election. This activity included many telephone calls, posters, direct mail and newspaper advertising. Polls closed at eight Monday night with the liquor lounge vote 53.3 percent no and 47.8 percent yes. On the dining room vote 48.8 percent yes and 51.2 percent no.

Collie Dog Said Cause Of Accident

PICTON (Staff) — An accident which injured three people occurred on Lake Street in Picton at 4.30 p.m. on Monday. Taken to Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital with injuries were Mrs. Gordon Powell, with three broken ribs and possible other injuries; Cindy, left arm and knee injured, five-year-old granddaughter of 49-year-old Leonard Robinson of 118 Mary Street, Picton; and Leonard Robinson who received facial lacerations.

The Robinson car was parked facing north on Lake St., Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Robinson and their granddaughter were in the car at the time preparing to drive away. The other vehicle driven by Gordon E. Powell of 63 Main Street, Picton, was proceeding north with Mrs. Powell the only passenger except for their large Collie dog. According to the Powells the dog leaped from the rear seat onto Mr. Powell's lap while he was driving and he lost control of the vehicle striking the Robinson car on the driver's side at the front door. The impact forced the Robinson car against a hydro pole, completely demolishing the front end of their car. The accident was investigated by Const. George Wright of the Picton Police Dept. Damage to the two cars is estimated at $800.

Kinsmen Will Sponsor Home, Sports Show

PICTON (Staff) — A large crowd is expected to attend the annual Home and Sports Show sponsored by the Kinsmen Club of Picton here this weekend. Highlight of the show will be a dog show. Many species will be shown and exhibitors will attend from over a wide area. The dog show will also include an obedience class which will demonstrate, periodically, throughout the show, the training which the dogs have received. Kinsmen club officials report there will be more eye catching exhibits for the home-maker and sportsman — boats, motors, camping equipment, wood carving, home furnishings and appliances. There will also be entertainment; and games.

It is an event for the whole family, a Kinsmen Club spokesman told the Ontario Intelligencer. The show opens Friday evening with a parade down Main Street in Picton from the Cenotaph to the fair grounds. The parade starts at 7.30 p.m. The show runs Friday evening, all day Saturday and Saturday night.

Two Charged With Car Theft Over Weekend

PICTON (Staff) — Town police have arrested two young men and charged them with theft of over $50 in connection with the theft of a car here early Saturday morning. The two men are Raymond Hart of Belleville and Gerald Williams of R.R. 1, Bloomfield.

The car, owned by Earl Knight of R.R. 5, Picton, was reported stolen from Main St. in Picton at 1.10 a.m. Saturday. Police arrested the two shortly after on Highway 33, about two miles west of Picton.

Police say Hart is also charged with being drunk in a public place and Williams has been charged with drinking liquor while a minor. The arrests were made by Constables C. Farrington and G. Wright of the Picton police department.

String Along With String Bags For Successful Moscow Shopping

The shopper's string bag is the clue to what you can buy in Moscow's fruit and vegetable markets. In this story, Joan Best, wife of Canadian Press correspondent John Best, tells what it's like to shop in the city's markets.

By JOAN BEST

MOSCOW (CP)—The secret of shopping for vegetables and fruit in Moscow is to learn to "follow the string bag."

Instead of scanning newspaper advertisements for bargains —you'll find neither produce ads nor bargains here — the shopper must keep a sharp eye pealed for purchases carried by others who've already been in the market.

In that way, before you arrive at the market place, you have a good idea of what is on sale that day and don't have to spend so much time looking around.

When we arrived in Moscow last June I set out to find the local open-air market. I had been told the general vicinity and, by following the route traced by people carrying potatoes in string bags, was able to locate the market.

During the summer months when many fresh fruits and vegetables were on sale I was often stopped on the street and asked where I'd bought tomatoes or other purchases in my string bag.

One of the first Russian words I learned was rynok (ree'nok), meaning market place.

Besides learning the marketing significance of string bags I also quickly learned all about queue-joining.

EVERYONE QUEUES

Russians have a great weakness for lineups. When a shopper sees one she gets into it and then finds out what she is queueing for. If it doesn't interest her she drops out of line.

But if it does—and Russian women out shopping often seem to be in the market for just about anything that's going—she counts herself ahead by getting in the queue position.

Moscow's central market is indoors but many of the stall spaces also are roofed. Most of the goods on sale are state produce but, particularly in the open-air markets, you find "entrepreneurs" selling goods from their private plots. These generally are higher in both price and quality.

This winter at the central market the variety of vegetables for sale included potatoes, carrots, onions, beets and cabbages. In January we discovered a few turnips and enjoyed the variety in our diet. Winter radishes were also available.

Sometimes you can find squash or cauliflower for sale but the prices put them in the luxury class. Cauliflower has been the equivalent of $4.20 a kilogram—2 1-5 pounds. Once we bought a winter squash for $3.36.

CUCUMBERS POPULAR

During the summer months the open market stalls are busy. Last June we started buying at our local market and it was fun to watch the new fruits and vegetables appear.

In June, cucumbers — very popular here—began to show. Radishes and small green onions were also for sale but tomatoes were in the luxury class until July. I was with a friend who bought three average-size tomatoes for $3.

July, August and September were good market months for fruit. Blueberries, raspberries, strawberries, plums, pears and excellent melons were on sale.

By September the seasonal fruits were largely gone but the stalls were full of apples.

At our market a large area is set aside for flower stalls. We arrived in Moscow at like time and enjoyed buying the variety of flowers as they blossomed into season.

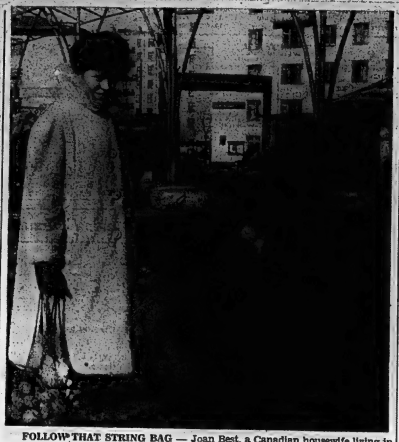
Flowers are extremely popular and most shoppers leave the market place with string bags full of fruit and vegetables in one hand and a bouquet of flowers in the other.

PRICES MISSING

Mushrooms are another popular item at the market. They are not only sold fresh, in season, but dried and sold on long strings during the winter. The man or woman selling them displays them by letting the mushroom-laden strings dangle over the shoulder. They cost $1.20 a string—for about 15 dried mushrooms.

Except for a few home-made signs there are no price tags on fruit and vegetable trays. The shopper just has to inquire.

Double scales with weights are used for weighing purchases. The good shopper takes care to see that only good produce gets on the scales.



On two occasions, women in the lineup behind me have obligingly plucked bad tomatoes out of the lot for me, scowled at by the salesman.

Once when I was buying apples the woman selling apples next door wasn't busy so she removed two rotten apples I had missed. I have no doubt the man selling me the apples had a few words with her afterwards.

Wrapping is casual or non-existent. If you don't bring your own carton or bag you will get your blueberries in a bit of newspaper folded into a cone.

They have barrels of whole dill pickles which are scooped on to the scales. If you don't supply a carton the wet pickles are dumped into your string bag with the other vegetables.

Sauerkraut and smetana—an excellent sour cream—are sold in bulk so you must supply your own jars.

FOLLOW THAT STRING BAG — Joan Best, a Canadian housewife living in Moscow, finds that the key to successful shopping is to keep a sharp eye for purchases other shoppers are carrying in their string shopping bags. Newspapers do not carry grocery ads. Joan, wife of Canadian Press correspondent Jack Best, poses in the market place with her string bag. (CP Photo)

TODAY'S BRIDE

A Toast to a Bright and Happy Future

For a Well-set Table

Bridal dinnerware, like silver, is usually bought by place settings, each of which is a basic service for one person. The traditional setting consists of five pieces: dinner plate, salad plate, butter plate and cup and saucer. Another basic piece, included in the setting, is a small bowl to use for such things as soup, cereal and fruit. Some dinnerware is either china, earthenware or plastic. China is made of clays and minerals and is a non-porous, translucent and resonant. You can see the shadow of your hand behind it when you hold china against the light and it will ring with a clear tone when tapped. Earthenware also is made of clays but it is opaque, porous and non-resonant. It often is more informal in design.

Slim, Easy Wedding Fashions in 1965

By MARIE PRICE

Slim and easy—that sums up the trend in bridal fashions for our 1965 bride. She'll probably be wearing a sheath silhouette as she takes that all-important walk down the aisle. Department store buyers across the country say that classic lines and simplicity are the key words to describe the designs now popular.

Designers indicate that the controlled fitted skirt and the A-line skirt have taken the place of those billowy clouds that once required the bride to struggle with hoopskirts or multitudes of stiff petticoats. And, while it's still possible to find them, the long cathedral train is giving way to the gentle, sweeping chapel length train.

There are more floor length, formal bridal gowns than ever before. In fact, it is quite hard to find the shorter bridal gowns that were very popular just a few years ago.

But these changes do not mean—that the new styles are plain. Trimming abounds—in laces, re-embroidered appliques, beads and seed pearls, among others.

With the high styles emphasizing the shape and cut of the new gowns, fabrics have never been more important.

You can find your dream of a gown among the beautiful silks — perhaps with the ribbed grain effect of peau de soie or the dull, waxy finish of peau d'ange. And silk organzas, faconne and taffetas also dominate the new styles.

The new understated, easy styles show changes from the necklines down to the skirts, but all the changes are intended to show you—the bride—at your up-to-date best.

An upcoming trend is the use of linen and linen-blend fabrics for both the bride's gown and those of her attendants.

The sleeve that extends about half-way between regular short sleeves and the elbow—named after the designer Dior — is very prevalent. Another accent frequently found is a narrow bow that extends almost across the back of the waist and fastens down with a snap. It conceals the seam joining skirt to its top. At the front of the gowns, the waist line most commonly rises to give the modified empire effect.

One expensive gown being shown is a white organza sheath over taffeta with a sweeping soft skirt. Its highlighted by a full length organza cape called a casque—that falls from the shoulders and ends as the gown's train. This so-called casque can be detached at the shoulders. And a fidget conscious bride can wear this gown later as a party dress.)

The one word that pops up most often in describing the necklines of bridal gowns is—sabrina. Scoop necklines seem to be most popular for attendants' dresses.

The so-called sabrina neckline has no collar—it is simply a slit that opens the top of the dress. And its charm lies in its simplicity. The bride who chooses the severest of these necklines should have a long and slender neck — a la Audrey Hepburn, for they are reminiscent of the type of clothes she often chooses.

However, the sabrina is also dressed up in other variations. One gown has a sabrina neckline in scalloped lace and the lace extends down to cover the bodice of the dress.

Taking a New Look at the Honeymoon

By MARIE PRICE

Honeymoons can leave newly married couples with glowing memories —or, all too often, nagging feelings of disappointment.

An associate professor of education in the Department of Home and Family Life at Teachers College of Columbia University, Dr. Paul Vahanian believes that if a wonderful experience were taken about the cold, hard facts of honeymoons, less anxiety would result. For example, a new look should be taken at the timing for honeymoons.

Instead of the convention al one or two-week trip to some unfamiliar location right after the crowded wedding schedule, Dr. Vahanian suggests that a couple might spread their wedding night in their new apartment or home.

There is a great deal of comfort to be derived from being in a familiar place, surrounded by your own possessions. If the couple wants to leave on a trip, postponing their departure until they are rested and relaxed will add to their pleasure.

Then, too, Dr. Vahanian who has a broad background in marriage counseling, says there is nothing to prevent couples from taking four or six weekends during the early weeks of marriage instead of the lone or and more costly tradition a l honeymoon.

Then, honeymoon period is a chance for the two people involved to become better acquainted with one another. But often, Dr. Vahanian says, strain develops when the rosy glow wears off and the two begin to see flaws in one another. Of course this has to be faced eventually, but not necessarily all at once.

"For some people," says Dr. Vahanian, "the one to two week period of sudden intensive constant exposure to one another may prove to be more strain than the couple can bear. Shorter periods of time when they're together obtusively might prove easier to manage."

Dr. Vahanian says the honeymoon — whether long or short— is important because it sets the pattern for the marriage. "The couple will be far more successful in the long run if they're honest and open with one another about their feelings," says Dr. Vahanian. And he warns about the dangers that lie in starting the pattern of deceiving one another.

"The honeymoon offers an opportunity to get off on the right foot — to find out that it's all right to relax and be yourselves," says Dr. Vahanian. In other words, the honeymoon is a time to overcome self-consciousness.

Here are a few other tips from Dr. Vahanian:

1) Pick a location where you will be at ease—not everyone is happy in a plush resort—or camping out in the Maine woods.

2) Don't go into debt to finance a costly trip — budgeting beforehand will enable you to enjoy the trip while you're on it and not have to face up to low funds once you get home.

3) Avoid getting yourselves to tired out by too much sightseeing or activity.

4) Don't forget that your partner may need some privacy occasionally — if he or she wants to do something alone it doesn't mean you've failed and are being rejected.

5) Above all, discuss your differences—and be patient as you learn to understand one another.

Some Bridal Tips

Double weddings may be held when the brides are sisters, cousins or good friends. The brides do not need to dress alike although the grooms, best men, fathers and ushers should.

Bridal showers are never given by the mother, sister grandmother of the bride or by the groom of honor. Nor are they given by a member of the groom's immediate family.

In the northeast section of the country, the most fashionable times for a wedding are late afternoon and early evening. In other areas, 8 and 9 p.m. are considered fashionable.

The bridal party never walks in a wedding ceiebration from home to church or from church to the reception, unless the bride is the daughter of the clergyman and lives in the manse adjacent to the church.

Bridal Receptions Need Careful Plan

Wedding receptions come in all sizes, shapes and price ranges. It's up to you to decide how many people you want to have, where you want to have the reception at home or at a hotel or restaurant and how much you want to spend.

A simple home reception can be just as lovely and enjoyable for the guests invited as one affair at a hotel, but it takes a lot of planning. The bride whose parents have a home with a large garden is especially lucky. During the summer months the reception can be held outdoors without having to worry whether everyone will fit in the house. There is, however, the problem of possible bad weather and the bride who's planning a garden reception would be wise to check with the catering service to see if they provide some kind of shelter, such as canopies or tents, just a sudden shower dampen the festivities.

Whether you're planning your reception at home or somewhere else, beats early. Leon Mosher, banquet manager of one New York City establishment, recommends the bride attempt to speak for her reception about eight months before the date. Miss Mosher says it is possible to plan a reception in much less time, but the date wanted isn't always available.

Find out exactly what is included in the price quoted to you by the catering service. Is it served as a sit-down dinner, a buffet or a cocktail-type party? Does it include beverages? Are gratuities part of the total? If there is to be dancing, does the price quoted include an orchestra? How about flowers, table decorations and the wedding cake?

It is also a good idea to check how much variety of choice you'll have about things like flowers, music and wedding cake. Miss Mosher recalls that her establishment used to advertise it would provide any type of wedding cake requested. The bride-to-be came in with her fiance and said she wanted an exact model of the Parthenon in Greece. Miss Mosher managed to provide the Parthenon, but since then, the advertisements have been changed to provide a more limited selection.

The food will probably be the biggest item in your reception budget. A buffet dinner may be more expensive than the sit-down dinner, as the greater variety of food is required and more food is wasted.

"BRIDAL HEADQUARTERS FOR NEARLY 40 YEARS"

Here are some popular cuts for solitaire, or single-stone, engagement rings. The diagrams show the arrangement of their top facets. (1) Emerald cut (2) Round cut (3) Oval cut (4) Pear (5) Marquise (6) Heart.

Look and Learn Before Buying a Ring

The word diamond seems to have become almost synonomous with engagement, whether you and your fiance shop for an engagement ring together or he buys it alone, there are certain things to keep in mind.

Educate yourself about diamonds. Look at as many stones as possible. Know the different cuts and train yourself to detect gradations in color. No two diamonds are alike — even if they are the same size. That's why prices vary.

Do business with a reliable jeweler. Ask him to show you diamonds under the loupe — a special magnifying glass which will show the interior body of the gem.

Remember the four C's—carat weight, color, clarity and cut. They act as a team to set the fifth C— cost.

Carat is the unit of measure in weighing diamonds. Each carat is divided into 100 points.

Color can vary greatly and will affect price. The whiter the gem, the greater its value. There are over 200 shades of white alone. Any slight tinge of brown or yellow lowers the price, but it may be so faint it cannot be seen by the untrained eye. A "blue-white" diamond is one which shows no body color except blue. There also are diamonds of clear color such as red, pink, green and even black, but these are rare and may be expensive.

Clarity refers to the absence or presence of carbon spots, bubbles or other imperfections which gemologists call inclusions. A flawless stone is one which shows no inclusions when examined by a specialist under a ten-power magnifying glass. A tiny flaw that cannot be seen with the naked eye won't affect the beauty of the diamond, but will lower the price.

Cut refers to the skill with which the 58 facets are ground onto the diamond for maximum brilliance. If the faceting is not precise, according to a mathematical pattern, light can be lost through the bottom or the sides of the stone. And a diamond requires light in order to reflect brilliance. Cut also refers to the shape of the diamond.

There are four basic shapes: and emerald-cut. A round diamond, often called a brilliant-cut, is popular as a solitaire or single-stone ring. The pear-shape, wide at one end and tapering to a point at the other, is worn with the point toward the fingertip. A marquise diamond looks like a boat, with a point at one end. And emerald cut has straight sides and comes in both square and oblong contours.

There are other fancy cuts, such as heart-shapes and ovals which are often set as centre stones in engagement rings. Baguettes are straight sided diamonds, used as side stones in rings.

PRESIDENT EXEMPT

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of the United States is not subject to subpoena or any other legal process, except impeachment by Congress, a justice department spokesman said Friday. Counsel for three Ku Klux Klan members accused in Alabama of the killing of Mrs. Viola Gregg Liuzzo, white civil rights worker from Detroit, said he wants to subpoena President Johnson in connection with Johnson's television announcement of the men's arrest.

Knit Dresses Belong in Trousseau

There's a whole, wide, rainbow-hued world of knits waiting for you, the bride-to-be. They're indispensable for your honeymoon car trip. They're mainstays of your life as a working girl. And they're so pretty, and some of the weaves are so sparkling that they're perfect for an evening out.

Thanks to beautiful teams work on the part of laboratory and mill, knits are resilient, wrinkle-proof, often washable, always beautiful.

When they first made their appearance into the fashion world, they cut no swath colorwise. Early knits were availabl. in beige and gray.

Now look at them! They're splashed with bright flowers. They glitter with gold as metallic threads are woven in with rayon and wool. An addition of a proper amount of mohair to wool makes a fuzzy, country-time knit. And when synthetic yarn is used, it means that pleats stay in place, and wrinkles refuse to appear even in the worst weather.

Likewise there's no heat-favored style among the knits. The three-pieces are strong favorites because they're so trimly tailored, and can be mixed matched with other separates. But the knit is also a popular A-line shift, a figure-hugging sheath, and is sleeveless for dressy occasions, has a straight, flaring or pleated skirt; in short can do anything in style.

Best of all, some knits are so light weight that they're wearable in all temperatures except the tropical. So whether you're a June or an October bride, you'll live in knits!

COMMISSION STATUE

VATICAN CITY (Reuter) — Cardinals created by the late Pope John have commissioned Italian sculptor Emilio Greco to design a monument to him in St. Peter's Basilica, Vatican sources said Thursday night. It will be a bas-relief portraying Pope John and two typical episodes from his religious visit to prisoners in Rome's Regina Coeli Jail, and a visit to the sick.

A dreamy bride deserves a dreamy homemade cake

Packing Up Your Bags

No matter what kind of honeymoon you're taking, a mound of luggage is unnecessary. One large, 28—inch suitcase plus a small piece of hand luggage is usually enough for two weeks. Pack such items as toilet articles and cosmetics in the hand case, leaving the large suitcase free for clothes. Consider climate when packing to avoid light clothes in warm weather or heavy wool outfits in the tropics. Select as many double-duty, easy-care items as possible preferably in simple styles. Choose colors so you can keep accessories—handbag, shoes and gloves—to an absolute minimum, by making one set do for several outfits.

HOUSING COSTS MUCH

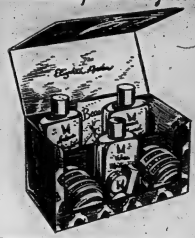
Habitat 67, the model housing project at the 1967 Montreal World's Fair, will cost $11,300,000 for 158 units on 12 levels.

OPPOSE U.S. SHIPS

JAKARTA (Reuters) — Five labor organizations at Teluk Betung in South Sumatra have written to their local governor asking the government to forbid U.S. ships from entering ports in the region, the Communist newspaper Peoples Daily reported today. The proposal was said to have been made in the context of stepping up Indonesian confrontation of Malaysia.

Kitchen Stoves: A Bridal Guide

You may be the type of bride who can't boil an egg. Or maybe you're already an expert in the kitchen. Either way, you'll be learning to rely on your big stove, and it's a good idea to familiarize yourself with the various types of ranges available.



There are five basic types of ranges, either gas or electric. The most common widths are 20", 30", 36" and 40". The height varies with the model. Many of the newer models feature built-in ovens which fit into the wall separately, and have a second unit for burners.

Prices of stoves also vary widely, depending on the number of extras you want. A small, four-unit range can be bought for as little as $100. If you are looking for something with all the extras, you can spend as much as $900. These extras include thermostatically controlled surface cooking, automatic oven timer, automatic cook and hold oven which lets you cook your food and then leave it to warm without danger of burning, meat tenderiser, rotisserie unit, built-in ventilator, self-cleaning oven, slide-out oven and speed broiling.

Pity the Bridesmaid: She Spends A Lot But Doesn't Get the Groom

By LOUISE LEVITT

Always a bridesmaid, never a bride.

That is the standard complaint of wedding attendants. But I don't even want to be a bride. I just don't want to be a bridesmaid any more either.

It isn't that I'm jealous of my friends who walk down the aisle in white. I certainly wish them all the happiness in the world, and am perfectly willing to join in the "ooho" and "aahs" of congratulation, send a wedding present and wear an envious expression when talking to the bride - to - be.

I don't even mind continually buying bridesmaid's dresses. Although I must admit I now own five dresses — practically identical — in blue, pink, aqua, green and yellow which look exactly like what they are and are useful for no other occasion. But my budget is holding out and there's always the attic when my closet gets too crowded.

I don't object to giving up the time needed to participate. And being a bridesmaid can train almost as much time as getting married. First, there's shopping for the dress. Then, any self-respecting bridesmaid is expected to join the bride-to-be (and her mother, and her favorite aunt and other friends) while she shops for her own outfit and trousseau.

There's that intangible, often known as moral support. Suddenly, the girl who always seemed to be so independent can't make a decision for herself. She has to consult everyone within telephoning distance. And naturally, that includes the bridesmaid. There are museum showers, parties and luncheons. And after a while, I begin to feel as though my mouth will be permanently frozen into a smile. And of course there is the wedding rehearsal, the scrumptious feast and the reception. But all this isn't too bad.

My major objections to being a bridesmaid fall into two categories — relatives and ushers.

Relatives are usually darlings. And it's certainly understandable that they'll want to praise Mary, their favorite niece (or cousin, or granddaughter) — even if they haven't seen her since she was two years old. But the groom or bride, for all some to bring up the same old boring.

When are you going to get married, Miss Harry? Frequently, the relatives look on the wedding as a personal accomplishment. As soon as it's over, they're looking for another candidate.

Which brings me to my second complaint — ushers. The bridesmaid inevitably hopes (even if subconsciously) that her friends will get married too. And what better place for a girl to meet her future husband than a wedding?

So weeks before the ceremony the bride begins planning which bridesmaid she'll fix up with which usher. I'm sure some of the ushers are very nice. (And I have a smashing suspicion many of them take a dim view of the whole idea.)

TIME TO GIVE UP?

But I never got the nice ones. For days I can feel about Chuck, the who just happened to be the bride's roommate in college, (or is a distant cousin or childhood friend). He invariably lives 1,500 miles away and I've never met him. Charlie is described as every girl's dream. I'll just love him, I'm told.

Unfortunately, I don't love Charlie. He always turns out to be balding, exactly the things I despise. We stumble pre-ceremony parties and at the reception. And, as if this were not enough, the minute the bride gets back from her honeymoon, she calls to ask how did I like Charlie and when am I seeing him again and why doesn't she invite the two of us over for dinner so we could get better acquainted.

There are times when I think it might be easier to get married. It probably would be less trouble than being a bridesmaid.

OLD BONES FOUND

SASKATOON (CP) — An undisturbed layer of grey soil in eastern Saskatchewan is proving a gold mine for archaeologists. Over five months, more than 30,000 bone fragments were unearthed near the Saskatchewan River's mouth into Lake Winnipeg. Near Lake Winnipegosis, 10,000-year-old spear points were found, and burial mounds 5,000 years old near the Red River.

An Extra Companion For Honeymoon Trip

Two may be company on a honeymoon trip but there is a third companion that can stretch the trip through the years—a camera.

Here are some tips on how to get the most out of your camera so that your honeymoon pictures will be a joy to you.

Shoot a test roll of film or two at home. This is important if you have a new camera. It will give you a chance to familiarize yourself with it, or if the camera is an old one, to see if it is in working order.

Buy plenty of film before-hand. Keep your camera protected against dust, sun and scratches. Include in your camera-case a notebook so you can jot down facts to link with other pictures and places.

If you're trying to shoot something like the Grand Canyon or New York skyline, remember that your eye sees more than the camera lens. So concentrate on one portion of the scene and compose your picture carefully.

If you're trying to take pictures from a moving vehicle, keep your camera close to the door to reduce reflection but don't actually touch the window. Vibration will cause camera movement and result in blurred pictures. For the same reason, don't use a window frame or the back of a seat as an arm rest. Cradle the camera in your hands and steady it by bracing your elbows against your body.

When moving, shoot as the scene is directly approaching or receding from your lens—rather than when you're crossing its path. This will minimize the effect of the motion.

For small scenes, such as picturesque houses or striking historical monuments, try to obtain a definite centre of interest. You'll find a path or road can lead the eye to your focal point. Or use a foreground object like an overhanging tree branch to frame the view. In such cases, it is usually better to take an overall view of the entire scene or come in for a close - up of some particular point—like the inscription on a monument or the dutch door of a country house.

If you're traveling by car, don't store your camera and film in the closed glove compartment, or on the shelf under the back window, or in the trunk. All these spots get too warm. And when you park, try to find a shady area to protect the film in the car.

Should your trip be a long one —more than two weeks— it is wise to send your exposed film off to be processed while you're still on the go. This is particularly true with color film—which doesn't thrive under poor storage conditions.

Remember too that if you take pictures in logical sequence, you will wind up with organized easy-to-follow results. And then you can recreate that first important trip together over and over.

Wife Discovers Opposites May Be Compatible

BY A 25-YEAR VETERAN

Your choice of a marriage partner may harmonize completely with all the recommendations made by veteran marriage counselors.

You both come from the same socio economic background, have had similar schooling, like long-haired music, have stable parents, want a family of four and play a good game of tennis.

But as one who has come through her silver anniversary, I've found an astounding amount of unexpected dissimilarity has come to the surface since the day I said "I do."

Words have a way of meaning totally different things even to two BSs. Consider "soon," for example. I, being the hurrying type, think "soon" means "tomorrow," or at the very latest, "next week."

"We must plan on a cruise soon," says my husband.

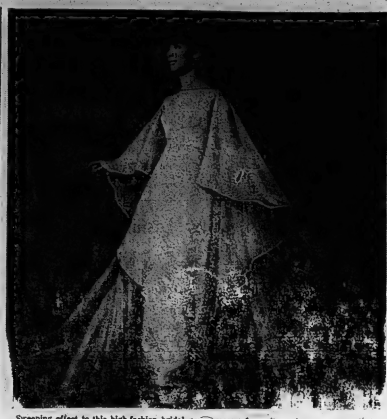
Next day I have brought home a sheaf of cruise pamphlets, have checked my wardrobe to see if anything is cruisable and am looking for last summer's suntan lotion, when I discover my husband is talking about a junket five years from now.

"Soon," now know, is synonymous with "some day."

Consider the connotations of money. My husband is precision itself — to a point. He is never without subway tokens, sufficient funds, a clean shirt and well-shined shoes. But when he makes an appearance, he is always late.

My digestive tract is in anguish as we charge around the town square, cutting off trailer trucks and buses, to catch a train already in the station.

If a party is set for 7 p.m., he starts dressing at 7. The children wail and wait at the bus stop till he decides the time is ripe to pick them up.



Two choices are open to me: advance all the clocks half an hour, which throws the dog off his feed as well as the rest of us, family, or give my husband a fictitious hour well in advance of the real one at which he must be ready.

As a last resort, I tried the latter. Pulling himself together, he rushed at lightning speed to meet the deadline. (We were 15 minutes early for the party.)

There are more deep-seated differences. My husband is blithely unconcerned over holiday celebrations, anniversaries and birthdays. One August, he handed me a present, saying, "This is your Christmas." There is no good hour at which to serve any hour conflicts with some mighty game on TV. Christmas he endures with stoicism. There would be no tree if I didn't purchase it myself.

He will state no wishes for Christmas, but one week before, goes out and buys up the men's department of the local store. He arranges these gifts to himself in tasteful piles, and as he ...n them, says, "Here, dear, this is what you are giving me for Christmas."

Need I say more? Just a bit more. I'm a day person, and he's a night person. As the sun peeps over the hill, I'm singing in the kitchen as the coffee brews. Upstairs, he's groaning, moaning, complaining, unable to face the thought of another day. At 10 p.m. when I'm nearly asleep on the sofa, he wants give me every detail about the new process at the plant, as bright-eyed as I was at sunrise. Do these differences really matter? I guess not much. Because we're started along fairly peacefully on the second 25 years.

Sweeping effect to this high-fashion bridal gown comes from its unique casque, which is attached at the shoulders and falls into a sweep train. The casque covers a sleeveless silk organza over taffeta gown with a true sabrina neckline. The casque can be detached to later provide the bride with a dinner dress. The gown itself is appliqued with Imported Swiss motifs. Its easy silhouette is carried through with a slim floor length skirt.

Low Rentals May Require Investigation

It's an awesome jump into reality to move from the comfortable security and relative ease of the parental home to the kind of quarters a young married couple can afford to maintain.

The hopeful apartment-seekers armed with the newspaper's classified column, are likely to become disillusioned early in their search when they're confronted with the high price tag even a simple apartment carries.

But it is possible for them to have a roof over their heads if they bear these general housing facts in mind, and discuss them before starting out on foot.

The more inconvenient the location, and the farther from your place of employment, the cheaper the rent will be. So you both must decide how much time you're willing to spend going to and from work, as well as the expense involved in traveling.

The less desirable the neighborhood, the lower the rent. How important is the neighborhood to you, as long as it is a safe area? In many cities, apartments are available over stores, laundries and restaurants at reduced prices.

In smaller cities, apartments may be available in remodeled homes. Here again you will get more space for less money.

The higher up in a walk-up ding you climb, the less the rent. It pays to be energetic and if you soon becomes accustomed to the uphill hike.

Buildings in certain quarters of a city may look dejected, but take another look before you move on. Are any efforts being made to upgrade the area? Is one brownstone being remodeled? Often this is a sign that the area is being improved, and you may be able to find inexpensive quarters while it's on its way up.

On the other hand, are some of those dejected buildings being torn down? Try to find out whether all the area has been condemned for a civic improvement. You could find yourself moved in at a reasonable rent and a month or two later being ordered with the whole household of apartment hunting and moving facing you again.

Doing without services saves money. A doorman means a high rent. Air-conditioning usually raises the rent.

A Guide to Spending

To assist a young couple in figuring out the limits in which their family spending pattern should be, The American Bankers Association has compiled the following estimates on national spending patterns. Of course these figures vary with the size of the family and the amount of annual income, but the general percentages are as follows:

EXPENSES	Per Cent of Family Income
Housing	15-30
Household Operating Costs	3-15
Food	15-40
Clothing (including upkeep)	8-15
Savings (including insurance)	8-15
Personal Allowances (lunches, personal grooming)	2-6
Medical Costs (doctor, dentist, drugs)	2-10
Recreation and Vacation	2-10
Education, Books, Magazines	2-6
Transportation	8-15
Miscellaneous (gifts, contributions, etc.)	4-10

Groom Shares Some of Costs

Young George Groom may think that his financial responsibilities don't start until after he says "I do", and tradition does call for the bride and her parents to bear most of the cost of a wedding. But there are several items which young George is expected to arrange and pay for.

Of course, he has already bought his bride's engagement ring and probably purchased a gift for his bride, and the marriage licence fee.

However, he usually pays for the bride's bouquet and her going-away corsage, flowers for their mothers, and boutonnieres for men in the wedding party. If it's a formal wedding he generally presents the required gloves, ascots or ties to the best man and ushers and gifts which serve to thank them for their support on this big day. If the wedding takes place away from their hometown, the bridegroom should arrange accommodations for his best man and ushers.

The bridegroom also takes care of the fee of the clergyman This can run to $100 if the wedding is large, but generally the range is $10 to $25.

And, the bridegroom can give the bachelor dinner for his friends. He foots the bill for that too.

It is up to the groom's parents to pay for the clothes they'll wear at the wedding, plus any travelling expenses and accommodation bills. If they wish, the groom's parents can offer to give the dinner preceding or following the wedding rehersal—even though this is usually a responsibility of the bride's parents.

Once the wedding is over, the groom assumes his new responsibilities by paying for the wedding trip.

Allow Three Months For Wedding Plans

While it's true that many weddings take place with a minimum of advance planning, because of the groom's sudden departure to the armed forces or an unexpected business relocation, a large formal wedding requires at least three months' work.

There are hordes of details to be arranged, decisions to be made, shopping to be done, and housing to be found; all of which takes bushels of time.

Bridal consultants suggest this sort of timetable, adjusted, of course, to your own individual situation:

THREE MONTHS BEFORE THE WEDDING

Decide on the type, size, location, and time of day of the wedding.

Invite the members of your wedding party, with due regard to their commitments to studies or job.

Call on your clergyman with your fiance to set the wedding date. This also gives the clergyman an opportunity to counsel with you. After this visit, the church secretary will reserve the church, organist and section for the occasion.

Draw up your guest list, and decide which guests will be invited also to the reception, if your plan to limit this group. This is not a solo venture, since you will have your fiance's list as well, distant relatives to consider, and painful moments as you shift individual names to second priority.

Decide where the reception will be held, and what the menu and other arrangements will be. Since the bride's family pays for the reception, it is imperative that the family's financial circumstances govern the elaborateness of the reception.

Choose your wedding dress. This decision is made easier if you consult bridal house advertisements in advance to get some ideas of style and price.

Order your invitations and personal stationery, bearing your future name. Informals are invaluable, carrying either your married name or monogram.

Begin to choose patterns for china, silver and glass, and register them in the gift registry of your store. This is a less commercial move than it appears, for gift givers want to present you with something compatible with your tastes, and prefer you give some indication.

As soon as you have chosen your new home, make up a floor plan to carry with you when you go furniture and rug shopping. Be sure to include height of ceiling as well as other dimensions. Many large city department stores have free interior decorating services which, can advise you. Don't hesitate to take advantage of them, for they are usually practical, rather than fanciful.

Begin your trousseau shopping.

Suggest both mothers shop for their gowns, which should not only be harmonious to each other, but should blend with your color scheme for the bridal party.

TWO MONTHS BEFORE THE WEDDING

Finish addressing invitations or announcements.

Select gifts for your attendants.

Continue the other activities begun a month ago which are so time-consuming.

Go with your groom to get the marriage licence.

ONE MONTH BEFORE THE WEDDING

Have the final fitting on your gown.

Arrange to have your wedding portrait taken when the gown is ready.

Mail your invitations, and prepare a check list as reception acceptances arrive. Give the caterer a general idea of the number of guests expected.

Check on the bridesmaids' dresses and accessories.

Plan your church music and floral decoration.

Arrange accommodations for out-of-town members of the wedding party.

Arrange for moving your belongings and gifts to your new home.

Make arrangements for a luncheon for your bridesmaids and a rehearsal dinner. The entire wedding party plus both sets of parents will be included in the latter.

TWO WEEKS BEFORE THE WEDDING

Write thank-you notes.

Arrange a seating plan for reception guests. If you plan to have a bride's table, write out place cards. The parents may sit at the bride's table with the wedding party, or may have a separate table.

Send wedding announcement and glossy photograph to the newspapers.

ONE WEEK BEFORE THE WEDDING

Give caterer the final figure on reception guests.

Ask a friend to be on hand for last - minute telephone calls and wires, and expedite the reception.

Rehearse your wedding ceremony, so all will go smoothly.

YOUR WEDDING DAY

This is a day in which to forget all about the detailed arrangements you've been working on for months. Let someone else worry about last-minute changes, and be your happiest and most glowing.

LIST TOP HYMNS

BOGNOR REGIS, England (CP) — Parishioners at St. Peter's church in this Sussex seaside resort have drawn up a "top 10" list of hymns. No. 1 choice is The Lord is My Shepherd, and Fight the Good Fight is No. 2. Chaplain R. E. Willcourse calls this "very conservative."

Wedding Flowers Can Set the Scene

The bride's bouquet can have many variations—the traditional round one, or a flowing cascade, or flowers attached to a prayer book, or a small nosegay — or even a large spray carried in the arms. The latter can prove difficult to manage, however, when it comes time to exchange rings.

The flowers the bride selects for the wedding—whether informal, sophisticated or classic — are an important part of the picture created. Throughout planning is more important than the amount of money spent.

A florist can tell you what flowers will be in season when your wedding takes place and he'll know which flowers create effects to complement your gown and stay fresh longer. It might be a good idea to show him a sketch of your wedding gown.

Also, it's important to tell the florist the heights of our attendants so their bouquets can be sized appropriately.

Find out in advance also the favorite flowers and colors of your mother and the groom's mother, and whether they prefer a corsage or pinning flowers to their purses.

Churches often have regulations governing flowers and decorating—and learning these is one less chore you'll have to give the florist time to do it.

Tell your florist how many guests you expect at the ceremony, for this will determine the extent of the decor necessary. It's just as important that guests at the back of the church be able to see the scene as those up by the altar.

And concerning the reception, greenery and flowers can create a pretty and fitting feature work for greeting guests.

One of the most important focal points at your reception is the bridal table — whether you have a buffet table or a sit-down dinner. If it's a sit-down affair floral arrangements are not so high that your guests can't see and another across them.

Remember in selecting the flowers, that they should reflect you, your personality and the atmosphere you want everyone to remember.

In Other Fashion News

One trend which may be showing signs of growing among bridal designs is the so-called mod look. It began in Great Britain — in the wake of excitement over the Beatles — and may become popular in this country.

Sketches show the mod look as a flat-chested silhouette, with square-cut necklines, longer than elbow length sleeves, high waists and A-line skirts. The bottoms of the sleeves and the hems of the skirts have deep overlays of lace.

Headpieces to go along with the mod dresses usually are lace bonnets or caps, or short party veils.

One designer has said he'll have the mod look for brides in silk organza and peau de soie for spring.

REMEMBER TO SAY THANKS

No matter how busy you may be, it's not good taste to put off thanking friends for wedding gifts. Try to make each thank-you note as personal as possible, mentioning the gift, and, if possible, how you plan to use it. Always mention your fiance in your thanks. The gift was sent to both of you. If you receive duplicate gifts, just chalk it up to experience — it's something that happens to most brides.

In 17th century England, it was customary to awaken the bride and bridegroom with music and singing on the morning after the wedding.

Step by Step Plan For Wedding Date

You've just gotten your engagement ring and you're floating on air. Practicality is the furthest thing from your mind. But the bride-to-be must come down to earth well in advance of the wedding if she expects to walk graciously down the aisle on the big day.

Even if you've always done things at the last minute, you should start planning for the wedding at least three months in advance. Set a specific timetable — and follow it.

THREE MONTHS BEFORE THE WEDDING

Decide whether the wedding will be formal, semiformal or informal. This will depend partly on the time of day and the date, so pick those too.

Call on the clergyman to set the date. Some clergymen want to talk with the couple before the wedding about marriage, future plans and aims in life. Then visit the church secretary who will reserve the church, organist and sexton for the occasion.

Draw up the guest list, including those people you want for attendants. Decide which will be invited to both the ceremony and the reception and which will be invited to the ceremony only. You have to consider not only your own friends and relatives, but also those of your fiance.

Pick a place for the reception. If it is to be held at home, you may have to do much of the planning yourself. If it is to be held at a hotel, restaurant or banquet hall, the manager will usually take care of most of the planning. The bride's family pays for the reception, so it is usually a good idea to go over family finances before making any final decision.

Order your wedding dress and those for the attendants. It's a good idea to check stores, tisements first as a guide to price and style.

Order your invitations, announcements and personal stationary which will bear your married name.

Decide on what type of decoration and furnishings you'd like for your future home. Register your preferences for china, silver and glassware patterns at the gift registry of your favorite department store. This makes it easier for friends to know they're getting just what you want.

Begin shopping for your trousseau.

TWO MONTHS BEFORE THE WEDDING

Make a final check of the guest list. Finish addressing invitations and announcements, and have them stamped and ready to mail.

Select gifts for your attendants.

Go with your fiance to check on marriage licence, blood tests and medical requirements.

ONE MONTH BEFORE THE WEDDING

Have the final fitting on your gown.

Mail the invitations. Keep a check list as acceptances for the reception arrive and give the caterer an idea of how many guests will attend.

Check on the outfits for the attendants.

Arrange for the wedding portrait.

Plan accomodations for out-of-town members of the wedding party.

Arrange for moving. Whether you're moving to another city or just to another street, you'll have to arrange to have household trousseau, gifts and personal belongings transferred. Usually this is not done until after the wedding, but it is a good idea to consult with the movers ahead of time.

Plan church music and floral decoration.

Arrange for a luncheon for the attendants and for a rehearsal dinner. Invite the entire wedding party plus both sets of parents to the dinner.

TWO WEEKS BEFORE THE WEDDING

Write thank-you notes.

Make a final check of clothes for yourself and all attendants.

Arrange a seating plan for reception guests.

Send wedding announcement and glossy photograph to the newspaper.

ONE WEEK BEFORE THE WEDDING.

Give the caterer the final figure on the reception guests.

Ask a friend to be on hand the day of the wedding to help with last-minute telephone calls and arrangements.

Rehearse your wedding ceremony.

YOUR WEDDING DAY

Relax.

Coordination and Quality in Towels

Here's a quick lesson about towels. Sizes are fairly standard —bath, hand and fingertip. You'll also want matching washcloths. Large size towels are popular with men, but you'll find they're a little more expensive.

Quality towels are made from terry cloth. The key to a towel's strength is in its underweave. Hold the towel up to the light to see if the underweave is even and closely woven. This is what holds the loops in place and withstands strain. Inspect the loops, which are important because they absorb water. The longer and closer together the loops are the more absorbent the towel is. The loops should completely conceal the underweave. Now check the edges, called selvages, to be sure they are strongly covered. Be sure hems are firmly stitched and secured at the corners to prevent unraveling.

No matter what your favorite color is—or preferred pattern—there is such variety among towels manufactured today that you're sure to find something pleasing. Just remember—coordination when you're shopping. Try to envision how towels will look with your choice of bedmat, etc., to be sure you don't wind up with clashing colors or varied patterns fighting the eye.

WRONG REMOVAL

Sparkling diamond has its glory enhanced by having a minimum amount of metal surrounding it. These unadorned engagement rings rank high in popularity with engaged couples, though jewelry designers are coming up with some dramatic innovations in one-of-a-kind rings.

Modern Rings Borrow from the Ancient

With this ring I thee wed . . .

has hundreds of thousands of memories across the country: cathedrals, chapels and mosques, there comes the moment when the wedding ring, dipped on the bride's third finger by the groom, symbolizes both the ritualistic and the practical meaning of marriage.

The wedding ring has had a long and honored history, since days when the ancient Hebrews fashioned wedding rings of gold, filigreed and richly engraved. Representations of important moments in Jewish history were painstakingly carved into the rings:

At the time of the Roman Empire, wedding rings were first made of iron, gold being reserved for official ceremonial occasions. Later the rings were worn, and because gold is easily scribed, they were often beautifully decorated with the groom's seal, or with some inscription to the bride, or possibly to one of the gods.

Sanctioned by both church and civil ceremonies, the wedding ring became a part of the marriage ritual which is almost unchanged from man times to the 11th century.

With the advent of Christianity ded to ritualize the wedding 's use and materials. Only was thought valuable ugh, and the third finger he left hand was designated the proper place.

Wedding bands varied in e through the centuries. n Prince Albert married oria, he put on hers hand olden ring fashioned as a snake, composed of 14 hinged joints, 12 of them set with diamonds.

But later in the Victorian era, there was a reaction against the highly ornate, and a general return to the plain gold band.

For the first 50 years of this century, wedding rings remained stereotyped. But in recent years, there has been an upsurge in the jewelry craft to design rings that reflect the tastes and attitudes of today's young people.

Though change comes slowly, wedding bands are becoming wider and often are studded with stones other than diamonds. Some wedding rings depart from the usual single band to have a delicate design standing uppermost on the ring. One such has an openwork diamond shape of platinum; another a florentine finish centre, with a white gold butterfly paved with tiny diamonds.

One of the newest is a combination of engagement and wedding rings. The wedding ring surrounds the engagement ring, and the center ring can be slipped out, to be worn on the other hand if desired.

Wedding bands grow wider, become jeweled entities in their own right, yet are budget-priced. Unusually delicate designs in lace are set with tiny diamonds.

Size of Budget Determines Formality

Before you contract for a silk-down wedding reception for 00, you'd do well to take a ong, hard look at the total n av a for wedding expenses and plan accordingly.

Experts who have given some th ught to this matter say that brides don't realize that "hid- de costs" involved in a wed- ding add-up to approximately 50 percent of the total sum, and that the wedding gown doesn't take as big a chunk out of the budget as does the reception.

They may fail to realize too, the size of the budget relates directly to the formality — or informality — of the function.

It is economically impossible for a bride-to-be to plan a formal wedding and country club affair on a $500 total budget.

Since the degree of formality also the ultimate criterion as to hour of the wedding, all plans hinge on the size of the wedding budget.

It isn't the amount of money that makes a wedding truly beautiful, but the way the money is spent, with good taste and dignity.

A wedding costing $300 might be informal or semiformal with 4 or two attendants. The recep- tion could be planned for 50, held at home or in church facilities.

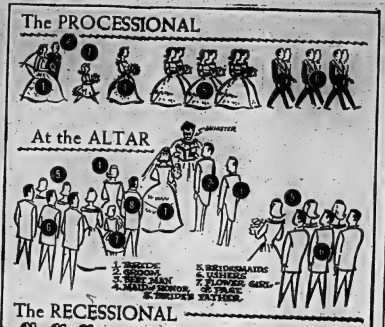
With $1,000 to spend, the list of guests can double to 100, and th attendants increased to four, though the wedding itself would remain semi-formal.

A buffet reception for 150 at a club or hotel is possible with a $1,500 budget at hand, with the function again semiformal.

Six to eight attendants are p ssible at a wedding costing $4,- 00, and from 100 to 300 guests be entertained at a club or hotel. The wedding meal would be either buffet or a sit-down affair, depending on the num- ber of guests.

Wedding Invitations Keep Classic Dignity

While handwritten notes in- viting guests to your wedding are perfectly acceptable if the ceremony is to be small and in- formal, the traditional formal invitation is still used by most brides-to-be.



This can be engraved or printed in engraving style on a white, ivory or cream-colored double sheet of quality pap- er, which is folded and insert- ed in the envelope. Accom- panying it is a small, separate reception card.

The folded invitation and reception card are placed in an envelope which is left unsealed and is addressed simply "Mr. and Mrs. Robinson." This en- velope is then slipped into a larger one which is address- ed for mailing.

Names of children are invit- ed to the wedding, add their names on separate lines on the lands envelope, below their parents' names. Older chil- dren should have separate in- vitations. The casual addition of "and family" is strictly out of place.

The wording of the invitation is a formal one which has re- tained its classic dignity through the years and chang- ing times. "The honor of your presence" is still requested with formality and the invita- tion to the reception asks for the "pleasure of your com- pany."

If the wedding is semi-for- a smaller invitation which mal, the bride-to-be may choose is placed in the envelope with- out folding. The wording how- ever, is identical.

The Wedding Ring Has Long History

Of all the symbols and tradi- tions involved in marriage, the wedding ring probably is the most cherished and the most universal.

The ring itself has been a symbol of union since the days of the ancient Egyptians. But until about the ninth century, it was used to symbolize engage- ment rather than marriage.

Much of the tradition associat- ed with the wedding ring can be traced back to the Romans, who were one of the first people to use metal for rings. In poor- er cultures, brides often were given circlets of braided rush, leather and hemp which had to be replaced each year. The Romans began using iron, be- cause of its durability, and lat- er couples made rings of gold which has remained the favorite metal.

The Romans also started the custom of wearing the ring on the third finger of the left hand, because they believed that a vein ran directly from the heart to this finger. Another Roman custom was the use of gemmel or twin rings which were hing- ed and clasped together to form a single band, symbolizing the unity of marriage.

The commonest type of wed- ding ring is the plain, circular band whose shape symbolizes unending love. Jeweled wedding bands have gone in and out of fashion because of a superstit- ion that the stones break the circle and are unlucky.

For those who don't want to be guided by superstition, there is a variety of jeweled bands available today, including the popular diamond-studded rings. Even these rings would seem plain however, when com- pared with those of the 18th century which featured high- domed cupolas on the so-called Turkish or Solomon bands.

The wedding ring, in all its forms, has even come in for its share of criticism. During the feminist movements, both in the United States and abroad, advocate of more freedom for women looked on the wedding ring as a symbol of bondage, a holdover from the days when a wife was considered property.

Etiquette Hints for Brides

Wedding gifts—if displayed—should be shown at the home of the bride, not at the place of the reception. The bride frequently displays the gifts at a tea or party at her home in advance of the wedding.

A member of the bride's or groom's family who is too old to be a flower girl and too young to be a bridesmaid, may be a junior bridesmaid. She is usually between 10 and 14, and in the procession, walks in front of the bridesmaids.

In deciding white for 1964 brides is this "no-color" wool homespun cost, accented with navy and white braid.

Something Old, Something...

Something old, something new, something borrowed, something blue. No one knows exactly where that rhyme about a bride's wedding outfit began. But many of the other traditions surrounding bridal dress are rooted in history.

The white wedding dress and veil worn in most Judeo-Christian weddings around the world today dates back to Biblical times. Hebrew brides wore white for purity and were sometimes enveloped in veils that symbolized submission modesty and virginity.

In ancient Greece, it was the custom for brides to spin the flax, weave the cloth and do the sewing for their wedding dress as, also of white. The Romans carried on the tradition of white. Girls were married in veils and robes fringed with purple. The flowered Roman wedding veils called flammeum, were bright yellow. They were held in place with wreaths of verbena which the brides had to gather themselves.

In some parts of the world today, especially in provincial areas of Europe, girls are married in their traditional folk costumes. Since these gowns are so intricately designed and costly, they also are used as bridal outfits. The bride adds some accessory to the costume to indicate she is getting married. In Norway, a silver filigree brooch is pinned to the blouse of the folk costume. In Austria and Bavaria, flowered jewsel bridal crowns are substituted for more ordinary hats. Girls in certain Swiss mountain canton carry long white linen handkerchiefs as symbols of purity when being married. The red woolen braid pinned to the bride's wreath in the Ukraine has a similar meaning.

The color red is traditionally associated with brides in the Orient. Everything made for the Chinese wedding used to be colored red —including the invitations, the bridal dress, the firecrackers, the sweetmeats and the dyed eggs that guests hunted as omens of good fortune. In 17th and 18th century Persia, white wedding dresses were worn with crimson veils. In Arabic and Hindu countries the bride's hands and feet are stained with henna the night before the wedding. In Japan the bride wears three layers of kimonos. The outer one is patterned and quilted in red, but is predominantly white, the Oriental color of mourning. This symbolizes that the bride is dead to her parents once she has moved to her husband's home.

The bridal gowns of India and of Southeast Asia are particularly luxurious. Wedding saris are woven of rich parrot silks and often have threads of pure gold and silver.

To Rent or Buy That is Question

Unless you have a fairy godmother who provides you with a completely equipped home, you will probably be faced with the question:

"Which is better for a newlywed couple, renting an apartment or buying a home?"

For the young couple, the major expense of a down payment on a house is usually too much. Renting is less expensive since there is less upkeep, no taxes and fewer incidentals like heating. Also, you may not want to have to furnish a whole house all at once.

If you do have enough money saved to buy a home, the U.S. department of agriculture offers several facts to keep in mind. First, remember that the larger the downpayment and the shorter the term of the mortgage loan, the less the home will cost in the long run.

For instance, a $15,000 mortgage at six percent interest paid over 15 years will cost you about half the cost of the original loan in interest. If paid in 25 years, interest will cost almost nine-tenths of the original loan.

Money counsellors generally advise allowing two and one-half times annual income for purchase of a home. But don't forget, the wife who is working at the time of her marriage may not be employed a year later. And children also will increase costs and cut down on money available.

The extras that are involved in buying a home include property taxes, insurance, heat and upkeep. These usually total about four to five percent of the cost of the home each year. The total mortgage payment each month should amount to about 25 percent of take home pay.

This is about the same figure which should be alloted for prices vary widely with locality. In some areas you may have to go as high as 30 percent to find an apartment, while in others the rent budget will be less. With an apartment, you are not buying anything and will make no profit. On the other hand, you will have less expenses as you go along and will not be tied to a long-term mortgage—an important aspect since many young couples are quite mobile and do not say in one place long.

At right, lace motifs give the Parisian side effect to this tailored knee sheath. Up-to-date accents are its A-line skirt and scoop neckline with a V.

Picture Prettiness For a Bride-to-Be

Much of the fun of a wedding is looking back on it, and having pictures to show your children, grandchildren and friends.

Most brides have a professional photographer take the portrait, and just like everything else about a wedding, this requires plenty of planning.

First, pick your photographer. Study the work of different photographers — from friends, newspaper pictures and other sources. Decide which style pleases you, then make an appointment.

The photographer probably will advise you to schedule your appointment at least three weeks before the wedding, especially if you want to see your picture in the local paper.

Decide where you want the portrait taken. Most pictures are set in the photographer's studio, but you also can choose the church where the wedding will take place, your home or the bridal shop when you have your last fitting.

If you have a special feature you'd like in the picture, such as a family Bible or heirloom veil, let the photographer know in advance. Most portrait photographers keep a supply of artificial wedding bouquets as part of their equipment. This saves the expense of buying a duplicate bouquet and the flowers won't wilt under the hot lights.

The photographer will take care of the picture. You must take care of your appearance. Get a good night's rest the night before the picture taking. Wear the hairdo you plan for the wedding. It's often a good idea to schedule a beauty parlor appointment a day or two beforehand.

Avoid the "painted" look in your bridal portrait, but don't forget makeup altogether. Some photographers have a special makeup. Others advise the bride to use her regular cosmetics, accenting the eyes, using a lip stick that is not too pale and avoiding rouge and heavy powder.

On the day of the portrait itself, the big secret is to relax. Some photographers even suggest the bride will be more comfortable if she takes off her shoes during the picture taking. Few bridal portraits include the feet.

On the day of the wedding itself you'll want more photographs — taken either by a professional or by a friend or relative who's handy with a camera.

Here are some scenes you'll be sure to want to include:

The bride in the dressing room with her attendants.

The bride going down the aisle on her father's arm.

A scene from the back of the church during the ceremony. (Get the minister's permission.)

The bride coming up the aisle on her husband's arm.

The bride, bridegroom and attendants.

The bride, bridegroom and her family.

The bride, bridegroom and his family.

A scene of the couple cutting the cake.

The bride dancing with the bridegroom.

The bride tossing her bouquet. And finally, the bride and bridegroom leaving the reception amid the traditional shower of rice and confetti.

INTUITION PAYS OFF

MONTREAL (CP) — A woman's emotional sensitivity is a strong reason for hiring women executives, says Eric Gould, who deliberately employs female managers in the branches of his Montreal business. "Because they're so emotional, women quickly sense moods of the individual buyer and know when to retreat and not offend," he says.

Bridal Gowns Are Crowned With Clouds of Lacy Veils

According to tradition, every bride is beautiful as she walks down the aisle. Part of that beauty comes from the lacy cloud of veiling which surrounds her head.

Veils come in all styles, lengths, sizes and fabrics, and must be suited to the dress, to Designer Nelson Arnheld says lace mantillas are particularly popular this year, with the lace matching that on the dress. They are available in short-shoulder length—or long styles. If the bride can afford it, the lace is often imported from France.

Also popular is the detachable veil—actually two veils in one. This style is used if the bride is wearing a long, formal gown. A short, shoulder length veil is worn for both the ceremony and the reception. A floor length veil is attached for ceremony only and can be removed to allow freedom of movement at the reception. Most of the short veils are extremely bouffant, billowing around the shoulders.

The headpiece to which the veil is attached also varies widely. Simple pillbox styles which sit on top of the head are popular, especially for winter, for the girl with a simple hair-do. For the girl with a bouffant hair style, a bow, flower or lace clip can be pinned in the front of the hair, just above the hairline without upsetting the hairdo.

Mrs. Arnheld says that another style-setter for this season is the lace cap which covers almost the whole head and is in keeping with the simpler hairdos which are now popular. The cap can be topped with artificial flowers, seed pearls or rhinestones.

Most of the headpieces are very small, except for brides in August. This also applies to the veils for the bridesmaids. The pastel shades are in bridesmaids' for bridesmaids' outfits especially aqua, pink, light blue, and pale green. Usually the bridesmaids' veils are attached to a simple bow which clips on the head. The veils are frequently detachable and the headpiece and can be used as a hat later.

Mrs. Arnhold notes that many girls today look for this double use in the veils they buy since cost is frequently a factor. The price of the bridal veil can range from about $20 up. Depending on the size, the amount of decoration and the type of lace used. Seed pearls are particularly popular for decoration. It is a good idea to buy the gown and veil in the same place, even if you have a family heirloom veil you would like to use. The store frequently can have the heirloom restyled to match your gown. The most popular fabric for headpieces is silk-faced peau, a fabric which is similar to peau de soie, but less expensive.

Your Family Budget Can Be a Friend If You Manage Your Money Sensibly

Once a newly-married couple has decided that they must budget their money, the hardest job they face is sitting down with a pencil and paper and looking at the hard, cold figures of what their income is and where it goes.

Banking officials and consultants say "It isn't how much money you have, it's how you manage it." And they warn that unless a couple learns to live on their income while it's a small, they won't be any better off financially as their income rises.

One consultant in money management suggests that a couple with a working wife should budget their living costs on the man's income. This is what they will have to live on eventually. One-third to 40 percent of the working wife's income can be set aside for her expenses, and the rest be saved.

This early period in a marriage when the wife is working gives a couple an excellent chance to put themselves ahead financially, and it's a chance that won't come again after they start raising a family.

BEWARE OF NEW CAR

Warning signals should go up when the young couple plunges in on buying a new car. No one thinks about how those monthly payments will pinch when they come on top of furniture payments, for instance. Besides the monthly payments, there are the car insurance premiums and the money that constantly goes out to keep the car operating.

A young couple should not try to furnish a home all at once, but concentrate on a few big pieces at first, pay them off and then add to them. The limit of annual income that should be invested in furniture at one time has been estimated 10 to 12 per cent. By dealing with a reliable furniture store you can often purchase on a contract basis, and thus cut down high interest charges.

TROUBLE SPOTS IN BUDGET

Studies have shown that trouble spots in budgeting come from hidden services and costs, such as medical and dental bills, life insurance premiums, car insurance and costs of operating a car, and gifts and recreation.

There are many hidden housekeeping costs, too, which can trip up even the most money-conscious brides and grooms. For example, lots of money has to be spent unexpectedly to buy items like ironing boards, dust pans, decorator pillows, waxes and polishes, nails, screws and hand tools, curtain rods and shades.

It is a good idea to set up more than one savings account. At first, the couple should try to accumulate an emergency fund of three to six months of their income. Then, separate bank accounts can be set up for long-range goals, like buying a home, or shorter-range plans, like next year's vacation.

It's important to plan ahead, also, for yearly bills, such as the insurance premiums, so that you don't have to dig into your savings when they come due.

If you have problems in trying to set up a working budget that covers how you want to live, try consulting your local banker. Many banks across the nation now are setting up counselors to handle just such needs.

Ready for a checkered career is this easy-fitting coat on the officer's theme. It's double-breasted with a back belt to control fullness.

Plan Your Invitations

The type of invitations you send out for your wedding will depend on what kind of ceremony you're having.

For a small wedding with fewer than 30 guests, handwritten notes from either the bride or her mother are acceptable. But for a large informal wedding, or a formal ceremony, the bride usually sends out invitations engraved on white, ivory or cream-colored paper. For formal weddings, a large size paper, folded square, with engraving on the top sheet is usually used. This is folded once when put in the envelops. The tissue paper is left in to protect the engraving. A smaller size paper, inserted without folding, is used for less formal weddings.

If you do not wish to use engraving, you may choose a form of printing which resembles engraving. It is less expensive and has become popularly accepted.

Invitations should be ordered from your jeweler, stationer or department stores. Most stores have consultants to advise the bride on the wording. Invitations to a church "request the honor of your presence." Invitations to a reception read, "pleasure of your company."

The invitations should be sent by the bride's parents. If the parents are deceased, they are sent by a close relative. In cases where the parents are divorced, the invitations are sent by that parent with whom the bride lives.

If all of the guests are invited to both the ceremony and the reception, one invitation is sufficient. If there is a separate guest list for each event, a small reception card is enclosed with the invitation to the ceremony.

The outer envelopes for the invitations should be addressed by hand — never typed. The inner envelope is left unsealed and is addressed to Mr. and Mrs. Doe, without first names or address. Young children may be included by writing their first names in a line below their parents'. Older children should receive their own invitations.

The Men Behind the Wedding

In the musical "My Fair Lady," Mr. Doolittle asks his friends to "Get me to the church on time." In real life, it is the best man who has the job of getting the groom to the church on time.

The bestman's duties actually start the day of the wedding rehearsal when he is responsible for taking charge of the ushers and briefing them on any special seating arrangements.

On the day of the ceremony itself, the best man gets the ring from the groom. If there is a ring bearer, the best man sees that he carries out his instructions. Some best men carry a spare ring from the dime store — just in case something happens to the real band.

The best man should obtain the marriage license and the minister's fee from the groom. He helps the groom get ready for the wedding, making sure his bags are packed and usually taking care of the luggage. He calls for the groom and accompanies him to the church, waiting with him in the vestry — just for moral support. He should have the groom at the church at least 15 minutes before the ceremony. This is no time for a Johnny-come-lately.

After the ceremony, the best man makes sure the members of the wedding party leave in the proper cars. He checks tickets and reservations for the honeymoon. And he makes sure the groom has the necessary tickets in his pocket after he has changed to street clothes.

At the reception, the best man should be prepared to act as toastmaster and timekeeper at the bride's table. He proposes the first toast, sees that the guest book is signed, has the car sent around at the proper time and assists the couple in getting away.

The ushers also have a number of duties at the wedding. They should arrive at the church one hour before the ceremony and get their boutonnieres. The ushers have a typed list of guests occupying reserved pews. As the guests arrive, the ushers ask them whether they are friends of the bride or groom. Friends of the bride are seated at the left. Friends of the groom on the right. The head usher escorts the mother of the bride to the front left-hand pew. He escorts the mother of the bride to the front left-hand pew. The bride's mother is the last person to arrive at the church before the bridal party.

After the recessional, the ushers escort all the ladies in the front pews to the doors until all members of the immediate family have left the church. At the reception, the ushers assist by taking elderly guests to the receiving line, introducing those who are alone and dancing with members of the wedding party. The head usher helps assemble the wedding party and guests when the cake is cut.

After the bride and groom have left, the best man and ushers can relax—until the next wedding which may be their own.

The Marrying Migrants

SAN GIOVANNI IN FIORE, Italy (AP) — Imagine getting married and then not seeing your new wife or husband for 11 months. That's what happens each year in the little Italian town of San Giovanni in Fiore.

The town is poor and most of the youths seek a living elsewhere. But they save their money, and at the end of the year, return for brides.

This year, more than 100 weddings were celebrated over Christmas and New Year's. Family savings were used for one vast succession of celebrations.

But after the weddings, the grooms kissed their brides goodbye for another 11 months. It is too expensive for the brides to travel with their husbands who are working in Germany, Switzerland, France and northern Italy.

NORWAY KEEPS PEACE

Norway has about 500 army officers and men in the Gaza Strip, in the United Nations Emergency Force.

Classic is the word to describe this simple, yet distinctive bridal attendant's gown. It is a crepe sheath, emphasizing a scoop neckline and modified empire waist, and put in a class by itself by the two floating back panels.

ANNOUNCEMENT

An engagement is never, under any circumstances, announced by the groom-to-be or any member of his family. The announcement is made in the name of the bride's parents, even if she is not living at home.

Heavy Flooding Averted by Weather Modes

WINNIPEG (CP) — Abnormal weather conditions played havoc with flood forecasters but averted a Red River flood this month which had been expected to ran kamong the province's worst.

J. A. Griffiths, director of water control and conservation, said three weather factors caused the rapidly changing situation which resulted in Emerson, 70 miles south of Winnipeg, suffering the only major flooding in Manitoba.

The factors were: (1) relatively warm temperatures; (2) negligible rainfall; (3) simultaneous spring breakup throughout the River watershed.

"We had two weeks of dry weather with no freezing at night which resulted in runoff from the fields and tributaries to be completed before the crest hit the U.S. R.," he said.

At Emerson, residents rested easily today for the first time in nearly two weeks.

Strong winds aggravated flood conditions Monday, but the two feet of water in the business section did not break through the sandbag dikes.

However, thousands of acres of farm land north of Emerson were inundated today as the water from the swollen river played havoc with its tributaries. Many residents were forced to travel to and from their homes.

The Red River, meanwhile, crested lower than expected at Emerson on the Manitoba-North Dakota border.

A peak of 2.23 feet above its banks was reached just before noon Monday, but was 6 inches lower than predicted and a day behind provincial forecasts.

Lake Superior Outflow May Be Available

TORONTO (CP) — Increased outflow from Lake Superior may be used in an attempt to maintain water levels in the other Great Lakes after dry periods, T. M. Patterson, director of the water resources branch of the department of northern affairs and natural resources, said Monday.

"Possibly we could attempt to improve the regulation of Lake Superior in a manner to ease the downstream level problems while protecting the interests on the upper lake," Mr. Patterson told the annual convention of the Ontario Institute of Professional Agrologists.

However, he added, it would be wrong to suggest that use of Lake Superior water would cure the problems caused by low water levels in the other lakes.

During the last year an average additional outflow of 8,700 cubic feet a second was released from Lake Superior because of the low levels downstream, he said. This lowered the level of the upper lake by 0.31 feet and raised the level in Lakes Michigan and Huron by only 0.20 feet.

Mr. Patterson said the International Joint Commission is expected to look into the possibilities of devising a system to regulate outflows from Lake Superior which will take into account the needs of the other lakes.

The commission is currently investigating the record low levels in the lakes during the past year.

Ed Wright stands in front of the bus he drove in 1916. It was the first motor bus running between Belleville and Tweed.

Half Century Ago First Motor Bus Appeared in City Says H. Aselstine

"Where have all the horses gone, long time passing?
Where have all the horses gone, a long time ago.
Where have all the horses gone, replaced by buses every one.
Think of all the gas they burn. When will they ever learn?"

The horse drawn buses are gone now, and it's 50 years since the motor bus appeared in Belleville in April 1915.

Adelbert Aselstine opened the Trenton and Belleville Daily Stage Line in 1885. He sold out to Rathbun Bus Lines of Trenton in 1897.

Three years later, in 1900, Mr. Aselstine started a horse bus line in Belleville.

"We used to draw passengers from the City out to the Belleville Cemetery every Wednesday and Sunday," recalled Howard Aselstine. "People didn't have any way of getting around in those days, so we would take them to the cemetery, stay about two hours, and bring them back."

Around 1906, the Aselstine Bus Lines began drawing passengers back and forth from the trains and the hotels in the City. In 1908 the line obtained a franchise from the Grand Quinte to carry passengers between the trains and the hotel. At the time, the line consisted of four horse buses, plus fancy carriages for funerals and weddings.

USED AS TAXI

In 1912, Mr. Aselstine's two sons, Howard and Walter, joined the business.

"The automobile was starting to come along then, Howard said, "so we bought our first car, a 1912 McLaughlin Buick, and used it as a taxi."

Then in 1915, the first motor bus appeared in Belleville. It was placed on the chassis of the first James St. Charles Omnibus Company of Belleville. The horse bus frame was placed on the chassis of a McLaughlin Buick.

Howard Aselstine recalls: "There was no starter; we used a crank. It had electric headlights, but there was no heater and no windshield wipers. In a snow storm, if the windshield was getting plugged up with snow, we'd put the side curtains on and let the snow blow in.

"That bus ran very quiet, and it would travel 45-50 miles per hour if you could find a road smooth enough to travel that fast on."

In 1916, the Aselstine's opened the first motor stage from Belleville to Tweed. The fare was one dollar for one way, and fifty cents more for a return ticket.

"The big thing in those days was the mail," Howard Aselstine said. "There were seven stops between Belleville and Tweed. We stopped at Cannifton, Corbyville, Plainfield, Latta, Roslin, Thomasburg and Chapman's Corners to pick up the mail and passengers on our way to Tweed."

SOLD TO FRANK SMITH

The offices of the Aselstine Bush Line was sold to the late Ira Deist, now known as Canteen Street. Adelebert Aselstine died in 1922 and the City Bush Line was sold to the late Frank Smith.

In 1925, the Aselstine brothers started the Belleville-Marmora run. The two bus lines, Belleville to Marmora, and Belleville to Tweed, ran until 1942. The Belleville to Marmora line now owned by Franklin Coach Lines, was sold to Charles Crawford, and the Belleville to Tweed line was sold to Harold Emerson, who still drives the route and who first began driving the buses between Belleville and Tweed in 1919.

It's a long time since the clippity clop of horses' hooves were heard on Front Street. The horse buses have disappeared and been replaced by motor buses, and it all began with Adelbert Aselstine in 1915.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids... and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction or your money refunded.

Postponement Of Steel Strike Now Certain

PITTSBURGH (AP)—A fourmonth steel strike postponement is virtually certain, lifting what the Johnson administration viewed as a disastrous threat to the U.S. economy.

Ratification by the United Steelworkers union and 10 major steel firms is expected to be a mere formality Wednesday, swapping a postponement of Saturday's 12:01 a.m. strike deadline for a pay raise of 11.5 cents an hour.

"This is a good day for the economy," said federal mediator William E. Simkin after the union's president, David J. McDonald, and chief industry negotiator R. Conrad Cooper put their initials on the agreement Monday.

McDonald emphasized the 11.5 cents is only the price the industry must pay for a strike delay and that the union still expects to win at least 17.9 cents an hour in wage gains.

Although the steel firms and the union's wage policy committee still must ratify the agreement, Simkin was so confident he planned to return to Washington today.

In exchange for the 11.5-cent pay raise for nearly 500,000 workers, McDonald agreed to drop the union's demand that any eventual settlement be retroactive to May 1 when present contracts expire.

He also said if final agreement is not reached by Aug. 31, "a strike or a lockout could occur."

Missionary School Moved To Thailand

NEW YORK-(Special) — The current pace of the war in Viet Nam has resulted in the transfer of more than 100 children of American and Canadian missionaries from their school in Dalat to a new and safer location in Bangkok, Thailand.

The evacuation of the elementary and high school students from the Dalat academy of the Christian and Missionary Alliance was announced here by Dr. Nathan Bailey, the president of the Alliance, a Protestant denomination with about 140 of its 900 missionaries resident in Viet Nam.

Without advance announcement because of the conditions existing in Viet Nam, the children were removed in a one-day airlift from the Dalat school property to the new school location in the former American Club facilities in Bangkok.

Income Tax Explained

A column designed for the working taxpayer who is not in a position to employ the services of a professional accountant or visit an income Tax office.

By C. A. MILLER
Retired Supervising Assessor, Income Tax Department

ADOPTED CHILDREN

Many taxpayers have the mistaken idea that a child cannot be claimed for exemption unless such child has been legally adopted and they hold the necessary adoption papers to verify the claim.

For income tax purposes, a child can be claimed as long as it is adopted in fact. This will apply when the parents of the child are deceased and a relative has taken the child to raise as their own. When a taxpayer has a child in his care, custody and control and no one can legally take the child from him, then the child may be claimed for exemption, regardless of the fact no adoption papers have been signed.

If the parents of a child are living but the child is being raised and educated by some one else and the adoption papers have been taken out, then the person who has the child could not be allowed exemption for the child, because such childs' parents could remove it from their home. Such a situation of this nature would be where an uncle or older brother of a child has gone in to educate to a higher degree than such child could expect if it stayed with the parents. In this case the parents would be the only ones entitled to the exemption.

There are so many different circumstances in the case of children claimed that I think the taxpayer should obtain correct information before he files his income tax return. Contact his district income tax office well in advance of filing time or a letter to me, following the instruction given below, will bring correct information and proceedure.

For a personal reply, enclose a self-addressed, five cents stamped envelope, plus 25 cents for each question.

QUESTION 1: My sister and her husband were killed in a car accident. We have taken their two children to raise and educate. Can I claim exemption for them?

ANSWER: Yes. Claim them as adopted children and not as nieces or nephews.

QUESTION 2: My young brother lives with us. I am paying for his entire keep and putting him through University as my parents are not financially able to do this. Can I claim exemption for him?

ANSWER: No. His parents are the only ones that have a claim.

SMOOTH CHANGE-OVER — Sgt. Gerald Chisholm, 28, of Halifax, a member of the Canadian Guards, shows newly arrived Sgt. John McDonnell the view from his observation post near Kydenia, Cyprus. McDonnell, 32, of Creighton Mines, Ont., arrived in Cyprus recently with the Queen's Own Rifles who take over UN truce duties from the Guards. Sgt. McDonnell will be responsible for 15 square miles of mountainous coastal territory. (CP Photo from National Defence)

Picton Sergeant U. N. Eye In Cyprus Trouble Zone

By PETER BUCKLEY

KYRENIA, Cyprus (CP)—The names sound like a sampling from a world atlas or the decisive clashes in some obscure battle: Mountainside, Bellapais, Pyrgos Hill, Kazaphani.

They are, in fact, key titles in the working lexicon of two Canadian Army sergeants, one of whom has just finished a six-month stint with the United Nations forces in Cyprus, the other taking over as his replacement.

Blonde, tanned Sgt. Gerald Chisholm, a 28-year-old bachelor from Halifax, has been with the Canadian Guards since 1954 and returned with them to camp at Picton, Ont. His successor is Sgt. John McDonnell, 32, a moustachioed father of two from Creighton Mines, Ont., who arrived with an advance party of the Queen's Own Rifles of Canada from Victoria to take up duties with the 1,100-man Canadian contingent here.

In a rotation that began in late March and continued through much of April, the 200 members of the 1st Battalion of the Canadian Guards, 95 of the Lord Strathcona's Horse (Royal Canadians) from Calgary, and 325 officers and men who handle administrative duties for both the Canadians and the UN's Nicosia zone of operations were returned to Canada and replaced by others.

TOURS OVERLAP

In many of the jobs, the newcomer's tour overlapped his predecessor's so the change of duties could be handled as smoothly as possible. Others arrived the same day as their predecessors left, and were on their own.

Chisholm and McDonnell were given nearly two weeks for a hand-over.

For the greater part of six months, Chisholm had been responsible for keeping an eye on nearly 15 square miles of mountainous coastal territory to the east of this quiet port city.

The area, rich in green orchards and farms, dotted with picturesque villages, is being increasingly fortified, particularly by Greek-Cypriots.

Chisholm's main responsibility was to give the UN high command a clear picture of the disposition of the opposing Cypriot forces, both Greek and Turkish. His information came from a small chain of observation posts—part of a wider network set up around this Eastern Mediterranean island by the UN —supplemented by mobile patrols and other tricks of the reconnaissance trade.

The two sergeants' familiarization patrols carried them by jeep in a daily swing from their base camp in the mountains three miles south of Kyrenia, through this town and then east along the coast road through the mixed Greek and Turkish Cypriot village of Kazaphani. Then they continued down to the easternmost of the forward observation posts, called Zulu 8 from its position on an army grid map.

ISOLATED SPOT

Zulu 8 perches on a small knoll about 15 feet above the main road a few hundred yards from the glistening Mediterranean. It is manned by a corporal and four men, in two tents surrounded by barbed wire.

"It's one of the most isolated posts on the island," Chisholm said during one patrol. McDonnell added: "But it's a good spot for observation of troop movements and convoys. There's a sharp bend in the road where vehicles have to slow down, and there's no chance of anything racing by without being observed."

After checking with the post for any developments, the sergeants retraced their route and then cut up into the edge of the Kyrenia mountains through the historic village of Bellapais, site of a centuries-old ruined abbey with a commanding view of the seaside landscape.

Nearby is the post called Mountainside, where a non-commissioned officer and nine men are stationed in three tents. In the hills around them, Greek- and Turkish - Cypriot armed positions are within shooting distance of each other, and Mountainside has the dual role of observing troop movements and keeping the two sides apart.

Paquin's Hill is about three miles farther west, a four-man hotspot atop a rocky spur that runs between St. Hilarion Castle, an 11th-century relic high in the mountains which is manned by Turkish - Cypriot fighters, and the Turkish village of Temblos at the foot of the mountain, crowded with refugees.

NAMED AFTER CANADIAN

Paquin's Hill was named, Chisholm said, for a member of the Royal 22nd Regiment from Quebec who formerly manned the post. The Canadians on the hill watch for movement of Turkish fighting down from Temblos and keep tabs on the large Greek - Cypriot armed concentrations which crowd the Turkish village under an uneasy truce.

Just as important, the Canadian presence on the hill means it can't be used by either side against the other.

Apart from touring the fixed locations every day, Chisholm said he had shown McDonnell another job that the Queen's Own sergeant will have.

"We make an occasional patrol out past Zulu 8 to the east for about 15 or 20 miles beyond," Chisholm said.

"It takes a full day. Even though there isn't much in the way of troop concentrations down there, we go through all the little towns along the way and hit all of the side roads, looking for any buildups or changes."

The territory that McDonnell will be covering is touchy. There are Turkish-Cypriots living, generally without incident, in Kyrenia and Kazaphani alongside the dominant Greek-Cypriot majorities. But given the strong feelings between the two races, the possibility of trouble is never remote.

In addition, both sides have had six months of truce in which to build up their forces and improve their training.

City Is Chosen By Govt. In 'Shop Campaign'

Ambitious Goals Set To Assist Economy

TORONTO (CP) — Stanley Randall, Ontario's economics and development minister, set ambitious goals for the province's economy in the next five years as the legislature resumed sitting Tuesday after a 13-day Easter recess.

He also laid out an extensive program of work for government to help the province reach the goals.

The government will organize 11 "shop Canadian" campaigns throughout the year. The special retail promotions will be held in Kenora, Sault Ste. Marie, Sarnia, Windsor, Owen Sound, Cornwall, Guelph, Belleville, Kingston, Hamilton and Toronto.

Mr. Randall described a five-year plan by which the government aims to create at least 75,000 new jobs a year and reduce unemployment to two per cent by 1970.

By 1970, he said, Ontario's population will have reached 7,000,000 and employment will be about 3,000,000.

He said the main stimulus to economic growth will come in the field of durable manufactured goods, whose output will have increased 50 per cent by 1970.

Employment in manufacturing would be reduced to 26 per cent of the labor force compared to 29 per cent in 1961.

WILL PROVIDE JOBS

Most new jobs, he said, will be in service occupations such as transportation, trade, finance, public administration and community services. Employment will decline in forestry, agriculture and mining.

Industry should be encouraged to economize on the use of labor, particularly in these three fields and in material processing, Mr. Randall said. The government must provide adequate facilities to obtain education and new skills.

The economics minister said Ontario's labor market is inadequate to meet industry's demands. Manufacturing did not employ the full potential last year because of a shortage of skilled workers.

Mr. Randall set other targets for the province:

—An increase of at least 5.5 per cent a year in the gross provincial product;

—An average 3 per cent increase in productivity of 2.5 per cent a year;

—A 10-per-cent increase in exports of manufactured goods.

BY COUNCIL

Mr. Randall said the goals for Ontario were first set out in the annual report of the Economic Council of Canada. Last year the province's economy grew faster than these target rates.

Employment was up 89,000 in 1964, while exports of manufactured goods increased by 42 per cent.

"The high rate of economic

Farmers' Complaint Accurate

OTTAWA (CP) — Agriculture Minister Hays told more than 1,000 farmers today the federal government recognizes that farm income has not kept pace with rising cost of agricultural operations.

He spoke to them in the ballroom of the Chateau Laurier after the Ontario Farmers Union organized a march on Ottawa to seek improved support prices for farm products and a new production management measures.

Mr. Hays said the main point of a farmers union brief is that prices for farm products and farm income have slipped behind rising costs of farm operations.

"As a general statement, this is correct, although prices in some sections of Canadian agriculture are relatively better than others," he said.

"However, the government recognizes the problem which the submission brings out and certain actions which have been taken, such as the new dairy program, indicate its intention to do something about it."

HAS SURPLUS PROBLEM

Mr. Hays said the problem is very difficult. A big problem was that "prices level which encourage world consider decisions can bring out surpluses for which there is no market."

An OFU delegation presented a 30,000-signature petition marshalling facts and figures to support its theme that farmers caught in the cost-price squeeze are not getting a fair share of the national income.

It said "severe economic problems" are facing thousands of Ontario farmers.

Support prices set a minimum guaranteed amount they get each year for specified products. If average prices on the market fall below the support level, the government's agriculture stabilization board pays the difference on a basic amount of production.

The petition, supported by the Budget Critics Open Fire

By MICHAEL GILLAN

OTTAWA (CP) — The opposition parties are expected to unleash detailed criticism and test the government with no-confidence motions today as the Commons opens a six-day debate on Finance Minister Gordon's federal budget.

Conservative financial critic Georges Nowlan will continue the assault he began Monday night following its delivery when he called the budget a "two-bit" gesture.

Other opposition parties, all critical of the budget despite the proposed 10-per-cent cut in the basic income tax, are expected to follow suit.

Commons rules provide for possible votes on the even-numbered days of the debate—Thursday, Monday and Wednesday in this case.

A Thursday opening for the budget debate had been scheduled to allow opposition spokesmen time to digest its contents. But Privy Council President Mcllraith said Tuesday the opposition parties had expressed no objection to starting the discussion sooner.

CONSIDER MEASURES

While the criticisms were being prepared, MPs took on two other government measures — giving first reading to a bill to retire senators at age 75 and starting debate on amendments to provide greater lending authority to the federal government for urban renewal schemes and low - rental and university housing projects.

Opposition parties — led by the New Democrats who favor abolition of the upper chamber —were critical of the government bill on the Senate. There was no indication when it

Johnson Wants World Support Without Popularity Ruling Acts

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson clearly wants to win as much world support as possible for his policies in South Viet Nam but he is also grimly determined not to run U.S. strategy as a popularity contest.

These two attitudes were sharply defined in his White House press conference Tuesday.

In line with what the president said, officials discounted the impact of "severe disapproval" of the war which was expressed by French President de Gaulle in a speech in Paris an hour earlier.

This was the second time in five days that a top administration spokesman had dealt directly with criticisms of the U.S. role in Viet Nam which had been made both at home and abroad.

Last Friday night, State Secretary Dean Rusk assailed critics for talking "nonsense" when they say the United States should find some quick way, of getting out of Viet Nam or shoot at least bail bombings of the north.

At his press conference, Johnson argued that the United States has used its massive power with great restraint. He put the full blame on the Communists, and specifically North Viet Nam, for causing the conflict by waging a campaign of terror and guerrilla warfare in an effort to conquer the south.

When the president was asked specifically whether he thought

To de Gaulle Viet Nam War Is Encroachment on Liberty

PARIS (Reuters)—France today appeared more determined than ever to pursue an independent role in the world, following President de Gaulle's "declaration of independence" speech Tuesday night.

His speech contained only a brief reference to the Viet Nam situation... and he called again for a neutral Southeast Asia free of outside influence.

De Gaulle condemned the war in Viet Nam but avoided any direct criticism of U.S. military action there.

De Gaulle said French policy holds that "no hegemony exercised by anyone, no foreign intervention in the internal affairs of any state, no prohibition made to any country whatsoever to maintain peaceful relations with any other country whatsoever, can be justified."

"On the contrary," he continued, "as we see it, the higher interest of the human species demands that each nation be responsible for itself, free of any encumbrances, and aided in its progress without conditions of obedience.

"Hence, our severe disapproval of the war which is spreading in Asia more and more from day to day. . ."

In his televised speech, de Gaulle concentrated solely on the issue of French independence.

He rejected involvement in an Atlantic defence system in which France's defence, economy and commitments would depend on American weapons, policy and material domination.

He said the division of the world into only two camps — meaning communism, equality and fraternity did not get proper consideration.

To Stand Firm Only Guarantee Of Peace---LBJ

China Sees No Course But to Resist to End

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Johnson says he is "very hopeful" that some method can be found to bring about peace talks on Viet Nam, but the United States desire for peace is coupled with a "refusal to retreat."

The U.S. is in Viet Nam to resist aggression, the president told a White House press conference Tuesday, "and as long as the aggressors attack we'll stay there and resist them whether we make friends or lose friends."

He said the moment that aggression ceases, the bombing of North Viet Nam will stop.

The clearest lesson from Munich to the present Johnson said, is that to yield to aggression is to bring on "greater threats and brings even more destructive war."

"To stand firm is the only guarantee of a lasting peace," he said.

DOMINATES CONFERENCE

The air-jungle war in Southeast Asia dominated Johnson's 36-minute press conference before 300 reporters gathered around television and radio microphones in the East Room of the White House.

His comments were the latest in a round of overnment messages seemingly designed to drive home to the American public a determination to continue the expanding U.S. military role in Southeast Asia.

They followed signs of some broadening in public doubt about the course of the war.

On other matters, the president also:

1. Denied ever having received from a single official of the government or employee of the government" proposals to use nuclear weapons in the Asian theatre.

JUSTIFIES DELAY

2. Justified his postponement more than a week ago of scheduled visits by Pakistani President Mohammed Ayub Khan and Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri of India. Johnson said in a prolonged reply, reflecting his awareness of and sensitivity to subsequent criti-

Auto Trade Agreement Under Fire

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP)—Republican congressmen began sniffing suspiciously Tuesday at the Canada - United States agreement to establish limited free trade within the North American automotive industry.

John Byrnes, Wisconsin, said the agreement appears to be "completely one-sided" in Canada's favor in terms of restrictions. Thomas Curtis, Missouri, said it looks "more like the prevention of a trade war than a move toward free trade."

The two quizzed a high-level group of government witnesses as the House of Representatives' ways and means committee began studying the proposal.

The hearing, scheduled for three days, continues today with appearances by representatives of the major auto makers and independent parts makers in the U.S.

The government holds that the agreement — abolishing tariffs at the manufacturers' level for most North American vehicles and the original parts in them — benefits both countries.

EXPECTS HIGHER SALES

The U.S. expects to hold and expand its current level of sales to Canada, amounting to about $600,000,000, it was stated. Canada's slice of the market also would rise.

The expressed hope of retaining a considerable trade

Says Air Raids Not Working

SAIGON (AP) — Air strikes against North Vietnamese roads, bridges and railroads are not choking off aid to the Viet Cong and a land invasion of the North should begin immediately, says the commander of South Viet Nam's air force.

"If we are just going to bomb communications lines, the Viet Cong will be able to stand up for a long time, I'm afraid," Brig.-Gen. Nguyen Cao Ky told The Associated Press in an exclusive interview today. "So the next step must be big—either a full escalation of the war or negotiations."

Stalin, the note said Khrushchev's successor, is being revisionist and great - nation chauvinists.

It accused them of using "flowery talk about anti-imperialism, proletarian unity" to decieve people while in fact they pursued the bankrupt policy of peaceful coexistence" and "United States-Soviet collaboration for the solution of the problems of the world."

On Viet Nam, the "explanatory note" said:

The Vietnamese people in dealing with utterly vicious United States aggressors have no alternative but to resist them to the end, to resist until they have completely defeated them and there can be no question whatever of 'peaceful coexistence' with them.

"However much they collaborate, the Soviet Union and the United States can never stamp out the just struggles of the great Vietnamese people."

The note said Russia's current leaders were "aligning themselves with the chief enemy of the people of the whole world while directing the sword-point against the revolutionary peoples."

Observers saw the attack on Russian leaders as a new bid by the Chinese to present themselves to Afro-Asian nations as the most loyal supporters of Viet Nam's "liberation struggle" and thus to reduce Russian influence and the impact of Moscow's support for the Vietnamese Communists.

PIONEER DOCTOR DIES

MILTON, Ont. (CP) — Dr. Annie Ella Higbee, a pioneer woman doctor and the first medical practitioner to live among homesteaders in the Peace River district of Alberta, died Monday at the age of 100. She was born at Lexiard, near Oshawa, and graduated from Toronto General Hospital as a nurse in 1888.

Planes Strafe Northern Town

From Reuters-AP

SAIGON (CP)—More than 80 U.S. and South Vietnamese aircraft raided North Vietnamese roads and bridges today and also sank or damaged patrol boats and coastal shipping.

(In Tokyo a monitored dispatch by the South Vietnamese news agency quoted Vietnamese planes today strafed and set fire to a large residential area at Phu Yen, about 15 miles southeast of Dong Hoi.

In the first official announcement that a population area had been struck in North Viet Nam, the dispatch said the planes launched the attack after "receiving hostile ground fire." It said many civilian and pupil installations were destroyed in the area.)

A spokesman for the U.S. military command in Saigon declined to confirm or deny the claim, that he still thinks it was a good idea because he would have hoped later to have more authority from congress to meet the needs of the two countries.

The president began by reading a statement on Viet Nam in which he said:

"I say again that I will talk to any government, anywhere, and without any conditions. If any doubt our sincerity, let them test it. Each time we have met silence, slander and the sound of guns."

Are Now Two Ways Of Figuring Finances Of Nation

OTTAWA (CP)—In his last two budget speeches Finance Minister Gordon has referred to a new form of reckoning governmental income and spending. He calls it the national economics accounts system.

He reported in Monday's budget speech that on the basis of a finance minister's traditional method of accounting to Parliament, Canada had a deficit of $33,000,000,000 in the fiscal year ended last March 31. But on a national economic accounts basis he reported a surplus of $332,000,000.

For the 1965-66 fiscal year, he is planning a budgetary deficit of $300,000,000, but a national economics accounts surplus of $133,000,000.

What's the explanation for these seemingly conflicting figures?

Mr. Gordon says that the traditional system of accounting to Parliament for revenues and expenditure doesn't represent the true impact of federal government operations on the economy of Canada.

The budgetary system used by finance ministers for generations represents the traditional approach that Parliament must approve every expenditure by the Crown, and that every bit of revenue must be accounted for by the treasury in the consolidated revenue fund.

However, over the years revenues have developed that don't go into the consolidated revenue fund, but into special funds. There are payments in Ottawa which are not really for goods bought by or services performed for the federal government. Funds are transferred by Ottawa to other levels of government to spend.

The prime example on the revenue side is the old age security fund, from which old age pensions of $75 a month to everyone 70 and over now are paid.

This fund revenue comes from three - per - cent taxes on corporation profits, three percentage points of the 11-per-cent general sales tax, and a four-per-cent tax on personal income up to $120 a year per individual.

This income is not accounted

Mayor Confers With Minister About Bridge

TRENTON — Mayor James MacDonald was in Toronto yesterday where he conferred with Deputy Minister C. McNab and other Department of Highways officials about the proposed new bridge across the Trent River.

The mayor said today the town is still waiting for the Federal Department of Transport's cheque for $230,000 towards the more-than-a-million-dollar bridge. An agreement between the town and the Ottawa department, whereby the town will take over the upkeep of the swing portion of the old bridge, has been agreed upon by both factions in return for the department's donation towards the new bridge, has been signed by town officials and returned to Ottawa.

However, the Mayor said the Department of Justice was concerned with paragraphing "letters of Patent," which will make the turnover of the swing portion to the town legal.

The province, through the Department of Highways, has guaranteed the town 40 per cent of the construction costs, which are estimated to be in excess of $650,000. Concessions were made through the mayor's request that the bridge be formed a connecting link between Highway 401 and Highway 2. The town will procure any monies spent through progress payments from the province.

The approaches to the proposed new bridge will "take the form of a "V" on the north side of Dixon Drive, Sidney Street and Dominion Street, now occupied by deserted railway tracks. The roadway will follow the tracks down to Marmora Street. A number of private properties will have to be bought up, (or expropriated, if need be), to make room for the approaches.

Railway officials are co-operating with the town on the deal and unused tracks are being removed.

Workmen Start Laying Laterals On Two Streets

TRENTON — Town workmen are now installing laterals and other house connections on houses on Byron St. and Kidd Ave., leading from the sewer main installed on those streets last winter. The work should be done within two weeks, town engineer Eric Aldersey said today.

The connections are completing the cement retainer wall on the west side of the river, and when this is finished the road will stretch from the town bridge to the municipal parking lot.

Meanwhile, plans are going ahead for curb and road work on Dufferin Ave., between Isabella Street West and Henry St. The underground services were installed during this strip last year.

In the designing stage, is a storm sewer for Fairview Crescent. This will, it is expected, alleviate flooding conditions in the Devere Gardens Area, experienced this spring.

Mrs. Ethel Hazard gardener, Bart Boers, and a hired crew have been planting trees on Dufferin Ave., south of Dundas Street, this week. These will replace the lovely old trees cut down last year to allow for street widening. Thursday, the men should start planting fair sized trees on Gilmour Hill, replacing those cut down for street widening here, last year.

Truck Crashes Into Side of Freight Train

A truck driver, hauling a load of dead farm animals, yesterday escaped injury when his vehicle crashed into the side of a CNR freight train north of Foxboro yesterday.

Train engineer was William Gardner, Belleville.

Two Airmen Plead Guilty To Car Thefts

TRENTON — Two Trenton airmen, Raphael Noble, 21 and Ivan Kenneville, 19, pleaded guilty in Trenton court yesterday to the theft of a car owned by Reginald Truin of 195 Dundas Street East and also the theft of a car owned by Louis Doucette of Campbellford. Both cars were taken on April 21, when the two men admitted they "had been drinking heavily."

The Truin car was taken from in front of the owner's house, and driven by Noble to Toronto, where he slept in the vehicle, abandoned it and returned to Trenton by bus. The Doucette car was taken from the Ritzway parking lot and eventually was abandoned in the Loblaw East Trenton parking lot.

Both were remanded for a week in order that their records may be established and a pre-sentence report will be prepared by probation officer Dennis Atkins.

SENTENCE SUSPENDED

A 24-year old Trenton man, Richard Winston Desrochers, pleaded guilty in magistrate's court at Trenton yesterday to the theft on March 10 of a set of guitar from Robert Deschenes of Spring Street and was placed on a year's suspended sentence by Magistrate T. Y. Wills. The guitar, worth between $150 and $200 when new, was estimated to be worth $45 when taken from Deschenes' car, and has had $25 value since being in the custody of Ostrom.

Ostrom, who said he was unmarried, unemployed and needed time to get money for restitution, has been given a week "or so" to pay for damage to the recovered instrument. Court costs were $5.

The accused took an obviously casual attitude toward the episode, and was told by the magistrate, "this is a serious proposition. You now have a criminal record. It's reasonable you should be given a chance to redeem yourself, but if you get into further trouble, you won't get off so easily.

IN MEMORIAM

STAPLEY — In loving memory of my mother, Sarah Elizabeth Stapley, who passed away April 29th, 1964.

In sorrow we waited day by day,
And watched your suffering there,
Slowly but surely you drifted away,
Into God's Eternal Rest.

And then God called home His throne above,
For suffering and pain is past,
We know she has gone to realms of love,
And in heaven has peace at last.
Always remembered by all the family.

Queen's Physicist Wants CBC to Rescind FM Licence Of CKWS in Kingston

OTTAWA (CP) — A Queen's University physicist asked the Board of Broadcast Governors Tuesday to rescind the FM (frequency modulation) licence of CKWS Kingston.

H. M. Love suggested the station's FM frequency be replaced by a CBC repeater station. He said Kingston deserves good-quality CBC programs but fails to get them on CKWS.

Mr. Love also called for an independent BBG survey Kingston. Many people there are dissatisfied with CKWS service, not only FM but in the main AM field, he said.

Opposing a licence renewal application by CKWS-FM, Mr. Love said a small repeater station could broadcast CBC programs from corporation stations in other centres.

R. W. Hofstetter, the station manager, told the board CKWS feels there is a real future in FM broadcasting and he plans to put real effort into it.

CFRC NEWS LACK

Carlyle Allison, board vice-chairman and former newspaper editor, noted that CKWS-FM does not have a man on news. Newspaper owner Lord Thomson of Fleet and Senator Rupert Davies, president of the Kingston Whig - Standard, are principal owners of CKWS and Mr. Allison said he is distressed at the failure of two such people to put more money into it.

Mr. Allison told Mr. Hofstetter the ownership of the radio station is also tied up with the only daily newspaper in Kingston. This meant a strangle-hold on the news.

Mr. Allison said he thought this might lead Mr. Hofstetter to have a news reporter on staff.

Mr. Allison noted CKWS-FM had doubled broadcast time lately, but with Lord Thomson and Senator Davies involved "surely this is a small effort for these titans of the press world."

If it was brought to the attention of either man it might be regarded as deplorable that the FM station does not have a full-time man on news, he said. Mr. Allison said Mr. Hofstetter has not done much to make the station grow.

Mr. Hofstetter said there are difficulties because the Kingston market has news available from 10 other stations.

To Mr. Love, Mr. Allison said it is CBC policy not to place low-power transmitters in areas where there is an AM CBC affiliate, which CKWS is. CBC affiliates are required to carry a 24- to 25-hour weekly minimum of CBC network shows.

Arthur Phelps, a CKWS director, said a good number of the station's programs are sponsions and making a contribution to the community in local terms. The station wys using its required CBC quota."

NOT SURPRISED

Dr. Andrew Stewart, board chairman, said he is not surprised at Mr. Love's purpose in trying to get CBC-style programming for Kingston. "There was considerable agitation for it there."

He doubted the CBC could provide a full service in Kingston with a two-station market, but it might be worth exploring.

Dr. Stewart asked Mr. Hofstetter whether he would be prepared to give up the CBC affiliation. Mr. Hofstetter replied CKWS has had excellent relations with the CBC and is proud to be associated with it.

Later, Dr. Stewart asked R. Rupert Davies, vice-president, about the Kingston problem. Mr. Fraser said the solution is to install a CBC transmitter, but it's a matter of money and the CBC at the moment does not have the resources. He agreed the amount of CBC programming carried by affiliates is not adequate.

Mr. Fraser was at the hearing on behalf of licence renewal applications for a number of CBC stations. Decisions were reserved on all applications.

Beginning their reign as Mr. and Miss B.C.I.V.S. are Connie Stovell and Ron Walsh. They were crowned today in a ceremony at the B.C.I. by Mary Beth Follwell, Miss B.C.I. of 1964, and Dave Brisbin, Past President of the Hi-Y Club.

Buy and Sell Practices Of Mrs. MacMillan Traced

TORONTO (CP) — The buy and sell practices of Viola MacMillan in shares of Windfall Oils and Mines Ltd. stock last summer were described by three members of the Toronto Stock Exchange Tuesday.

Ted Hastie and Eric Watson, both of the brokerage firm of Moss, Lawson and Co., said Mrs. MacMillan, promoter of Windfall, directed the sale and purchase of shares through a number of accounts.

They were testifying before a royal commission appointed to investigate the circumstances surrounding the rise of Windfall shares to $5.80 from 58 cents and their subsequent collapse to 80 cents on the exchange last July.

Mr. Hastie, a floor trader for the firm, identified various transaction slips and said in some cases Mr. MacMillan handled the sale and purchase of the same block of shares.

BAD DIRECT LINE

Eric Watson, head trader for the brokerage firm, said Mrs. MacMillan had a direct telephone line to the trading floor. He said she directed trading in Windfall shares through a number of accounts.

Mr. Watson said he bought and sold 5,900 Windfall shares himself for a personal profit of about $2,000.

Both men said Mrs. MacMillan would sometimes place orders to sell or buy without first instructing them as to the name of the account doing the trading.

UN, If Not Strangled By Great Powers, Will Grow Strong CP Meet Told

TORONTO (CP) — Lord Caradon, the United Kingdom's permanent representative at the United Nations, said Tuesday night the UN has brought to the world new hopes and motives that are stronger than the old fears and hatreds.

The British cabinet minister, addressing the annual dinner of The Canadian Press, said the dangers to the world now are far greater than were dreamed of in the past. But the UN had added a new element—the test of international, rather than national, advantage in resolving conflicts.

We mustn't expect too much too soon," he said, "but if this child is not strangled by the great powers, it will grow strong."

Lord Caradon, whose audience of about 500 included External Affairs Minister Martin, warmly applauded Canada's role in the UN. No country had a finer record of supporting the UN's international activities. Canada had taken a foremost position in its every effort, in good times and bad.

DANGERS MENACING

Dealing with necessity for collective action, he said the troubles and dangers of the world now are so menacing that they cannot be settled by the intervention of one nation or bloc. They could be dealt with only by international action. That was the case in Suez, The Congo and Cyprus.

"Practical support for the United Nations may be not an optional luxury but an urgent necessity," he added.

The second half of this century could not be run on principles of the 19th century. There must be expansion and advance, and this applied to the UN. In this connection, Canada might lead leadership for... more vigorous and dynamic UN for the future.

Peace was not enough. The UN must not only be an instrument for peacekeeping but also an effective force for economic and social advance.

GAP WIDENING

"It is no good telling a hungry man that what he needs is peace," Lord Caradon said. The gap between the have and the have-not nations was widening rather than narrowing. The major work of the UN was devoted to bridging this gap, and the work going on in the field—"at the perimeter"—was at least as important as that at the centre of the UN. It included 70 per cent of the agency's money and manpower.

While there would be disappointments and dangers in the work of the UN, this called for determination rather than defection. Poverty and racial strife were threats.

A great danger was that "we may become so self - satisfied that we forfeit our leadership," Lord Caradon said. Where the danger becomes greatest, the UN may be too weakened to meet it.

Lord Caradon was introduced by Stuart Keate, publisher of The Vancouver Sun and president of The Canadian Press, who presided. He was thanked by William J. Campbell, vice-president of the Toronto Star and president of the Canadian Daily Newspaper Publishers Association.

A Stand-Pat Budget

Despite the ten per cent reduction in personal income tax—some might say because of it—the budget which Hon. Walter Gordon presented to the House of Commons Monday is a stand-pat budget.

Standing pat is not an unreasonable attitude for a finance minister to take when he is dealing with an economy which has performed like Canada's, with gross national product climbing almost nine per cent during the past year and with most of this rise representing an increase in real output and only a minor portion of it reflecting higher prices.

Standing pat, in effect, was what The Ontario Intelligencer had suggested a week ago after Mr. Gordon presented his fiscal white paper, when we questioned the wisdom of reducing taxes and increasing the deficit in prosperous times.

Some may object that a ten per cent reduction in income tax, placing an additional $170,000,000 in the hands of consumers in the period of half a year, is hardly standing pat. They can find support for this viewpoint from Mr. Gordon himself, who described his budget as "expansionary." But finance ministers are also politicians and politicians must paint rosy pictures. The truth of the matter is, as Mr. Gordon also explained, that the ten per cent cut in personal income taxes is designed to prepare the way for the implementation of the Canada Pensions Plan next January, when wage-earners will find deducted from their pay envelopes five per cent—no more than the income tax reduction. If there had been no provision to cut personal income taxes, the commencement of pension payments could have been sharply deflationary. Mr. Gordon's budget, therefore, is "expansionary" in that it is safeguarding against a future sharp decline in effective consumer demand.

That the budget was not "expansionary" in a sense which might have tempted businessmen to attempt a too rapid growth of production facilities, creating shortages which might have produced a sharp rise in prices, is plain from the almost unanimous tone of disappointment in comments from business leaders. It is worth noting, though, that while the business and financial world was critical, the best barometer of its expectations failed to reflect their complaints. The stock market was steady on Tuesday.

This, then, is a stand-pat budget, with all of the advantages, and also all of the dangers, inherent in a policy of standing still in changing times. Its only change, that in the personal income tax rate, is so closely tied in its long-term effects to the implementation of the Canada Pension Plan that we shall have to await this major diversion of our available income before being able to give final judgment. And still unknown is what effect the Canada Pension Plan will have on the thousands of private pensions plans operated by firms, as well as on savings generally.

War on Crime

Mayor Robert F. Wagner of New York City reports success, "beyond our hopes," in the latest phase of his war against crime. Putting a policeman on every subway train and having 480 more policemen patrolling subway stations has cut felonies to a third and doubled arrests for misdemeanors.

The subway patrol will cost $9,000,000.

There can be no question but that the results are worth the price, because the right of citizens to move about freely without fear of molestation is a priceless one. But any city which needs to take the extreme measures necessary in New York, if it has not lost its war against crime, has certainly suffered a grievous defeat on a major front.

If the criminal element had not gained the upper hand, there would have been no need to put a policeman on every subway train. Subway riders would themselves have handled incidents of theft and assault had they not been terrorized. Restoring to the common citizen his courage, and his confidence that if he intervenes to prevent a crime he will receive prompt support from his fellow-citizens, will take considerable time. A situation in which the presence of a policeman is necessary to make a citizen feel secure is intolerable.

Irritation From Smoking Could Cause Pharyngitis

By JOSEPH C. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have been plagued for several years with chronic pharyngitis. It seems to be the consensus of doctors that my cough can't subside till the inflammation reaches the point of infection, and then penicillin is instituted.

I understand that fairly intensive research has been done of late on antiviral vaccine. Do you have any recent information on this? — Miss R. S.

I suspect that your thinking has gone astray, and if we straighten it out, you'll see that a good deal can be done to remedy chronic pharyngitis.

But that doesn't necessarily mean a pill or an injection.

Pharyngitis isn't a specific disease, caused by a definite germ, like chickenpox or a particular form of influenza, or such.

Rather, it is irritation and inflammation of the pharynx, the cavity which connects the nasal passages with the upper throat.

If bacterial infection happened to be the cause, yes, penicillin or some other antibiotic would make sense. If a virus happened to be the cause, then an anti-viral agent would be in order — if we had any. But unfortunately, we aren't as yet have drugs which will fight viruses in the sense that antibiotics combat bacteria.

There are still other causes of pharyngitis — other sources of irritation. One of the first places to look is the nose. Chronic catarrh, sinus trouble, infected or swollen adenoids, or some other obstruction (including polyps) may be interfering with normal air currents of the nasal passages, and resulting in an irritating post-nasal drip, which keeps the pharynx inflamed. Inhaled septum (the partition between the nostrils) is a not unfrequent factor.

Or focal infections (tonsils, teeth, mouth or gums) can result in a toxic situation which inflames the pharynx.

Another common irritant is smoking. Some people are more sensitive to smoke than others. Sometimes you can investigate every possibility, without results, until the patient stops smoking — and the pharyngitis clears up. So — do you smoke?

Some obstruction which causes mouth breathing is another likely possibility. This dries the passages unduly, and the mucous membranes of the pharynx isn't supposed to be too dry, so it becomes irritated. A rarer possibility is Sjogren's disease, a general dryness of mucous surfaces. With this, however, there would be a paucity of tears as well as dryness of mouth and nose, too.

From the foregoing, you can readily see that just giving some sort of medication isn't a sure cure for pharyngitis. What is needed is very thorough diagnosis, to ascertain the true cause.

Your letter indicates that you hope some sort of anti-viral vaccine might be the answer. Forget it. Yes, there is much research on viral vaccines, (polio, measles, flue, varieties of the common cold, and others) but these are aimed at inducing the body to create its own protection against specific organisms. They do not protect, in shotgun fashion, against viruses in general.

Dear Dr. Molner: Will injection of 10 units of regular insulin once or twice a week impair the action of Lente insulin, which I take every day? Or would it harm my condition? — N. P.

No, the use of regular insulin along with Lente will not impair action of the latter, or harm you in any way.

Note to N. H. P: These stubborn cracks at the corner of the mouth can be due to lack of enough Vitamin B. Taking the whole B complex type of vitamin may help. Irritation from toothpaste or dentures could be involved, Or, do you smoke a pipe? That could irritate the skin, too.

Strictly Personal

Tourists Are Gullible Characters

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

While visiting New York last month, I went down to Greenwich Village to see some of the new off-Broadway plays. It was a Friday evening, and the streets were absolutely solid with humanity.

Thousands upon thousands of tourists descend upon the Village every day, and especially on the weekends to gawk at the "bohemian" life they have read and heard about But all they get to see is the surface.

The authentic denizens of the Village hole up during these invasions Most of them live quietly, in domestic arrangements not unlike those of other communities. The, bearded beatniks and their sandaled soul-mates are a minority even in that environment.

But the tourists trooped up and down the streets for hours, looking for something resembling a sideshow of freaks, for orgies and revels, addiction and perversity. They saw a few curious specimens-but these were mostly young people from Brooklyn or the Bronx, who had drifted down for an evening of make-believe dolce vita.

What the tourists glimpsed was an artificial and commercial facade, designed to attract suburbanites and out-of-towners, and bearing no more relation to real life in the Village than the Mardi Gras does to New Orleans.

I lived in the Village for some time, many years ago, and can testify from personal experience that it is a friendly and warm-hearted neighborhood, differing from others only in that it is tolerant to an almost fatuous degree and has no social caste. It is, indeed, almost the last citadel of laissez faire in this nation of professed individualism: where nobody cares who you are, where you came from, or what you are doing, as long as you don't bother anyone else.

Yet, the thousands of tourists rolling along like huge tidal waves across the sidewalks were busy constructing their own image of the Village, unaware that the fact and the fiction are worlds apart, and apparently unconscious of the fact that almost everyone else they encountered was also a tourist, disguised or otherwise.

When Hollywood was still in its prime, in its reigning era before television, one could see the same curious phenomenon on Hollywood Boulevard at night — thousands of sightseers bumping into each other and mistaking visitors from Kansas or New Jersey for film celebrities. The celebrities, of course, never set foot on Hollywood Boulevard — except once, in clay.

The entrepreneurs in the Village have created a fictitious neighborhood to fit the preconceptions of the public. Once word got out that the Village has a flourishing P.T.A. — as it has — business would go dead.

Letter to the Editor

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer

Re the advertisement placed by us in your newspaper recently soliciting support for negro freedom schools in Mississippi, I should like the opportunity, on behalf of my fellow candidates, to extend further our objective in raising this fund. As a result of the advertisement, I have received a few unsigned notes to the effect that Canadians should keep this nose out of U.S. affairs and concentrate on their own problems. This leads me to believe that the real facts may not be understood by many people.

Any situation which denies basic human rights to individuals on the basis of their color or race affects everyone living on this continent. We all are members of the great North American society, and who can feel safe in a society where people are beaten and killed for attempting to vote?

The position of the negro in the south compares in rigidity to the caste system of India.

The negroes involved in this struggle are helpless without aid from outside the particular area where they live. In many communities in Mississippi and Alabama, the public school system has been closed and private schools set up for white children only. The negro children now receive no education, except where financial support from outside these states, arranged by organizations like the Student Non-Violent Co-Ordinating Committee (SNCC), makes freedom schools possible.

The white power structure, in these states particularly, is such that the negro is successfully blocked from voting or receiving even a minimum education.

The following are the voting statistics for four counties in Alabama.

Dallas—white residents 25,052, registered white voters, 9,463, Negro residents, 32,627, registered Negro voters, 0.

Lounder—white residents, 2,967, registered Negro voters, 2,316, Negro residents 13,488, registered Negro voters, 0.

Ferry—white resident 5,943, registered white voters, 5,943, Negro residents, 11,415, registered Negro voters, 200.

Wilcox—white residents, 4,143, registered white voters, 2,074, Negro residents, 14,598, registered Negro voters, 0.

Of the last ten civil rights workers in Alabama, the people brought to trial for eight of them have been set free. The two most recent cases (Rev. James Reeb and Mrs. Louise Lazzo) have not yet been tried. These are facts which rarely reach the newspapers.

Of course we have our racial problems in Canada. Our Indians often find themselves victims of prejudice in white society, but to my knowledge no one in Canada is prevented from receiving education, or from voting, on the basis of color or race. All our native peoples may now exercise their voting privileges if they so wish and sometimes.

Today we live in a world in at least available to all Canadians.

Where we must necessarily think of ourselves as members of the family of all men. We cannot isolate ourselves even if we wished. We are particularly independent with our American neighbors. I do not think that Canadians can afford to allow their compassion and concern for human rights to stop at the border.

This is a great peaceful struggle for freedom, perhaps the greatest which we shall see in our time. The Negro people, having fewer advantages than any other group on this continent, economically, politically and financially, cannot carry this burden alone.

Many, many courageous people, mostly young people, black and white, are giving their time, energy and occasionally their lives to win this battle. If there is any way in which we can lend a hand, particularly in this time of crisis, and help the Negro to "overcome" his oppression ,it will be to the everlasting advantage of all ethnic and racial minorities in our two countries. Our free societies will then be fit examples to the world torn by racial strife.

Case for Plain English

Washington Star

A school teacher out in Orange, Calif. is spurring her advanced-reading students on to bigger vocabularies. She says them to invent more elaborate phrases for old sayings.

Thus, "Dead men tell no tales" becomes "Lifeless males of the human race communicate negative false truth." And the rococo version of "Nothing ventured, nothing gained" is "Avoidance of speculative enterprise precludes profit."

It's an imaginative approach. The only trouble is that here in Washington, we seem to have some graduates of that class who never got over the experience. Now they write government.

In the day's mail, for example, appears this sentence from a Congressional report: "An integrated theory of the determinants of the distribution of personal income has lagged behind our capacity to collect and process vast amounts of relevant, if not always the most relevant, data." Or, "We can't see the forest for the trees."

* * *

What would have happened if this sort of thing had been fashionable among the men who made the statements that get into history books? What would General McAuliffe have said at Bastogne or John Paul Jones aboard the Bonhomme Richard?

What those schoolkids need to do in California, when they get done enlarging their vocabularies, is to reverse the whole game. Let them practice making plain sentences out of fancy ones. That's a toilet every office can use.

* * *

The whole business reminds us of a cartoon a while back which showed a school official dealing with an urchin in his office. On the official's door was lettered the title, Life Adjustment Counselor. And the man is saying to the youngster:

"Listen, punk. Shape up or ship out."

The summary of a large number of industrial workers, shop and plant employees and residents in general, who underwent X-ray examination a few weeks ago can be taken as definite proof that the war against tuberculosis is being waged with a large degree of success here. The summary according to leading physicians, constitutes a health record of which the city might well be proud.

In short, of well over 2,000 persons of all classes who underwent the clinical examination, only one was found to be a victim of active tuberculosis and was forwarded to an institution for treatment.

Of the six people who represented small industries, hotels restaurants, shops and offices, there was not only one case of abdominal pulmonary tuberculosis, the activity of which was questionable.

Ed Murrow Dies Of Lung Cancer, Ill 18 Months

PAWLING, N.Y. (AP)—"This (pause) is London."

The voice was deep, resonant. Some compared it to a voice of doom.

Today, it is stilled. But the personal characteristics that were Edward R. Murrow's trademarks are recalled in his death — the high-domed, jowled, worried face, a cigarette dangling from his mouth.

Tributes from President Johnson and others poured in.

A funeral service will be held at 2 p.m. Friday at St. James Episcopal (Anglican) Church in New York City.

Murrow, who became internationally famous during the Second World War with his bitty broadcasts from London, died Tuesday at his farm after an 18-month battle with lung cancer. He turned 57 Sunday.

Budget Critics

would come before the Commons again.

Douglas Fisher, NDP deputy leader, charged the Senate's main task is to reward "bag men" (fund raisers) for the party in power and as a place for ministers and MPs the prime minister wants to "boot upstairs."

He said seven of nine senators appointed by Prime Minister Pearson were Liberal party fund-raisers or organizers while two were former MPs who were removed to make way for new ministers. Almost all senators appointed by Opposition Leader Diefenbaker when he was prime minister were also "party hacks and bagmen."

The government proposal would retire future senators at age 75 on an $8,000 annual pension. Present senators, appointed for life and currently paid $15,000 annually, would be free to stay on or retire.

Mr. Fisher said the "prize specimen" among Pearson appointees was Senator Louis Gelinas, chief Liberal fund raiser in Quebec and a figure in the Dorion Inquiry. Deputy into the Lucien Rivard narcotics case.

Senator Gelinas spoke "sheer nonsense" when he testified at the Dorion inquiry that he did not know Liberal organizer Guy Masson.

Mr. Fisher said testimony at the Dorion inquiry showed the dangers of the present method of appointing senators.

Wallace Nesbitt (PC — Oxford) said the government legislation does not go far enough in reforming the Senate. He suggested that the provinces be allowed to nominate some senators and that more cabinet members be drawn from the Senate.

Many More Patients Now Served By Hospital for Sick Children

TORONTO — Since the Hospital for Sick Children moved into its present structure on February 4, 1951, it has added considerably to its space with no appeal for public assistance. By last year it had admitted 26,603 patients, a 67% increase over 1951. One-third of these patients came mainly from Ontario outside the Metro Toronto area, but in terms of the severity of their conditions, and the medical-surgical skills required to treat them, they represented a proportion of the Hospital population far exceeding their numerical ratio.

In 1951 the average patient underwent four laboratory tests; last year this had risen to 15. In 1951 no open heart surgery was done; last year 450 such operations were performed, and this volume is increasing with wholly new surgical techniques developed in this hospital — and now being adopted universally. Much of the same pattern has occurred in neurosurgery (which handled 1,500 cases last year), and genito-urological surgery has quadrupled in ten years. In effect, a population explosion has been paralleled by an explosion in medical-surgical advances.

The hospital is now recognized as the world's leading centre for the treatment of, and research in, the acute diseases and injuries of children. Its research institute did not exist in 1951; it now has a staff of 203 and is engaged in a wide range of projects which provide constant new knowledge and methods for treatment services of the hospital.

One thing is significant: The hospital's doctors travel much, outlining their new methods, and doctors from 36 countries in the last year to study these. This indicates its stature, but to Canadians represents this important thing: These discoveries benefited Canadian children first, even though they were shared quickly with the world, irrespective of political, religious, or other factors Statistics? In 1964: Surgical operations, 17,083; heart examinations, 8,256; Emergency Department treatments, 46,782; X-rays taken, 30,197; laboratory tests, 394,726; clinics held, 1,100; daily admissions, 73.

In effect, the hospital has become a teaching centre, standing behind Ontario's excellent treatment hospitals. It is proud to fulfill that role.

SHAPING the EARTH

WILL OUR LAND BE SUBMERGED BY THE SEAS?

The earth is very slowly GETTING WARMER. With the increasing temperatures, the ocean waters are EXPANDING by 0.16° each year. This is exactly the amount required to MEASURE the five centimetres between melting in the Northern Hemisphere's and the ice forming in the South Pole, as well as show the current yearly increase in sea level of 0.04".

With the MELTING of glaciers in certain mountainous areas and the SEASONAL DISAPPEARANCE of ice in the North Pole, the sea level should be rising at a yearly rate of 0.79". But in the South Pole, the ICE IS INCREASING at such a rate that the sea level SHOULD decrease by 0.063" per year.

An era has begun in which the oceans are slowly ENCROACHING UPON the land.

SUPERSONIC TEST PILOT — Flt. Lt. Frank Gilland, a 42-year-old Centreville, N.B., native, climbs from the cockpit of a CF-104 after one of the many test flights in which he has logged more than 1,000 hours in the supersonic fighter-bomber. Testing the planes right off Canadair's assembly line near Montreal, he is the first Canadian to log 1,000 hours in a supersonic aircraft. (CP Photo)

RCAF Pilot Flying High --Sets Canadian Record

By WILLIAM NEVILLE

MONTREAL (CP)—A veteran RCAF test pilot has become the second North American to log 1,000 hours in a supersonic aircraft.

Flt. Lt. Frank Gilland reached the personal landmark after more than three years of test-flying CF-104s as they came off the assembly line at Canadair Limited's suburban Cartierville plant.

The mark was a new high for Canadian pilots and second only to Maj. George Estt of the U.S. Air Force who has logged close to 1,300 hours on the same CF-104 during its original production at Lockheed Corporation.

Flt. Lt. Gilland, who hopes to increase his log to 1,200 hours by the time the CF-104 program is completed late this summer, says "you'd think you might get bored after a while, but I don't find it boring at all.

"The CF-104 is a far superior bird to anything I've flown and I enjoy taking it up every time."

Since Canadair's 350-plane order began in 1961, the 42-year-old native of Centreville, N.B., has done nothing else but take the Starfighters up. He flies as many as three a day and logs up to 50 hours a week in testing.

Flt. Lt. Gilland thinks the heavy concentration of one pilot on a single airplane is a highly efficient test system.

HAS SEEN EVERYTHING

"I've got now that I've seen just about everything that can happen to the plane. I'm so familiar with the aircraft by now I can diagnose most problems right off the bat and give my report to the briefing team as soon as I step out of the plane."

Despite the fact the CF-104s already have been test-flown by Canadair pilots by the time they reach members of the RCAF "acceptance team" at the plant, Flt. Lt. Gilland says he gets "as many malfunctions as anyone."

Most of them concern the plane's complex electronics system. The most serious problem is a malfunctioning tail nozzle, which deprives the supersonic aircraft of 70 per cent of its thrust.

The average flight for the CF-104, produced as a strike-reconnaissance plane for Canada's European Air Division and as a straight fighter for other NATO countries, lasts from 90 minutes to two hours. From Cartierville airport, the planes are taken at an altitude of at least 30,000 feet along a special 100-mile corridor into northern Quebec, during which they reach a maximum speed of Mach 2—about 1,500 miles an hour.

Flt. Lt. Gilland, who lives in suburban St. Laurent with his wife and three children, re-enlisted in the RCAF in 1950 after a brief Second World War stint and subsequent attendance at the University of New Brunswick. Although he never took the normal test pilot's course, he got into this branch of flying in 1956 on assignment with the RAF in Britain.

He likes the job so much that he already is looking forward to tackling a new aircraft once the CF-104 job is done by September.

the United States was losing friends around the world because of its military operations against the Communists, he summed up his reaction in these words:

"We're resisting aggression, and as long as the aggressors attack we'll stay there and resist them whether we make friends or lose friends."

But actually, he said, the U.S. has many friends throughout the world, and he argued that many other governments understand what the U.S. is trying to accomplish in the defence of South Viet Nam.

He asserted that a successful communist conquest would threaten all free nations and would endanger the freedom of the U.S. itself.

ither case, it's not Ottawa's money going into the private sector of the economy directly. These aren't the only so-called "non-budgetary" items in Ottawa's financial operations. There are contributions to and benefits from the unemployment insurance account, the prairie farm assistance account, and the operations of the post office.

The national economic accounting system of recording federal government operations as they affect the economy directly is really devised many years ago. It was the subject of a major submission to the royal commission on Canada's economic prospects in the mid-fifties. That commission was headed by Walter Gordon, Toronto chartered accountant, who now is the minister of finance.

Parliament At a Glance

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

TUESDAY, April 27, 1965

The Commons gave first reading to a bill that would set 75 as a retirement age for senators.

First reading was given without a formal vote, some members saying "no division" to record their opposition.

Future senators would retire on an $8,000 annual pension under the bill; present senators, appointed for life, could either stay or retire.

Douglas Fisher (NDP—Port Arthur) said present use of the Senate is as a reward for party fund-raisers.

Wallace Nesbitt (PC—Oxford) said provinces should be allowed to nominate some senators.

Paul Martineau (PC—Pontiac-Temiscamingue) said a committee should be established to recommend Senate reforms.

The government introduced a resolution seeking increased lending authority under the National Housing Act.

The money would be advanced for urban renewal, low - rental and university housing projects.

WEDNESDAY, April 28

The Commons sits at 2:30 p.m. EDT to start the budget debate. The Senate stands adjourned until May 4.

Tweed Veneers Put Into Profit Position by Govt.

TORONTO (CP)—Three Ontario success stories illustrating how ambitious firms took advantage of government aid to achieve business prosperity were given to the legislature Tuesday.

Stanley Randall, minister of economics and development, said the tales revolve around the work of the Ontario development agency, under his department. The agency provides loan guarantees to needy businesses which show chances of succeeding.

Mr. Randall told how Leigh Instruments of Carleton Place, near Ottawa, was on the verge of moving to the United States because it was unable to raise money to produce a unique automatic beacon for guiding rescuers to downed aircraft.

In 1963, the agency guaranteed Leigh Instruments a credit line, and the firm immediately began to show a profit.

"Its sales now approach $1,000,000 annually, of which a substantial proportion is in exports of a Canadian - designed invention," Mr. Randall said. Employment had increased to 85 from 25.

CITES VENEER PLANT

Another success story involved Tweed Veneers, a plant producing maple veneers in the small town of Tweed.

"The owner attempted to obtain funds from the conventional lending institutions and was turned down," the minister said.

"He then approached the Ontario Development Association and was recommended for a guaranteed loan. The company commenced operations in the early part of 1964 and quickly moved into a profit position."

It employs 40 persons, buys maple from eastern Ontario farmers providing them with winter employment — and is booked to capacity with U.S. orders for 1965.

COULDN'T GET CAPITAL

Thompson - Hayland Lumber Ltd. of Burks Falls, which operates a sawmill and furniture wood processing plant, was anxious to enter the U.S. market but couldn't obtain capital to expand. Last year, the agency gave the company a loan guarantee.

"Since receiving the guarantee, the company has increased its work force to 80 from 60. Additional exports to the United States last year amounted to $125,000.

In 1965, the company anticipates that a further 30 persons will be added to its payroll and its exports to the United States will be doubled."

The agency has guaranteed loans to 40 companies, of which seven have failed.

TO DISCUSS RIGHTS

TORONTO (CP) — Premier Lesage said Tuesday he will meet Prime Minister Pearson some time before May 31 to discuss Quebec's foreign treaty rights. A formal federal - provincial conference is scheduled for May 31 in Ottawa.

MR. AND MRS. GLEN GRAY POST

Post – Purvis

FRANKFORD — A double-ring ceremony was solemnized in Frankford Full Gospel Tabernacle on candle-light on Saturday evening, April 17th, when Rev. Fred Spring united in marriage Sandra Faye, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Purvis of R. R. 2 Belleville, and Glen Gray Post, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Post of R. R. 1 Enterprise.

The church was decorated with standards of pink gladioli and white mums at the altar and Easter lilies flanked with candles on the side windows.

Traditional wedding music was played by Miss Beverly Wannamaker who accompanied the soloist, Mr. Willard Whitman.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length bridal gown of satin-faced peau de soi with fitted bodice, scoop neckline coming to a "V" in back, trimmed with appliqué of Alencon lace studded with seed pearls.

The bouffant skirt featured a smooth front with pleated cascades and finished with self bows. She wore a shoulder-length tiered hand-rolled tulle veil, which flowed from a single fabric rose with petals. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink Sensation roses.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Joanne English of Sudbury, sister of the bride, gowned in blue nylon taffeta with tulle over top and fitted lace jacket with full sleeves with matching veil and shoes, and carried a cascade of tinted blue chrysanthemums.

Groomsman was Mr. Larry Hannah of Oshawa, and the usher was Mr. Gerald Wagar, Frankford.

The reception was held in the Balmoral Room of the Glenburnie Motel where the bride's mother received the guests wearing a two-piece shantung beige dress with tan accessories and a corsage of deep pink roses. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother wearing a two-piece silk turquoise dress ensemble with white hat and black accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

For the honeymoon trip to Niagara Falls, the U.S.A. and through the Appalachian Range, the bride chose as her travelling costume a pink bouclane dress with three-quarter length matching coat, pink hat and navy accessories and a corsage of white feathered carnations.

Out-of-town guests were present from Sudbury, Oshawa, Belleville, Madoc, Peterborough and Eldorado.

Previous to her marriage, the bride was honored at a linen shower given by Mrs. Charlie Wright, with co-hostess Miss Beverly Wannamaker. The office employees of Stewart Warner in Belleville, where the bride is employed, held a miscellaneous shower at the home of Mrs. Shirley Ewing, in Belleville. The couple were presented with a mix master. The Madoc Township School where the bridegroom is a member of the staff, presented the couple with an electric clock and towel set.

Mr. and Mrs. Post will reside in Madoc.

Reds Reverse Shopping Order
First: Pay Your Money Second: Take Your Pick

Lineups are an inevitable aspect of shopping in Soviet state stores. Joan Best, who has lived in Moscow for almost a year as wife of Canadian Press correspondent John Best, describes the time-consuming routine.

By JOAN BEST

MOSCOW (CP)—Shopping in Soviet state stores, you quickly become familiar with an important five-letter word—kassa, or cash wicket.

You have to visit the little woman at the kassa every time you make a purchase.

After a while you begin to accept the lineups with reasonable equilibrium.

Having decided what to buy the customer must pay the required amount to the cashier and get a receipt ticket.

The shopper then takes the ticket to the correct counter and gets from the clerk the article for which he has paid. Almost invariably, there is a lineup here too.

If the purchase is sold by weight you may have to return to the cashier to pay more money. If your purchases are from different counters you must obtain individual tickets.

In the bread stores, you can choose from a variety of black and white breads. Sometimes you can buy doughnut-shaped rings of white bread covered with poppy seeds, or large white buns.

VANISH FOR SIX MONTHS

Often a raisin loaf covered with a peanut mixture and small raisin buns with thin icing on top are on sale.

In the fruit and vegetable stores the offering of fresh items is seasonal. Last June I could buy oranges at the equivalent of $1.68 a kilogram—five or six oranges, depending on size—but from July to December I didn't see an orange for sale in any store.

During the fine weather, cases of fruits or vegetables are piled near a small stall or table outside the store. There a clerk serves the public.

Watermelons are stacked up in large metal cages standing on the sidewalk, and sold from there. When the clerk is off duty the cage is locked.

The only freezer units I've seen in the stores are small chest types assigned to women selling ice cream.

Recently I've seen frozen plums and tomatoes for sale in bulk.

I got an unsealed box of mixed vegetables to try—egg plants, green peppers, green beans, peas, and tomatoes grown in Bulgaria. I used the vegetables to make soup.

BUTTER IS GRADED

They have a fish tank at our local meat store. Having paid at the kassa, customers leave the store with fresh flipping fish.

We also have a local store that specializes in partially prepared foods. You can buy stuffed beets or peppers, pieces of chicken or meat with a potato or cracker coating, cooked chickens and salads.

At our local dairy store there is margarine butter in packages but to be sure it's fresh you can also buy in bulk. They usually have three different slabs of butter—first grade at $4.32 a kilo or $1.95 a pound; another at $4.20 a kilo; and a third type, chocolate butter, at about $4.05.

I've watched the clerks prepare a new slab for sale. The slab is about a two-foot cube. A long knife is used to skim a thin layer off the cube. Then two girls, using wire, cut the cube down and across in several layers.

The clerk uses a long knife to cut off the required amounts for customers.

In the state stores, unlike the market place, you receive image of your purchases wrapped or in paper bags. Dairy and meat products are wrapped.

BONES REMOVED

Last summer and fall I ordered meat from G.U.M., Moscow's largest department store, and it was delivered to our apartment.

We received pork chops without bones; good in casseroles—40 cents each.

Beefsteaks are squares of meat without bone or fat—45 cents each.

Spring chickens arrived with the heads and feet intact and only partly drawn. The price averaged about $2.50.

Sliced ham at $4.40 a kilo was expensive but of excellent quality. Beef with bone cost $2.40 a kilo.

VAN BLARICOM LAKE

One of the nice things about writing a column is that people are so responsive.

For instance some months ago there was a story about Mr. Reel W. Van Blaricom, M.A., LL.B., Q.C., of Kelowna, B.C., formerly of Sidney Township. This brought a call from the museum where a good deal of information had been collected about the family.

Originally the family had come from Blaricom which is a beautiful small city about 25 miles from Amsterdam. It is the home of artists and artisans, and many professional and business men in Amsterdam live there, commuting daily. In the middle ages and later Blaricom was the great horse market of the country.

Mr. Van Blaricom's grandfather was born near the White Chapel near Picton, and his father was born near Demorestville. In 1906 Mr. Van Blaricom taught school at Muscleow, near Bancroft where he received $400 a year, and paid $10 a month board.

The Van Blaricom family were U.E. Loyalists, and the museum has a whole file of correspondence and maps pertaining to the early history of the family.

But what concerned me in the column I wrote was that a lake had been named for Earl Van Blaricom in Saskatchewan. People have to merit such an honor, and I was interested to know why this man was so honored. This information is not in the file.

I know he retired in 1907 from a law practice with the firm of Van Blaricom, Woodard and Aseltine in Tisdale, Saskatchewan, and moved to Kelowna where I understand his married daughter lives. So if any former friends from Sidney know why he had a lake named for him, I would be pleased to hear from them.

SPILLED MILK

Last week our editor wrote an exceedingly sacrilic editorial about the hazards of milk, so I am just going to add some of my own frivolous commenss.

In the village where I spent some of my early years there was no dairy and no milk delivery. We used to get milk from a neighbor who kept a cow. Every evening it was my responsibility to take a pail with a lid on it and bring home the milk.

Sometimes the elderly lady who owned the cow was just in the act of milking when I arrived, and I would go to the barn and watch. The cow was a pawky little Jersey and a great pet. She would whisk her tail around to brush off the flies, flicking it full into the milker's face who would give an angry yelp.

The milk went swish, swish into the pail, sounding like a drum beat at first in the hollow pail, and then a whisper as the pail filled.

The milk was strained through a fine mesh which caught all the hairs, bits of straw and sometimes a few flies.

But this was not the milk for us. Ours was the morning milk which had been placed in round shallow pans to cool, covered with a tea towel.

A thick scum of Jersey cream lay on top, and before dipping in her cup to measure it out, the old lady blew on it to push back the cream.

Shades of Louis Pasteur!

Pasteurization hadn't been heard of in our village, and no one worried about germs in the milk as far as I know, least of all us children.

So how is it that now when we can buy milk pasteurized, homogenized, sterilized, skimmed, whole or goodness knows what, it never tastes as good as that milk did?

I hope no one got caught in the change to Daylight Saving Time this year. It always seems to confuse a number of people. Perhaps the following rule might help: Spring ahead, fall behind.

200 Attend Hi-C Group Variety Show

RAWDON — Last Friday evening Mount Pleasant-Rawdon Church hall had a capacity audience of over 200 persons for the Rawdon circuit variety show. An auction lily was used for decoration, a gift of the Stirling Horticultural Society.

Rev. W. G. Fletcher was master of ceremonies for the varied program of music and singing. The opening number was a series of bagpipe selections by George Morgan who is a teacher on the staff of the Stirling and Rawdon District High School. A bit of originality was introduced into the opening number.

Vocal duets were given by Janice and Alicia Clancy of Wellman's with their mother, Mrs. Gerald Clancy as accompanist. Sharron Mathews contributed piano solos and Billy Cronkwright entertained with accordion music.

The Wellman's ladies' quartet of Verna Clancy, Jean Pollock, Lucille Beckett and Ruby Tompkins with Betty Watson as accompanist gave two selections. Mrs. Harry Brown of Carmel delighted with novelty numbers on a toy piano.

Miss Mary Dracup gave a vocal solo and Miss Jane Doran of Stirling contributed a piano duet. Peter Bateman and Peggy MacKenzie of Campbellford contributed a piano duet. Miss Linda Walker of Burnbrae gave two vocal selections with Mrs. Harold Elliott, R.M.T., as accompanist. Jimmy and Irene Griffiths rendered accordion selections. Miss Cathy Burnside of Madoc contributed two vocal selections with Mrs. C. Watson as accompanist.

A singsong of old favorites followed, conducted by Mr. and Mrs. Craig Watson of Wellman's.

ACCORDIONETTES FEATURED

The Campbellford accordionettes under the direction of Mr. Fred Tredree, delighted with several selections. Members of the group were: David Larcombe, Dianne Cahill, Jim Griffiths, Eileen Griffiths, Irene Kozobucki, Julie Kozobucki, Pete Brown, Billie Cronkwright and Kenneth Couch.

A humorous selection followed with Lyle Couch as narrator and Mary Dracup, Nancy Tompkins and Bonnie Dracup as soloists. David Larcombe and Joan Preston gave a combined accordion solo and duet.

The St. Paul's, Stirling, male quartet of Messrs. Harry Brown, Grant Richardson, Jack Bonk and Ralph Johnson with Mrs. Harry Brown as accompanist rendered two selections.

The large audience was generous with applause for all of the numbers given by local and visiting artists. Special guests in attendance were Rev. R. R. Bonsteel, Mrs. Bonsteel and children of Bronte United Church at Oakville. In 1952 when Rev. Bonsteel was pastor of Rawdon circuit he organized Rawdon Young People's Union which comprised a group from the three appointments. In December 1964 this Y.P.U. group re-organized with a new name, the Rawdon Hi-Cs.

Lyle Couch, president of the Rawdon Hi-C's voiced thanks to those who had provided the program; also to all who were in attendance and the ladies of the circuit who had provided food.

A group of young people served sandwiches, pie and coffee and all enjoyed a social half hour.

The financial part of this venture was most gratifying.

SUEDEISH SHEEN

My Friends: If you have leather furniture in your home or office, you can consider this your lucky day, for the following letter from Stella Lis contains a terrific idea on how to give those leather pieces a whole new dimension in loveliness; it's really the greatest!

Dear Susanna: A marvelous way to clean leather upholstery is to wipe off the dirt and dust with a damp cloth that has been dipped into a well beaten egg white. After the leather dries, rub it with a clean dry cloth. This will leave the furniture with an absolutely beautiful satin - sheen finish yet there is no oily or waxy substance on the surface. — Stella Lis

When applying this procedure to black or dark-colored leather, use sparingly so as not to leave any little white streaks; or, if you think the sheen is a little glossy, just wipe over lightly with a clean damp cloth . . . and another thing, this same egg treatment will help to smooth out any ripply leather on the seat cushions.

HA! If egg white does this much for leather, no wonder it helps to give our faces such a lift when we apply it as a mask!

— SUSANNA

Dear Susanna: My favorite method for removing grease spots from clothing is to rub the mark with chalk and leave for a while. Brush off the chalk and rub over lightly with spot remover. — "A Reader"

GUEST SPEAKER, Miss Helen Sylvas, centre, Toronto Metropolitan Girl Guide Director, chats with Guide Mary Madden, Napanee, Land Ranger Jane Megill, Ottawa, Sea Ranger Barbara Ross, Ottawa, and Helene Belnir, Napanee, formerly of Belleville at Gold Cord dinner held at St. Thomas' Parish Hall, Saturday. Over 50 Girl Guides from Eastern Ontario qualified to be presented with Gold Cord certificates by Mrs. H. Lount, Deputy Provincial Commissioner.

Belleville Girl Guide Gold Cord Winner

A Belleville girl shared honors with Eastern Ontario Gold Cord Girl Guides receiving provincial recognition at a dinner held at the St. Thomas Anglican Church Parish Hall recently.

Kathleen Mandley, Bertram Blvd., and 56 Guides from the Quinte, St. Lawrence and Ottawa Areas qualified to be presented with Gold Cord certificates by Mrs. H. Lount, Deputy Provincial Commissioner; all of whom had been awarded Gold Cords at ceremonies in their respective Companies.

Truth is the weapon with which the coming generation will be able to meet and overcome today's growing problem: the decline of moral standards, Miss Helen Sylvas, Toronto Metropolitan Director, told the gathering.

MORALLY RIGHT

She appealed to the girls to be stimulated in the face of danger, to have a passion for work, and love of country to transcend all national boundaries. To the Gold Cord Guides freedom should be a test and they should welcome a proving grounds. Miss Sylvas advised it is better to be morally right than socially correct; but above all be true to yourself.

A Girl Guide choir representing a cross section of Belleville Companies sang during the ceremony with the three local girls who received their Gold Cord certificates in Ottawa last year; Cathy Cook, Holly McMurray and Lynn Neill assisting with the presentations.

The guests were welcomed at the head table, introduced by Mrs. A. M. Haig, Quinte Area Commissioner, who aided by Mrs. T. R. Colden, and Mrs. W. L. Horwood, convened the dinner.

GUEST SPEAKER

Mrs. J. E. Currah, St. Lawrence Area Commissioner, introduced the speaker, who was thanked by Mrs. J. G. Falcaeau, Ottawa Area Commissioner.

The dinner provided girls selected for the Ontario adventure trip to Great Britain, an opportunity to meet each other and Mrs. W. A. Hutchison, Kingston Division Commissioner, who will be travelling with them. They also met Mrs. R. D. Arnott, Quinte Area International adviser.

Belleville merchants donated favors for guests in uniform, and each Gold Cord Guide was given a beach bag, containing several items.

GOLD CORD WINNERS

Gold Cord Guides from the Quinte area were: Kathleen Mandley, Belleville; Judy Sharpe, Picton; Penny Hollingbury, Picton Heights; Helene Belair and Mary Madden, Napanee; Sally Adams, Ann Thompson, Ann Moorhouse, and Sharon Reiten, Peterborough.

The Experts Say

Firecrackers Leave Wake Of Damage and Injury

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP) — Almost every Firecracker Day leaves in its wake a scattering of barn fires and occasionally death. Few accidents are caused by anything more than careless ness or misguided pranks.

A list of mishaps compiled one year by the Ontario Safety League included a $250,000 fire in a rail shed which came within inches of touching off a boxcar load of dynamite. Firecrackers had been stuffed around the door of the shed.

A four-year-old boy died of burns after firecracker powder saturated his clothes. Another four-year-old lost an eye because an older child took a hand-grip off a bicycle, stuffed firecrackers in it and set it off, a fragment of the grip lodging in the lad's eye.

Canadians set off an estimated 250,000,000 firecrackers a year, mostly on Victoria Day (May 24 this year) though Hallowe'en is a popular time in British Columbia and Guy Fawkes' Day (Nov. 5) the occasion in Newfoundland.

LAWS VARY

Regulations of sale and use vary from community to community for, although they are classified as explosives under the Canada Explosives Act, there is no provincial legislation governing sale.

Some municipalities have by-laws which do that, though they are difficult to enforce. If you want to have a family or neighborhood fireworks display for Victoria Day, check with your police or fire department for local regulations.

Then there are some precautions that will help assure that the chorus of oohs and aahs won't turn to tears.

Whether you mean to or not, you will probably attract every child in the area when you start. You really should be stern about keeping them outside a designated area around your launch pad. And young children, especially, should not be allowed to help set off fireworks.

Keep a bucket of water handy, because many of the annual injuries are caused by fireworks that appear to be dead. If a firework does not explode, soak it thoroughly in water before anyone touches it.

SPARKLERS BURN HOT

No fireworks except sparklers are meant to be held in the hand after they're lighted. Even the sparkler burns at about 1800 degrees and can start a fire if it is thrown away carelessly.

Your firing area must be clear of overhead obstructions—trees, wires, rooftops.

While you are planning, read the instructions on every piece, crackers to rockets, and decide the order in which you will fire them.

Use a bucket or box of sand or a wheelbarrow full of earth as your firing base. Or dig holes in the ground deep enough to bury fireworks half way up the barrel, and stamp the ground firmly around each piece before firing.

Every long piece such as a roman candle should be buried at least halfway and set at a 10-degree angle away from your spectators.

Have a container, such as a metal garbage can, nearby to dispose of used fireworks, and sprinkle them with water when they display is over.

A glowing cigarette makes a comparatively safe lighter. Hold it at arms length, apply it to the wick and stand clear immediately.

If you do allow your children to have small firecrackers, teach them how to use them and not to experiment with them. Under no circumstances should they take the powder out of a firecracker. It is dangerous and is a punishable offence.

U.C.W. Meeting

SCOTT'S U.C.W.

SCOTT'S — Thirteen members of Scott's U.C.W. met at the home of the president Mrs. Cameron Sine, Thursday evening. Mrs. Edison Sine conducted the worship service, assisted by Mrs. Ross Dafoe, and Mrs. Earl Dafoe.

Mrs. Greenville Sine gave a short Bible study and quiz taking in some of the events surrounding the later years of Jesus' life.

Mrs. Morley Sine as program convener spoke on the events leading up to the crucifixion and Resurrection and proclaimed the Easter message which is Christ's invitation to have a share in the Resurrection.

The task of the Christian church is real and urgent. Now is the time for renewal for a good hard look as to where one is heading before it is too late.

Mrs. C. Sine presented the business portion of the meeting. There will be a conference at Queen's University June 18-20 sponsored by the Board of Women of the United Church where Dr. Georgie Harkness and Mrs. Fowler will be guest speakers.

The ladies will cater to a wedding in May. The hostess served lunch.

Fussy Housekeeper Seen As Making Poor Mother

DEAR DORIS — I'm not a social worker, nor do I have the ability to be one. Yet somehow I feel your answer to Mother Mimsie is incomplete.

To stop the three-year-old boy from biting and kicking one should find out first what causes this behavior. Could it be because the older children tease or pick on him? Could it be because his parents are too strict? Little boys that age have no way to defend themselves so they rebel by biting and kicking.

DORIS CLARE

If the atmosphere in his environment remains constantly hot, it will cause more harm to his personality than the frequent moving.

I had this problem when mine was that age until I read a book on this subject. First, I had to change my personality and that wasn't easy. There had to be less scolding, demanding, boosing of the little one. Somehow I think I expected more from the child than he was capable of.

With children around I had to learn to accept toys all over, crumbs on the floor, sticky chairs, etc., etc. I believe a fussy housekeeper makes a poor mother.

Nursery school is not always the answer. See here, Doris. If the child goes to nursery at three, to kindergarten at five and to public school at six, then high school and university, when are we going to have our children at home? Why not keep them home and enjoy them when they are young? — P.B.

DEAR P.B. — Your suggestion that a fussy housekeeper makes a poor mother has some truth in it.

But about nursery schools! Such pre-school schools may not be the answer for all children, but we have plenty of evidence to show that most homes and mothers are not challenging their children enough or early enough. Graduates of these schools are out-going, interested and far readier for regular school than other children.

Another thing. Would you keep a child at home merely for the purpose of enjoying him?

DEAR DORIS — I am 25 and overweight. Exercise is helping my figure but if I keep filling my face with fattening stuff the pounds will never come off.

I have tried many diets but I was always hungry and I found that you can't cut sugar out completely. I don't get sick, but I crave sugar. Do you know of a diet that is safe and can be followed without starving oneself? — SWEETY.

DEAR SWEETY — I've got a sweet tooth too. There are some sugar substitutes which fill the bill for many of us sugar-lovers. Also, I'm sending you a very good diet which stresses the protective foods.

And here are some tips:

1. Eat slowly.
2. Stop eating before you feel full.
3. Between meals take carrot strips, or an apple.
4. Make fresh fruit the usual dessert.
5. Get to know the calorie content of foods.
6. Avoid large helpings, second helpings; avoid eating to be polite or to make up for a disappointment.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — Is it true that a person who lives alone and shows declining mentality, though denying such is the case, cannot be put where needed personal care can be given without said person's agreement in writing?

I'd like to save my family what suffering is endured by such a burden in such cases as these. What does a person do to avoid this? Apparently a doctor's advice is not enough. — L.S.

DEAR L.S. — Unless the elderly person is declared mentally incompetent by two doctors, he still has the say as to where he shall live. What you need is a good social worker to handle the case and help the older person to see the advantages of a set-up where he can get the care he needs. I wouldn't suggest any such thing be done by force, even if you could manage it.

* * *

Confidential to UNHAPPY — Try making some friends in your own church. I agree that some prejudices are unfair, but at 12 years of age you'll just have to go along with what's allowed.

OIL SLAKES KILL FISH

Ann Landers

Sex Education Is Either Too Scant or Wrong Kind

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Why are teen-agers (almost without exception) obsessed with the desire to know all there is to know about sex?

My husband and I are not prudes nor do we believe that silence and secrecy should surround this topic. But we do feel that entirely too much emphasis has been placed on sex talk. Is it healthy to give teen-agers so much information so soon?

Although we are Canadian parents we feel this problem exists in the U.S. as well. Thank you. — MR. AND MRS. J.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR MR. AND MRS. J. — Sex is equated with love in the movies, on TV and in novels. Everyone wants to be loved, and kids get onto the idea that sex is love.

I do not believe teen-agers today are more interested in sex than we were 30 years ago but they are certainly less self-conscious about it.

Nor do I believe the teens' insistence on knowing all about sex as unhealthy. They should know about it. They should know that sex belongs in marriage. They should know that when it is employed as entertainment it can be dangerous and destructive. I have never heard of a teen-ager getting into trouble because he had too much information, but a great many teen-agers have met with disaster because they had either too little information — or the wrong kind.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — A friend of mine lives on the other side of town. We speak on the telephone almost every day. I have more time than she does so I usually call her.

Several times in the last few months she has said to me, "I have to get off the phone now because I am expecting an important call." This is irritating. In fact I think it's an insult. What do you think? — SLAPPED AT A DISTANCE.

DEAR SLAPPED — Before I can give you an opinion I'd have to know some details, such as: When does your friend say she must get off the phone — after two minutes, after ten minutes, or after 55 minutes?

Some people are trapped by long-winded phone pests and in an effort to shake loose, they will say almost anything.

Since you have more free time than your friend, why not let her call you when she finds it convenient?

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Before I met my wife she was engaged to someone else. The engagement was off long before I came along so I had nothing to do with it. I think they knew each other pretty well, if you get what I mean.

My wife and I have been married several years and I have no reason to doubt that she loves me. She has been 100% loyal and true.

Every few months we run into her former boy friend — usually at a wedding, or a funeral. My wife always greets this man in a friendly manner. Sometimes they exchange a few sentences.

It burns me up to see them act like casual acquaintances when a great many people know what went on between them. I think she should not speak to him at all. I get so mad when they put on this innocent act that sometimes I won't talk to her for two days. Do you think I am wrong? — AGAINST PHONY ACTS.

DEAR AGAINST — You're not only wrong, but you're childish and maybe a little bit nutty, too.

It would be unnatural for these two not to speak at all. In fact, it would appear to those who knew them that something was still cooking.

You should be pleased that they behave in a civilized manner. Now why don't you?

BEST BANANA CREAM PIE

There is never a monotonous moment here. Perennial arguments rumble on about which kind of pie is best. One of my sisters and Herbie and I claim Lemon Meringue Pie (mine!) is divine. Eleanor and Pete and Rod claim Banana Cream Pie beats all. Bruce wants open apple, David wants cherry.

So since Lemon Meringue Pie gets lots of attention here, Banana Cream Pie is getting another opportunity to shine — rich, smooth and perfect.

BANANA CREAM PIE:

¼ cup sugar, 1/3 teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons cornstarch, ⅛ tablespoon flour, 2¼ cups milk, 3 large or 4 medium eggs, yolks and whites separated, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 3 ripe medium-size bananas, ¼ teaspoon cream of tartar, ½ cup sugar (second amount), one 9" baked pie shell.

In a heavy saucepan (not a double boiler) mix together thoroughly the sugar, salt, cornstarch and flour. Stir in slowly the milk until mixture is perfectly smooth. Now cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until thick and boiling. Pour a little over the beaten egg yolks, stirring quickly, then return the yolk mixture to filling in saucepan and stir over medium heat for 1 minute. Remove from heat and stir in butter and vanilla.

Let filling stand while you slice 3 medium-sized ripe bananas into a 9" baked pie shell. (Note: It does not make any difference if baked shell is hot or cold.)

Pour filling at once over sliced bananas (to prevent discoloring), giving the pie plate a little shake to coax the filling to flow between banana slices.

Cover with Meringue made by beating the leftover 3 or 4 egg whites until foamy with the cream of tartar, then slowly adding, while constantly beating, the second ¼-cup granulated sugar, until whites stand in stiff peaks. Spoon over hot filling, sealing meringue to pie crust edges and making attractive peaks and edging. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. until meringue is tinged all over with gold. Cool at least 2 hours before cutting and serving.

NOTE:

If desired, meringue may be omitted and whipped cream may be served over top of cold filling, garnished with slices of bananas which have been dipped in lemon juice to prevent discoloring. If you choose to top Banana Cream Pie with whipped cream you will have 3 or 4 egg whites leftover. Store them in small covered jar in refrigerator. Next week I am giving you a recipe for macaroons in which you can use them.

Bringing Up Baby

HINTS COLLECTED BY MRS. DAN GERBER, MOTHER OF 5

Sometimes new mothers concentrate so hard on the technicalities of baby care they forget to enjoy their babies. Your delight in your baby is one of the great golden gifts you can give. The baby who is talked to (and laughed with) lovingly, develops security and sociability. The baby who is played with happily gains confidence early and learns invaluable lessons in co-operation.

Sipping-time specials. The five delicious Gerber Juices, of course! I know you mothers usually think in terms of orange juice for baby's vitamin C. And Gerber Orange Juice is an excellent natural source of this vitamin. But isn't it reassuring to know that Gerber Apple Juice and all the juice combinations have vitamin C added, to give your baby the same amount of this important vitamin as Gerber Orange Juice. The refreshing list of mild, pleasing flavours also includes Orange-Apple, Orange-Banana and Orange-Pineapple Drink—a delectable variety for baby to enjoy at "sipping-time."

Golden rules for baby care. Book rules are fine as guides but all rules do not fit all babies and any rule is only as good as its flexibility. Guides to good mothering: heed your doctor and your common sense and let your heart take the lead. Happy is the baby whose mother makes adjustments for his (or her) individuality.

Growth patterns. Your baby grows much faster the first year than the next few put together. That's why he needs protein a-plenty to help that growth along! The good Gerber Strained Meats are excellent dietary sources of protein, low in fat, ever so easy to digest. Points to remember:

- Gerber Meats are cooked by an exclusive process which preserves the utmost in nutritive values; insures a smooth moist texture.
- They now come in new sloped-shoulder glass jars for easy spooning and convenient refrigeration of unused portions. Gerber Baby Foods, Niagara Falls, Canada.

Pastor Thinks Viet Nam Story Not Being Told

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (Special) — An American pastor serving the International Church in Saigon believes that the American press is failing to give an adequate picture of the Vietnamese civilians' role in the current war.

The Rev. Gordon Cathey, formerly pastor of The Christian and Missionary Alliance Church in White Plains, in a letter to friends here, said the plight of the average Vietnamese is not being conveyed to the American public.

This lack of information, he thinks, is preventing Americans from understanding the nature of the war and the very real struggles of the citizens of Viet Nam.

"Are Americans told of the valiant battle being fought by the Vietnamese in every walk of life?" he asked. "Are we succumbing to the communist propaganda that this, after all, is America's war, an act of aggression?"

"No one should forget that hundreds of Vietnamese die every week in this war, some of them women and children massacred by the communists," he wrote. "It seems to me that the American press could contribute immeasurably to the cause of freedom and at the same time fulfill what I believe to be its responsibility if all that is to tell the whole story."

Frankford

FRANKFORD — The Frankford Free Methodist Church held a successful Missionary convention over the Easter weekend.

On Friday evening, it was Young Peoples night with speaker, Rev. Merlin Bidwell, missionary to the Philippine Island. His son from Greenville College was soloist. Rev. Bidwell showed slides concerning the mission work there. One interesting experience he related was visiting a chief of one of the native tribes who had been converted from a head-hunter to a genuine born-again Christian.

On Saturday evening, a group met at the Pine's Motel for a banquet with Rev. and Mrs. W. J. Parmerter from North Olile as guests. Following the banquet, there was a service in the Church where Rev. Parmerter showed slides of Rwanda and Burundi in Central Africa, illustrating the work of the missionaries in this area.

SPEAKS TO CHILDREN

On Sunday morning Miss Smiley Reg. N., missionary nurse to the Dominican Republic spoke to the children, and gave the morning message.

On Sunday evening, Miss Smiley showed slides of the missionary work in the Dominicon.

Each service had special numbers in song by one or more of these groups, young people's, choir, men's quartet, ladies' trio, duets and solos.

The convention was successful both financially, as the goal of $300. was met, and spiritually, as each one in attendance felt a desire to be more interested in others.

Army's Navaid

Neither Fog Nor Dark of Night...

By DAVE McINTOSH

SOEST, West Germany (CP) Tanks and armored scout cars of the 4th Canadian Infantry Brigade now can manoeuvre over foreign terrain in fog or total darkness.

The reason is "Navaid," a revolutionary navigational system designed and developed by the Canadian Army equipment and engineering establishment Ottawa.

Lt.-Col. A. C. Smart, 44, of Ottawa designed several of the major parts of the system starting in 1957 and was in charge of the development.

"Its unique aspect is an automatic plotter which gives the position of the vehicle and its direction of travel," the signals officer said in an interview.

"This is shown on a standard map by a lighted arrow which changes direction every time the vehicle does."

GREATER FREEDOM

The army says Navaid has greatly increased the deployment of tanks and other vehicles in night operations and day exercises held in poor visibility.

In the past, ground forces have navigated by reference to landmarks, which can be pretty scarce in Arctic or desert terrain. They thus have been severely hampered at night or in conditions of fog or smoke.

The new system comprises four major components: an electrical gyro-compass which seeks true north; a computer which translates signals from the gyro-compass into heading and position; a receiver which shows the heading and gives the driver a map reference of his position; and the automatic plotter.

All components are made in Canada with the exception of the gyro-compass, which comes from the United States.

Britain and the U.S. are both expected to adopt the system.

"One of the main advantages of Navaid is that it requires no training to operate it," Col. Smart said. "Any soldier can run it."

HELPS TANKS IN DARKNESS — A soldier demonstrates Navaid, a device developed by the Canadian army which permits tanks and armored scout cars to find their way over foreign terrain in fog or darkness. It involves an automatic plotter which gives the position of the vehicle on a map and indicates its direction of travel by means of a lighted arrow. . (CP Photo from National Defence)

Ontario Cheese Meets Michigan's Cars

Tale Of Two Cities - - - - Kiwanis Club Style

BELLEVILLE BOUND — Members of the Belleville, Ontario Kiwanis Club, board Air Canada charter flight at Trenton yesterday for visit with Belleville, Michigan club.

Gift of Belleville cheese is loaded aboard plane by Taylor Franklin, Bill Slade and George Hume.

Club members are served snack during 1 hour, 35 minute flight to Detroit.

Trip Hails Goodwill Week

This week is Canada-United States Goodwill Week and to mark the occasion the local Belleville Kiwanis Club yesterday visited their counter - part in Belleville Michigan.

It was the first inter - club visit for local Kiwanians with another club of the same name and also marked 50th anniversary of Kiwanis International.

Forty-nine members of the Belleville, Ontario, club made the trip to the Michigan town of the same name 25 miles west of Detroit. They enjoyed a full day's hospitality at hands of the Michigan club members, exchanged gifts and possibly cemented Canada – USA relations a bit closer.

Belleville Mayor Jack R. Ellis also made the trip as guest of the local club.

TRAVEL BY AIR

The group made the 360-mile trip by Air Canada charter flight out of Trenton and landed at Detroit's new Metropolitan Air Terminal where they were greeted by members of the Belleville Michigan Club.

They were officially welcomed by Jerry Miller, president of the Belleville, Michigan club, and Lou Kemper, president of the Belleville, Illinois club, and later enjoyed noon luncheon served by the ladies of the Belleville, First Methodist Church.

Staff McKenna now of Ottawa, past president of the Belleville, Ont. club, with president Brad Bradford, conducted the inter-club meeting. Past President Taylor Franklin, gave the International goodwill address, pointing out that Canadians and Americans were each the other's best customer.

But on a per capita basis Canadians far outspend their American neighbors to the south when it comes to international spending and Mr. Franklin urged that efforts be made to more evenly balance the scales.

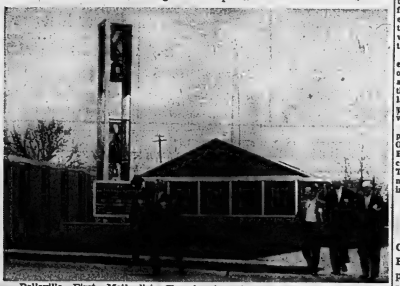
Michigan club officials were presented with Belleville, Ontario, cheese and Mayor Jack Ellis presented his Belleville, Michigan, counterpart with composite silk screen picture of Belleville, Ontario scenes. Mayor Ellis in turn received a cigarette lighter.

Ford Motor Company put a fleet of Fords at the disposal of the two Belleville clubs and in the afternoon were taken on a tour of the company's River Rouge plant where they saw new Mustangs coming off the production line. Later the group visited the Ford testing grounds at Dearborn.

HIGH IN PRAISE

Preparation for the visit of local club to Belleville, Michigan, was under a special committee headed by, member George Hume. To pay for the trip local Kiwanians for the past year have been paying an extra dollar for their weekly club luncheons.

On the flight home to Trenton last nigh, Belleville Kiwanians as a mas were high in their praise of the hospitality extended by the Belleville, Michigan Club.



Already they are starting plans to match the hospitality on a return trip visit by the Michigan club.

Pupils Will Receive Lesson In Tree Planting

PICTON (Staff) — Grade 7 pupils of the public schools will receive a lesson in tree planting Thursday afternoon at the Sand Banks.

In co-operation with the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests more than 100 pupils will travel by bus to the dunes to take part in the reforestation work there. Each of them will receive expert instruction in tree planting and given an opportunity to plant seedlings.

This can be looked upon as a Centennial tree planting project as the seedlings by 1967, will have grown to a height of several feet. Poplars and Scotch pine are the species used in an effort to control the drift by sand. Men are now engaged in this annual spring work.

The pupils will leave at one o'clock and are expected to spend two hours on the project. Zone Forester Eddie states he believes this will provide excellent training and interest for the young people in reforestation.

Pickerel Run Delayed by Cold Weather

PICTON (Staff) — Pickerel are running into the Bay of Quinte waters from various rivers, though the run has been delayed due to cold weather. Inclement weather has also made it difficult for anglers to get boats and motors ready.

But come Saturday morning, the bay and inland lakes are expected to be alive with boats as fishermen seek to win the $1,000 offered by the Chamber of Commerce and Quinte Isle Field and Stream Association. Tickets can be purchased in advance and should be secured before going fishing. Wide publicity has been given to this event through the press, radio and T.V.

Public Forum To Be Held On Safety

PICTON (Staff) — A timely public forum is to be held at Prince Edward Collegiate on Thursday night, April 29, sponsored by the University Women's Club. The public is invited. A panel of five well-informed persons, representing the fields of law enforcement, insurance, highway construction, legal protection and medicine, will explore the factors contributing to our high accident rate in Prince Edward County and possible solutions to same.

WOLVES SLAIN

A record 2,265 wolves were killed in Ontario in 1964, up from 1,950 in 1,250, for bounties totalling $44,900.

The Rural Scene

PICTON (Staff) — Last analysis provides the best guide to the fertiliser requirements of fruit trees and grapes. Hidden deficiencies and the balance between nutrients can be examined by this technique. A leaf analysis service has been in operation in Ontario since 1958 and is now available for apple, peach, pear, sour cherry and grape plantings.

Samples are taken in mid-July for tree crops and in September for grapes. Samples are analyzed for nitrogen, phosphorous, potassium, calcium and magnesium at the Horticultural Experiment Station, Vineland Station. The trace elements boron, iron and magnesse are determined if their deficiency is suspected. Recommendations are returned to the grower in December in time for fertilizer orders for the following year.

Any grower wishing to make use of this service should send one completed application form for each sample to the Fruit and Vegetable Extension Specialist by June 15th. There is a $3 fee for each sample taken. Application forms are available at the Department of Agriculture Office in Picton.

POTATO MEETING

The first regular meeting of the Picton Kiwanis 4-H Potato Club will be held in the Department of Agriculture Board Room, Picton, on the evening of Wednesday, April 28th at 7.30 p.m. The program will include the conduct of meetings, election of officers, outline of program for the year and discussion on the choice of seed and site. Boys and girls who were 12 years of age by January 1st, 1965 and who will not reach their 21st birthday by December 31st, 1965 are eligible to join this club. Any who have not enrolled and who would like to take the potato club project will have an opportunity to join the club at this meeting.

BOARS APPROVED

A total of 21 boars were approved for premium under the Boar Premium Policy during March. This number included 213 Yorkshire, 25 Landrace and 27 Lacombe. Anyone interested in purchasing an approved boar can obtain the names of growers at your local Department of Agriculture Office.

NEW SIGNS

Hal Wright, Farm Safety Specialist with the Ontario Department of Agriculture, reminds us that this month we will see a new sign on our highways and country roads. It is a red triangle with the centre portion a brillian fluorescent orange. This is the newly developed sign to be used specifically for slow moving vehicles. It is hoped that the use of this sign on the rear of farm tractors will reduce the 200 or more car-tractor accidents each year on Ontario roads.

Livestock producers are reminded that now is the time when all cattle infested with warble flies should be treated. Treatment should be applied between April 10th and May 31st. Three townships in Prince Edward County are organized under the Warble Fly Control Act and cattle owners in the remaining townships are urged to carry out the treatment on their own herds. Control measures properly applied by the use of Derris powd jer or other recognized treatments will control to a great extent the damage by warble flies.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

KINGSTON (CP)—Neil Donaldson, 26, of Kingston, was committed Tuesday to stand trial by judge and jury on charges of criminal negligence and impaired driving in connection with a fatal traffic accident that killed three persons. William Oshman, 53, his wife Margaret, 45, and their baby child, 14-year-old Allan, of Pievna, Ont., were killed in the head-on collision.

SPORTS SLICES

By Geo. H. Carver

Sports Editor

"Show me a great man," the Sage of Zwick's Island remarks, "and somewhere in the shadows I will show you a great woman."

"And show me a minor sports athlete," he goes on, "and hovering in the background unheralded and unsung, I will show you a mother, or a sister, or both."

This applies particularly to minor hockey. The moppets of the diamond games do not have to play until late Saturday mornings or afternoons or any weekday evenings.

But with the skate-shod helms it is different. Many times this August has seen through sleep-stilled eyes at the crack of yawning, gayples of little guys clamoring at the gates of the venerable Memorial Arena.

Who gets 'em out of bed? Who tiptoes out of her bedroom so she won't disturb the Saturday morning snoring partner? Who gets Lil Joe and Jack his snaps, crackles and pops? Who seen to it at the last minute that he has all his gear? And who advises him before the parting kiss to play hard but clean and hopes his team wins?

Put them all together—and you guessed it—they spell "M-O-T-H-E-R."

This year mothers, sisters, aunts and other members of the distaff side decided to extend the maternal interest beyond the perimeters of their families.

They felt the youngsters from outside points appearing here for tournaments play should get some kind of parental care such as "Mothers Away from Home"—and they did something about it.

They formed an organization called the Belleville Minor Hockey Association Women's Auxiliary—and sounded the call to arms.

They were amazed with what similar organizations in other hockey centres were doing for their visiting youngsters and decided they could do as well—if not better.

Mrs. Grant (Allison) Stickle, one of the prime movers of the formation of the auxiliary, was named its first president. She has gathered together a hardworking executive and membership.

The gals didn't waste any time. They went into immediate action, planning for the arrangement of meals for the visiting youngsters and their serving.

City merchants and individuals came to their aid with donations of food and other necessities. Their efforts have been crowned with success and they have earned the well-deserved appreciation of not only the visiting teams and their officials but the parent Belleville Minor Hockey Association.

As an example they looked after the inner wants of some 160 young hockey players during the day-long Shrine Hockey Tournament held here a short time ago. It was no easy task. They came through with flying colors and added another feather to their cap of achievements.

Already the gals are laying plans for another season. And they want to be prepared. With this in mind and and in a fitting climax to a highly successful inaugural season, they are holding their first "Minor Hockey Ball."

They have called it "The Spring Dance" and it is slated for the Club Canaro this Saturday night. There will be an outstanding band, refreshments and a delectable luncheon.

Mrs. Tom Jury is the convener of the function and she has a capable committee working with her. The "mothers" are putting the same efforts into their first social function as they did in their organizational capacities—and they are thoroughly deserving of success.

The tab is $3.50 per couple and tickets can be obtained at Booth's, Western Tire on the Plaza and Tom Lewis' Tobacco Shop; also at the door.

The BMHA "Mothers" are looking for a bumper crowd and people connected with minor hockey through their sons or relatives should support the first social venture of an organization that has done—and will continue to do—an outstanding job for the well-being of city and visiting minor hockey youngsters.

Canadiens' Power Plays Crush Hawks

By BILL NEVILLE

MONTREAL (CP) — For Montreal Canadiens, Stanley Cup hockey games really don't begin until someone is in the penalty box.

When that happens, however, they have a very simple—and eminently successful — formula:

If it's an opposing player in the box, they score goals. If it's one of their own, they check the other team into the ground.

The Habs, closing in on a record 11th Stanley Cup championship, played that theme to the hilt Thursday night and emerged with a 6-0 triumph over Chicago Black Hawks that brought them within 60 minutes of the title.

The Montreal power play, which ranks with John Ferguson's right hand as the most devasting weapon in the playoffs, got five chances against the Hawks and produced four goals.

The Hawks also had five chances, but, like everything else they did on this particular evening, their power play efforts produced exactly nil.

Toss in two more Montreal goals and that about sums up the most one-sided contest of the current series.

JEAN BELIVEAU

NEED ONE MORE

The scene now switches to Chicago for game No. 6 Thursday night with Canadiens, leading 3-2 in games, needing only one more win to clinch their first cup since 1960.

The Hawks, whose last victory was in 1961, must win Thursday night at home and then repeat the process back at the Forum in a seventh-if-necessary contest Saturday.

The latter, if the opportunity arises, will involve no small achievement in a playoff year in which the home team has won 16 of the first 18 contests, counting the semi-finals.

Thursday night's game, witnessed by Prime Minister Pearson and 14,781 other fans, was a Canadiens' cakewalk.

The Habs, who dropped the third and fourth games in Chicago, poured in two power play goals in the first period, another one in the second, and a fourth, along with the two "regular" efforts, in the third.

Big Jean Beliveau, a leading contender for the Conn Smythe Trophy as the playoffs' top performer, led the way with his sixth and seventh playoff goals and a pair of assists. Other markers went to Dick Duff, Bobby Rousseau, Henri Richard and defenceman J. C. Tremblay.

Canadiens now have scored 19 power play goals during the playoffs, 11 against Toronto in their six-game semi-final and eight so far against the Hawks.

HENRI RICHARD

On the other side of the ledger, Montreal's penalty killers, led by Tremblay and hard-working Jim Roberts, have given up only five goals while a man down.

With the teams at full strength, Canadiens have been out-scored 20 to 11.

Montreal coach Toe Blake, a changed man from his attempted post-game assault on the referee after Sunday's fifth game in Chicago, said—in the surprise of no one—that he considered the effort his team's best of the playoffs.

"But then, things always look easy when the other team is not playing," he added.

Chicago's Billy Reay said: "We weren't in the game at all."

The Canadiens out-shot the Hawks 37-23, out-skated them, out-checked them, and even out - slugged them. Chicago couldn't even win the penalty parade, taking 10 minors to 10 minors and a major for the winners.

The major went to Ferguson, the Canadiens left winger with the sturdy right hand. He let it fly several times at the head of Chicago's Eric Nesterenko, leaving the Hawk forward a bleeding and almost unconscious pile on the ice.

The shutout, Montreal's second of the finals, went to tiny Charlie Hodge, who recovered from a shaky performance Sunday to turn in a steady effort. Few of the 23 shots he faced him rated in the dangerous category, but he had the answers for all of them.

Four Clubs In Commercial, More Needed

The Commercial Softball League will have another try at getting started next week when that body holds its third meeting in as many weeks tonight.

The meeting is called for eight o'clock at the Pinnacle Street Recreation Centre.

Despite talk of a six to eight team league, only four clubs are listed as definite starters to date. They are Mack Diamond Cheese, Point Anne Cementmen, City Hotel, and Lightfoot Construction.

League executives have urged that all possible entries have representation at tonight's meeting.

"With the playing season only about three weeks away, we are going to have to elect a new executive, set an entry deadline, likely for next Wednesday, and go ahead with the clubs that are definitely in," said a league spokesman this week.

Leafs Eclipse Suns

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Maple Leafs struck early and rolled to easy 4-2 win over Jacksonville Suns in an International League baseball game Tuesday.

The win moved the Leafs into a first-place tie with the idle Atlanta Crackers.

The Leafs sent 11 men to the plate in the first inning, scoring six runs off starter Dick LeMay before he was sent to the showers. Winning pitcher Bill Spanswick hit a homer for three of the Leaf runs.

In the second, the Leafs bombed reliever Clint Stark for six more runs to build up a 12-0 lead.

Tony Horton's homer in the third inning, his third of the year, added another run and catcher Russ Gibson singled home the final run in the seventh.

Ferguson Bopped Him

'I Wasn't Looking' Says Nesty

By AL McNEIL and JOE DUPUIS

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens were flying with such zest Tuesday night that coach Billy Reay of Chicago Black Hawks suggested someone should take saliva tests of the Hab players to determine whether they had been given stimulants.

"It was Reay's jocular way of cushioning the terrible blow Canadiens had delivered his team — a 6-0 whitewash that moved Habs to within one game of the Stanley Cup championship.

"Heck, we were just up for this one," remarked Montreal coach Toe Blake.

"I think it was the best game we played in the two playoff series," he said, referring also to his team's six-game semi-final triumph over Toronto Maple Leafs.

Four of Montreal's goals came on their lethal power play. Reay, asked how he was going to stop it for the sixth game Thursday in Chicago, replied lamely: "See me after that sixth game."

Goalie Charlie Hodge received post-game congratulations from Prime Minister Pearson, a Forum specistor.

Captain Jean Beliveau, who scored two goals, said his line didn't do anything new to contain Chicago's Scooters, Stan Mikita, Kenny Wharram and Doug Mohns.

CAPTAIN MIKITA

"We've just keeping an eye on Mikita and not letting him loose," Beliveau said.

The two chief pacifists of the night, John Ferguson of the Habs and Eric Nesterenko of Chicago, were in a subdued mood. Ferguson nursed a painful charleyhorse acquired in the third period when he was spun around by Elmer Vasko of the Hawks.

Nesterenko nursed a six-stitch cut below his right eye, the result of a first period fight with Ferguson.

The scuffle began along the boards when Nesterenko's big stick caught Ferguson on the head. In an instant, Ferguson and two head rights at the tall Chicago right winger.

"He got me with two good ones while I wasn't looking," said Nesterenko, who slumped face down and semi-conscious after the blows, blood from the cut blotching the ice.

Reay inserted sub-goalie Denis Delardy into the Chicago nets for the third period, and said the move was only to give Glenn Hall "a much - needed rest." Hawks were trailing 3-0 at the time.

'Bold Lad' Derby Favorite

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Bold Lad was back in the good graces of his fans today and the firm favorite to take the 91st running of the $125,000 - added Kentucky Derby Saturday at Churchill Downs.

The powerfully built chestnut son of Bold Ruler from Mrs. H. C. Phipps' Wheatley Stable erased any doubt as to his fitness Tuesday when he sped the one mile of the Derby Trial in 1:35 1-5 and won by four lengths.

There had been some doubt as to the 1964 two - year - old champion's readiness for the big test after he finished a tiring third in the Wood Memorial at Aqueduct 10 days ago. But Bold Lad lost no time erasing any doubts with his superb performance in the trial.

He soundly whipped P. L. Grisson's Carpenter's Rule with the Darby Dan Farm's Bugler another six lengths back for third place in the field of five.

Bill Hartack was in the saddle for the first time.

With the pre-Derby party starting field still listed at 11 or 12, Bold Lad is expected to go postward at odds of 9 to 5 or even shorter. Post time is 4:45 p.m., (5:45 p.m. EDT) with television (CBS) scheduled for 5-6 p.m.

Lucky Debonair, Mrs. Ada L. Rice's Santa Anita Derby and Blue Grass Stakes winner, still was the subject of strong support at odds of 5 to 2.

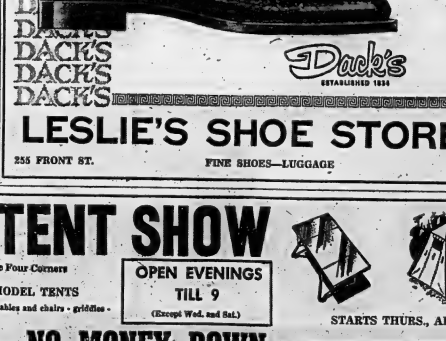
Amateur Champion Leads Way



PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — National champion Bill Campbell, shooting his second even par round, led the way through Tuesday's upset-riddled second round of the North and South Amateur golf championship.

While the veteran from Huntington, W. Va., was putting out Bob Lowry of Huntsville, Ala., 5 and 4, three former champions, Billy Joe Patton, Charlie Smith and Dick Chapman, fell by the wayside.

In other matches, Toronto's Eric Hanson won by default from Kenneth Scott of Atlanta.

Twins' Pascual Is One-Man Gang

Two-Hitter, Grand Slam

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Minnesota Twins have so much power they play one of their sluggers only once every four days.

The part-time slugger drove in five runs with a grand-slam homer and a single Tuesday night as the Twins bombed Cleveland Indians 11-1 for their seventh victory in nine starts.

Besides sparking the offence, pitcher Camilo Pascual also held the Indians to two hits while winning his second game against no defeats.

The grand slam was the second in Pascual's career and the second in the American League this season.

The right-hander climaxed a seven-run first inning with the homer, connecting against Stan Williams, who had just relieved Cleveland starter Sam McDowell. He than capped a three-run fifth inning by lashing a run-scoring single.

Pascual, 31, a 12-year veteran, is off to a rapid start in his effort to recapture the title of the AL's best right-handed pitcher he lost to Dean Chance last season.

He is also out to convince Minnesota owner Calvin Griffith the slight salary slice he took for this season was a mistake. Pascual won 15 games last season after spending two years as a 20-game winner.

HAGGLED OVER TERMS

The Cuban, a perennial holdout, didn't agree to terms—about $40,000 worth — until March 9 this year. Originally, it was reported, Griffith had wanted him to accept a $9,000 cut in pay.

In other AL games, Los Angeles Angels nipped Detroit Tigers 4-3, Chicago White Sox whipped Boston Red Sox 10-1 and Washington Senators defeated Baltimore Orioles 5-2. Rain washed out Kansas City at New York.

The Indians' only hits off Pascual were Dick Howser's leadoff double in the first inning and Camilo Carreon's single in the eighth. Before the single, Pascual retired 21 straight batters.

Jim Piersall's alert base-running led to the Angels' victory over Detroit. Piersall forced Willie Smith at second base in the eighth, then stole second which had been left unprotected. Jim Fregosi followed with his third hit of the game, a single that scored Piersall.

Don Buford capped four singles and drove in two Chicago runs as the White Sox took advantage of three Boston errors for five runs.

Felix Mantilla's error helped the Sox to a six-run seventh inning. Buford started it with a bunt single and closed it out by driving in a run with another single.

Washington downed Baltimore behind Frank Howard's hitting and Steve Ridzik's pitching. Howard batted in four runs, three with a first-inning homer. Ridzik rescued Washington starter Bennie Daniels in the fifth and allowed the Orioles only one hit the rest of the way.

Giants Win 14-13, 29-Hit Slugfest

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Anyone have a spare dome for sale.

Mail it, special delivery, to Horace Stoneham, president, San Francisco Giants, Candlestick Park.

And hurry, before the address changes to San Francisco Bay.

The Giants could use a top on Candlestick Park to cut off the wind-tunnel effect that led to a 29-hit slugfest Tuesday night.

They finally outlasted Philadelphia Phillies 14-13 on Matty Alou's ninth inning homer. It was the eighth homer that sailed out of the park with an assist from the wind.

Meanwhile, under the dome, Casey Stengel could have hit the roof, even though it's scientifically impossible.

The 74-year-old manager was shaking his head over New York Mets' inability to reach the .500 level for the first time in their four-year history.

ASTROS PULL IT OUT

For 8 2-3 innings, plus two strikes, Stengel and his perennial last-placers had it within their grasp. Then, suddenly Houston Astros had won 2-0, the Astrodome scoreboard was firing and Stengel was burning enough to lift off the launching pad.

Elsewhere, Frank Robinson and Tommy Harper each collected four hits in Cincinnati Reds' 3-1 triumph over Chicago Cubs, Los Angeles Dodgers edged Pittsburgh Pirates 5-4 despite Roberto Clemente's four hits and Milwaukee Braves rode homers by Eddie Mathews and Denis Menke to a 9-5 victory over St. Louis Cardinals.

The Phillies were outhit by the Giants 16-13 but hit six homers to two for San Francisco. Nevertheless, Alou's homer proved decisive when he tagged the two-out shot off Ed Roebuck.

Willie McCovey also connected for the Giants while Richie Allen hit two for Philadelphia and Johnny Callison, Clay Dalrymple, Tony Gonzalez and Wes Covington one each.

LEAD 2-1

The Mets scored in the second inning on Ray McMillan's two-run single and still led 2-1 in the ninth when Bob Aspromonte doubled off starter Jack Fisher with one out.

Al Jackson relieved and got the second out, but Stengel then switched to Dennis Ribrant. The former Hamilton junior hockey player walked Ron Brand and Eddie Kasko followed with a two-run double that stretched the Astros' winning streak to six games, the longest in the majors this season.

The Mets now are 0-6 in attempts to reach .500 this season after moving within one victory of the mark.

The Reds collected 12 hits against the Cubs, including homers by Deron Johnson and Harper.

The Dodgers were outhit 12-10 but broke a 2-2 tie with a three-run sixth inning rally that marked the Pirates their sixth straight loss.

The Braves unleashed a 13-hit attack before a Milwaukee crowd of only 1,677—the smallest in County Stadium history. Mathews' homer, off Bob Purkey, touched off a five-run fourth inning uprising, and Menke connected on the inning later.

PIGS SUFFER TOO

Pigs can suffer from anemia, says the Ontario Agricultural College, especially if they are reared indoors in winter.

"Mr. Bowling" Title, Loot Up for Grabs

Sunday evening a bowler from the city or district will walk out of the Bowl-O-Drome with a watch, a bundle of loot and the proud title "Mr. Bowling of 1964-65."

The tournament gets under way at one o'clock Saturday afternoon, and resumes Sunday afternoon at the same time.

It is expected the new "Mr. Bowling" will be crowned and presented with the spoils at approximately six o'clock Sunday evening.

The deadline for entries, Bill Bateman, Bowl-O-Drome manager says, has been extended to the latter part of this week. There is time for procrastinating legiers to get into the fun.

Kingston has registered several entries to date and more are expected. The city contingent has been slow in going to the post and bowlers here are urged to get their entries in as soon as possible.

The winner will receive the O'Connor watch award and the top prize money. Amounts of cash awards depend on the number of entries.

Better get into the bowling swim, men. There isn't much time left.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — George Chuvalo of Toronto, Canadian heavyweight champion, was offered $10,000 plus expenses Tuesday to fight the new California champion, Thad Spencer, in San Francisco in June.

Bobbie Ford, matchmaker for Civic Boxing Enterprises, wired the offer to Chuvalo's manager, Irving Ungerman in Toronto.

The unranked Spencer, 22, pulled a major ring surprise Monday night in soundly whipping Rischer, the California champion for the last nine years.

Rischer was the No. 6-ranked heavyweight challenger in the World Boxing Association ratings and No. 7 in the Ring magazine list.

Chuvalo was ranked No. 2 by WBA and No. 4 by Ring.

Spencer put his record at 15-3 with the triumph over Rischer.

Kovac Joins '400' Club

Pat Kovac joined the "400 Club" at the Bowl-O-Drome yesterday, scoring an even 400 while bowling in the Teacher's League.

Kovac, a teacher at Quinte Secondary School, threw nine consecutive strikes, missed with his tenth ball, spared and finished up by hitting the three and two pins for the 400 score.

Previous high single for the league was Joe MacCauley's 382.

Kovac was the fifth member to join the 400'ers this season. Leo St. Louis has turned the trick three times. He has a 432 in Men's Commercial League play, a 410 in the Carling Rolloffs and another 410 in open bowling.

Jim McKenzie hit 425 in Quinte Classic play, Bud Perlean an even 400 in the same league and Ron Saylor 400 in the Major "A".

Leo Lucciak came close as possible without exceeding rolling 300 in the Major "A" loop.

Cross-Canada Rally

Briton Narrows Gap

By CLAUDE RENAULT

REGINA (CP) — Barry Taylor of England made a perfect 1,000-mile run from Port Arthur to the midway point of the Cross-Canada 4,000 - mile rally Tuesday, narrowing the gap between himself and the first place team of Kiam Ross and John Bird of Toronto.

Taylor and navigator Robin Edwardes of Fabreville, Que., driving a Ford Cortina, also swung in first in class in three closed sections during the day.

The three closed sections — segments of the rally closed to the public where competitors are urged to go as fast as possible—were the first to be run since the Montreal to Vancouver rally began in Montreal Saturday night.

The Volvo of Ross and Bird picked up 36 points during the closed sections, which brought the total number of points against it to 46. The team had picked up only 10 points in the first two sections of the rally.

Taylor, who had 100 points against him at the start of the leg Tuesday, remained at 100 and took over second place.

SLIP TO THIRD

Paul McLennan of Toronto and John Wilson of New Dundee, Ont., made the run to Winnipeg—half way point in Tuesday's leg—without picking up a single penalty but in the final half of the section, they were assessed 18 points for having finished behind another entry during one of the three closed sections and slipped into third place with 108 penalty points.

The cars arriving here Tuesday night were greeted by a crowd of 3,000.

Eppie Weitzes of Toronto and Eric MacDuff of Oakville, Ont., driving a Mustang, moved from a fifth-place tie to fourth spot. The team picked up only eight penalty points during the run for a penalty total of 148.

The team of Ewen Graham of Midnapore, Alta., and Henry Acteson of Calgary, highest-placed private entry, dropped from fourth to fifth spot. They picked up 64 points, raising their penalty total to 134.

Today the 43 teams, all that remain of the 64 that started, are over the hump, and begin the second half of the rally. The first leg is from Regina to Edmonton. There is no mid-way stop scheduled.

WOMEN ARE KIND

Diana Carter of Toronto and Jean Steagall of Merchantville, N.J., winners of the women's competition last year and leading again this year, were in 32nd place. The Carter-Steagall team, driving a Volvo, picked up 148 points, raising their penalty total to 870.

Their only competitors, Anne Coombe and Jane Taylor of Toronto, driving an Imp, picked up 184 points, increasing their penalty total to 2,234.

Ford Mustangs were still leading in the sponsored teams category with 543 points.

In second place was Volvo, with 671, followed by Chevelle with 1,906. Teams are composed of three cars each.

START COURSE

QUEBEC (CP) — Twenty-seven students from the Royal Military College at Kingston arrived Tuesday for a three-week practical French course at Laval University. During their stay the cadets will live with French-speaking families.

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Maple Leafs of baseball's International League Tuesday picked up pitcher Ed Connolly from the parent Boston Red Sox of the American League. At the same time manager Dick Williams of the Leafs announced that Leaf pitcher John Anderson has been placed on the disabled list, keeping the team at the maximum 20 players. Connolly, a left - hander, had a 4-11 record with Boston last season. His earned run average was 4.38.

Commercial League Banquet

Mark Storms and his boys of the Men's Commercial Bowling League wound up the season with a ball last night.

It was a gala affair held at the KOC Hall with 80 per cent of the league keglers turning out to honor individual and collective champions.

They tucked away a lot of turkey thanks to Mrs. McKeown and her grand gang.

Passing-out president Storms did an excellent job in winding up his tenure of office. He received a rightful ovation for a tough job excellently done.

Mark turned over the reins of office to Jack Garvin whom will occupy the presidential chair next year.

With President Garvin are George Hemmett first vice president; Wally Dewar second vice - president; Jack Moon treasurer and Russ Jones secretary.

The Plaza Trophy symbolic of the league championship went to the Dowser's Mens Wear. Team captain Joe Allen accepted the award with team-mates Gord Prentice, Ben Dunnette, Earl MacDonald, Jim Lloyd, Mark Storms, Doll Pointer and Russ Jones.

The runners - up were the Richard Ellis team which was presented with the Barrett Trophy.

The Carling Trophy emblematic of the league's "A" section winners went to "Kit" Aces captained by Ed. Bowers. His teammates were Bill Brown, Al Hitchon, Bill Angrove, Andy Knott, Howard Kinnear, Wally Lavergne and John Grey.

Booth's TV were the "B" section winners with captain George Hammond accepting the Richard Ellis Trophy. Teammates are Jos Lerick, Gord Heffer, Charlie Baker, Doug Locke, Elmer Scott, Gord Booth and Harry Ridley.

Individual awards were presented with Leo St. Louis winning the high average award with his 247. High triple went to Ron Saylor for his 912 and high single was won by Russ Jones with a 405.

NESTERENKO FLOORED — John Ferguson (23) of Montreal winds up to hit Eric Nesterenko of Chicago Black Hawks during a first-period fight in Tuesday night's Stanley Cup final game in Montreal. Ferguson went after the Hawk forward after being struck on the head by his stick. (CP Wirephoto)

New Centre Plans Are Unveiled

TORONTO (CP)—The architecture for Ontario's centennial gift to itself — a centre of science and technology to be built in Metropolitan Toronto's Don Valley—was unveiled Tuesday by Premier Roberts and some of his cabinet ministers.

The centre will consist of a number of buildings interconnected by a 250-foot, two-level bridge and by enclosed escalators.

At the heart of the technological museum will be a three-storey triangular building moulded at its corners with three circular compartments, one of which will contain a 500-seat auditorium.

The main exhibition halls will be in three buildings on the valley floor, reached by descending escalators from the core building situated on a knoll.

Premier Roberts said the project is to be completed by July of 1967, at a cost of $14,000,000. The government has 130 acres of Metropolitan Toronto parkland in the valley upon which to expand in future years.

DESIGNED TO THEME

Designer Raymond Moriyama, 34, was given the task of conceiving a structure to suit the theme, or philosophy of the centre, of man in his changing technological environment.

Mr. Roberts told a press conference the centre was planned with the idea—that it would grow into one of the world's great science and technological institutions."

Education Minister William Davis said it will also be a study centre for students, containing classrooms.

Mark Chait, chairman of the centre's board of directors, said it will attempt to convey to students and the public, in a meaningful way, the development of science.

Mr. Crean said the displays convey a broader picture of science than that projected for Expo '67, the Montreal world's fair planned for 1967.

CAPACITY 'GREAT'

Initially, the display buildings will provide 100,000 square feet of floor space of 40,000 in the building and 60,000 in the lower three buildings. About 3,000 persons an hour will be able to tour the centre.

Mr. Davis said the government intends to bring students from out of town to visit the centre and scientific groups may use it as a meeting place.

A glass - thatched main rotunda, to be called the Great Hall, will be the focal point of the core building. Around the circumference of the two-storey rotunda will be a mezzanine.

Remaining land on the site will be developed for year-round recreation.

Mr. Roberts also announced the appointment of 10 additional trustees to the centre's board. They include Earl K. Brownridge, Brampton; T. R. Gates, Sudbury; Lawrence Brown, Sarnia.

The Trots

CAMPBELLVILLE, Ont. (CP)—The long shots paid off in two races at Mohawk Raceway Tuesday.

In the featured one-mile trot, Danny Brewer, a four-year-old winless in four starts, left the gate at 8-5 odds and returned $11.80 with a come-from-behind win 1.59th of a mile from the finish.

Prince Ondago, driven by Bert Madill, won the third race and paid $18 on a $2 bet.

Talented Jerry Lewis Gets Paris Recognition

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Long starved for recognition of his comical talent, Jerry Lewis finally had a feast this month. But he had to go to Paris for it.

For some time the comic had been hearing rumbles that he had been embraced by intellectuals of France and England. But he didn't realize the extent of his acceptance until he flew to the French capital for location scenes of Boeing Boeing with Tony Curtis.

He was mobbed first at the airport, then at a press conference. He was interviewed in reverent tones by Paris film critics. The summit of Jerry's happiness was reached when the critics presented him with an award for best direction because of The Nutty Professor.

"It is hard to express what I felt," says Jerry, whose eyes get misty as he thinks about it. "This was the greatest satisfaction I have ever known in my career. The whole visit to Paris was unbelievable. I was walking 11 feet off the ground most of the time."

WANTS ACCEPTANCE

Like all comedians, Jerry needs desperately to be accepted. Despite 16 years of toil in motion pictures, he has found acceptance in the U.S. only from the public.

"I'd like to hear the eulogies before I'm dead," he said wistfully. "It won't do me any good to have George Jessel say it at the funeral."

That point was driven home to Jerry on his meeting with Jean Cocteau, a French comedian and film maker. Jerry saw the Frenchman's new film, The Yo-Yo, and admits that he was "overcome with envy." He told a French critic he had to meet Statz, and a meeting was arranged.

The French comedian's first question through the Interpreter was: "Have you ever poured your heart and soul into your work, struggling to perfect every line of dialogue, every piece of action—and then find that you are denied the recognition you feel you deserve?"

HE KNOWS

Jerry smiled knowingly. By the end of the evening he and Eteix were soulmates. The Frenchman, who now has been embraced by U.S. highbrow critics, is as little appreciated in France as Lewis is in this country.

Jerry has profound respect for Paris critics. They are truly experts of the cinema, he said, and could discuss with him nuances of individual scenes he had directed years ago. What pleased him most was they they cherished the films he directed himself.

Does recognition in France mean Jerry is satisfied?

"I'll never be satisfied until I get some kind of recognition from the critics in the United States," he said. "I'll never rest until they accept me."

BAD MEN GET MERCY

Few of the Thrush villains are killed off, say producers of TV's The Man from U.N.C.L.E., because it is a waste to use up the most evil characters in just one episode.

AT THE PARK — Producer-director-writer Albert Zugsmith plays his first screen role in "Fanny Hill: Memoirs of a Woman of Pleasure" as the Grand Duke in the rollicking story of life in merry old 18th-century England. Zugsmith, who started his career as a newspaper man, has written four novels and production of "Written on the Wind" was nominated for three Academy Awards. He is also a playwright, having had his play "Fanny Hill" translated into seven languages. Since his pictures were "Memoirs of a Woman of Pleasure" now showing at the Park Theatre, it stars Letitia Roman as Fanny, Miriam Hopkins as Mrs. Brown, Alec D'Arcy and a cast of international beauties gathered from the four corners of the world. Complete shows at 7.00 and 9.10 p.m Box office opens at 6.30 p.m.

Edward R. Murrow Bids 'Good Night--Good Luck'

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — The Columbia Broadcasting System, reporting Tuesday night the death of Edward R. Murrow, went back 11 years to recall a high point in his career.

Walter Cronkite's news program re-run portions of Murrow's Son Is Now program of March, 1954, which dealt with the controversial Senator Joseph McCarthy. It was indeed a memorable program. But to many TV viewers, the most moving moment was the once-familiar Murrow sign - off: "Good night . . . and good luck."

Eric Sevareid who worked with Murrow and knew him well, summarized the affection and admiration in which he was held by newspaper men as well as his broadcasting colleagues in this tribute: "I never knew any person among those who worked in his realm to feel jealousy for him," he said. This reporter has never met any person who had a harsh or critical word to say about Murrow.

RECALLS PROGRAM

Many in the television audience will remember Ed Murrow best for his weekly Person to Person program when he was sitting informally in a chair beside a big screen, invariably smoking a cigarette. He would lean forward with keen interest as he talked with the great and near-great, his usually sober face occasionally breaking into a brilliant smile.

To Murrow, this program was a sort of avocation. His passionate interest was bringing the news and its meaning to radio and television audiences. Perhaps more than any other single man, he helped to bring broadcasting communications to its present mature stature.

As Sevareid said: "He was an original and we shall not see his like again."

Olivia de Havilland Has Been Signally Honored

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — In the heart of every star there is a dark place where it doesn't twinkle.

You wouldn't think that is true of Olivia de Havilland, but it is, according to her own testimony.

Throughout her life whatever Livvy wanted, Livvy got. She was a standout student in school; she was still in her teens when she first won stage acclaim in Max Reinhardt's production of A Midsummer Night's Dream.

Through a 30 year screen career—she co-stars with Bette Davis in her latest film, Hush, Hush, Sweet Charlotte—she has been signally honored. She is one of the handful of actresses who have won two Oscars, and three other times she has been nominated for academy awards.

What could bother her now after such long success?

"I have a knack of being unloved, or of believing I'm loved and finding out that I'm not," she said. "Isn't that odd?"

PARENTS DIVORCED

Miss de Haviland attributes the feeling to the breakup of her parents' marriage — her father was an international patent attorney in Tokyo—during her childhood.

"I never knew my father after the age of three," she remarked, "and I never even saw him for 10 years. I felt abandoned.

"It has profoundly affected both my life and that of my sister, Joan Fontaine. A thing like that leaves you jittery inside ever after."

She is determined that her own two children, Benjamin, 15, and Gisele, 10, won't grow up with that feeling.

At 43, Livvy, married to a French magazine editor, retains the same haunting beauty she had when she played Melanie in Gone with the Wind in 1939. Her hair is a color she describes as pale mink. Her reddish brown eyes glow when she talks.

MANY INTERESTS

She is vivacious, keenly intelligent, bubbling over with many interests.

Here are what Livvy likes: "All colors, particularly blues, greens, and curious reds . . . the feel of soft wool and silk . . . early morning, because then I can have the world to [illegible]

The Unknown Addicts: How Many Are There?

By BERNARD GAVZER

NEW YORK (AP) — People like George, a 30-year-old businessman; Beth, a 21-year-old model; Gloria, a 26-year-old secretary, and Marty, a 19-year-old non - student, move through the mainstream of U.S. life without causing much of a stir.

They are blended into the vast middle class, drawn through the routines of rather ordinary lives—except for one extraordinary thing:

They are narcotics addicts.

No one knows how many of these kinds of addicts there are. They are different because they do not fit the stereotype. George, for example, never had to steal a thing to supply himself with narcotics. Marty has never had a job but his family takes care of him, gives him the pocket money that keeps him supplied. Beth is from a very well-to-do family. They do not become part of the public record because they are seldom arrested. When in trouble they can turn to private physicians for help.

Are Beth, Marty, Gloria and George—and some dozen others of similar backgrounds who recently compiled their stories—simply fakes? Or are they representative of a far larger, little-known element within society?

"It's a very serious social sore," says Dr. David W Maurer, [illegible] of Louisville professor and co-author of Narcotics and Narcotic Addicts. "I do not understand what is behind it, but it is a fearful thing."

ADDICTS YOUNGER

[illegible] addicts [illegible] shot in age among addicts from 25 to 35-year level to below 20. "Many of these younger people are not delinquents in the sense of a juvenile record. Among the middle class non-criminals [illegible] who are able to conceal their habit, remain at work and generally obtain supplies of narcotics."

Dr. Katherine Tess, co-ordinator of New York City's narcotics control centre, says: "All we know is that in the better-well-to-do communities there are Friday night and Saturday night parties at which goofballs, marijuana or heroin may be used. These people are not involved in the day-to-day activity of hard core addicts are and so they seldom get arrested or enter the welfare rolls."

George was nearly 19 when he began.

"It was the big thing to do. So I smoked pot (marijuana)."

Gloria talks of "tea." She is a "head," a regular user of marijuana. Gloria has a passion about it.

One evening, in her rather sparsely furnished apartment in an old brownstone, she sat upon a daybed and finished the last sucking of pot upon a "roach"—the short tip of a hand-rolled marijuana cigarette (called a "joint")—which she held with a hairclip. She had been turned on. She was high.

"I feel very objective. This makes you hyper-perceptive, and it makes you, ah, not accept falsities about yourself."

NINE-YEAR HABIT

Gloria was first turned on when she was 17 and a freshman at a fashionable girls' school on the West Coast. She has been a head nine years.

"I tried it because it sounded so good.

Beth comes from a close-knit family. Her father is well-to-do.

"I knew Jerry was using marijuana when we got married," she says. "But I thought that he would settle down and he wouldn't need it.

"A year after we were married, I was 19 then, he started using heroin. He was working as an accountant, and he was beginning to have trouble.

"He was building a big tolerance, so that it finally cost him $75 a day, just to satisfy the habit.

"One day, maybe after a year of this, I said, 'Okay, all right, [illegible] with you. You want to do it, I'm going to do it, too.' His tried to stop me. He never, never, never, never wanted us to do it. So I thought if I start maybe he'll stop. So one night when he was in the bathroom and his friend was over to the house, I said, 'turn me on,' and the friend said, 'no, Jerry'll kill me.' And I kept saying 'it's all right, it's all right.' So he gave me a little bit. I mainlined from the very first (took the drug directly into the vein)."

TIMELESS WORLD

It was mid-afternoon, in a suburban New York home, when Marty came to the door barefoot and bleary-eyed. He didn't know whether it was day or night, or what day of what week in what month. He was still in the twilight of a heroin shot, which he had taken early that morning.

"With stuff, I just nod," Marty says. "I hit myself and sit down and nod. But when I first used goofballs and pot, it was different. Pot was dreamy. I mean, I didn't get a high the first couple of times, but when I did, I felt everything was floating like. Then I would get the stupid giggles. Then came the horror. I never figured it happening to anybody else, but I got the horrors."

Marty used goofballs—a combination of amphetamines, or pep pills, and a cough medicine—for a number of months. No one induced him to try marijuana or goofballs, or for that matter, heroin.

Marty's drug use varies and, as is the case with others, there are times he goes under doctor's care or goes to a hospital to cut down, like an alcoholic going on the wagon. Currently, he used three $75 bags a day. A bag is the quantity supposedly sufficient for a good shot. It may contain as much as five milligrams of heroin, with milk sugar and quinine powder. However, the repeated cutting reduces this to as little as two milligrams. Some addicts will use two bags at a time to get the anticipated impact.

COSTS A LOT

"I've been running $15 to $21 a day," Marty says, "and I do not have much bread (money) because I am not working.

Does he burgle? How does he get such cash seven days a week?

"I'm not a crook. That's not my stick," Marty says. "I go [illegible] I get a taste out of every bag."

A half a load is 10 bags, and costs $25. In making the connection to buy the dope, Marty takes the risk of arrest. For this risk, he gets a share. It is sufficient for his needs.

One pill, side by [illegible] $6, found her greatest access to drugs when she worked as a nurse. Her name is Lorraine, and she began when she was 19.

"I was a fat child and the doctor prescribed benzidrene to control my appetite. But I didn't take them as I was supposed to. I started increasing the amount from 15 milligrams a day to 120 and even 300 milligrams. I began thinking people were following me. This went on for two years. Another doctor put me on barbiturates, so I did the same thing. I used pills all though training. When I was 17, I started on narcotics, using heroin. Then I switched to morphine. I was using eight grains a day and going to class and working in the wards. Now, I use forged prescriptions to get all the morphine I want. It costs me $6 to $7 a day."

Although heroin addicts generally have a history of having used marijuana, it does not necessarily mean that one automatically follows the other.

"Pot doesn't drive you to heroin," says George, the one-time musician, "but it opens an accessibility in that people who will smoke pot usually do know people who use heroin. You get as accessibility to it. But there's no pusher waiting to turn you on."

Has nine years of using marijuana impaired Gloria's ability to think or function?

"My goodness, no," she says. "I have many friends who are heads and six of them are college and university professors."

As is the case with others in this report, Gloria has never been arrested by police or become a statistic in the narcotics wars category.

"The police of the world are looking for smugglers," she says. "They want the bigtime people who are selling. They aren't interested in every person who has a teeny-weeny habit. They aren't looking for people like me."

Tariff Changes Not Numerous

OTTAWA (CP)—People thinking of buying imported handwoven tapestries worth more than $20 a square foot received a break in Finance Minister Gordon's budget.

He proposed that the tapestries be admitted free of duty, instead of under rates now ranging from 25 to 55 per cent, depending on the country of origin.

Mr. Gordon noted his budget contained fewer tariff changes than usual, since the whole question of revisions now is under consideration by the Kennedy round of trade negotiations at Geneva.

Among changes proposed in resolutions tabled by Mr. Gordon were the continuation for another year of tariff rates, due to expire Dec. 31, on four items:

—Potassium hypochlorite, used to make materials for the soap, textile and printing industries;

—Sodium hypochlorite laundry bleaches;

—Tetramethyl lead, an anti-knock material put in gasoline;

—Aircraft and aircraft engines of types or sizes not made in Canada.

Tariffs on these goods range from nothing to 27½ per cent. OTHER CHANGES

He proposed removing or reducing tariffs on a few other products, including glue flasks used in foundries to make sand moulds for casting; linen yarns for knitting and netting used in making shapes for women's and children's hats.

The minister said the effect of change in the duty-free regulations covering original sculptures. Instead of having to be classified as being of a cultural nature to escape duty, they would have to have a minimum value of $75.

Ivanhoe

IVANHOE — Last Tuesday afternoon the Ivanhoe United Church Women held a delightful spring tea and apron sale at the spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Mills.

The president Mrs. Malcolm MacMillan and hostess Mrs. Mills received the guests from Moira, Salem, Bethesda, West Huntingdon United Churches and from St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Many beautiful aprons were displayed. The food point of interest were the white covered guest tables centred with daffodil arrangements. Mrs. Annie McMaster was in charge of serving the refreshments.

Following lunch a devotional service was conducted by Mrs. MacMillan and Mrs. Mitz at which time Mr. E. Moore minister of the church gave a talk on missions and congratulated the U.C.W. for all work which they had accomplished in this respect but also felt that there are many responsibilities as well at home and dealt in particular with the Indians and their problems in health and education.

The president expressed thanks to the speaker and to all those who had taken part during the afternoon; also to the pianist Mrs. E. Holland.

Indian Tribal Dances Provide Enjoyable Night

DESERONTO — A very unusual and entertaining dance and social evening was held Saturday at the Canadian Legion Hall, Deseronto.

The evening's entertainment was arranged by Melville Hill of the Tyendinaga Mohawk Reserve who is a former chief of the Reserve and custodian of many Indian relics which includes the famous Communion Service presented to the Mohawk tribe by Queen Anne.

The music for the evening was provided by five young Indian gentlemen from the Highway and Odawa tribes featuring electric guitars, violins and vocal selections.

Late in the evening the dance floor was cleared for the presentation of various Indian dances performed by a group organized by Issac Beaullieu of Ottawa. These dances ranged from many reserves throughout Canada.

Chief Untuk of the Squamish Reserve, North Vancouver, B.C., assisted by Beatrice Shawanda of the Cree tribe from Wikwemikong reserve, Manitoulin Island, performed an outstanding Indian ritual fire dance. Indian lore tells us one man was appointed keeper of the fire and he provided all the fires for the tribe. This ritual was then passed from father to son who started the fires for the tribe ceremony at the age of six and took over his duties from the father at the age of 12.

This fire ritual dance was a very lively step to the sound of the tom tom beat and long inflamed torches were waved about over the crowd, then Chief Untuk proceeded to eat the fire and extinguished the torches in his mouth and relit them with the fire held in his mouth. One of the spectators lighted his cigarette with a fire brand held on the tongue of the chief.

OTHER DANCES PERFORMED

Other dances performed were the Partridge dance, the dance, the Bonnet dance which depicts the Indian maidens sorrowing for the dead warriors, and the Eagle dance. This was a very amusing spectacle in which the Indian brave literally gives the shirt off his back to his Indian maiden. Various uses of the Indian blanket were demonstrated.

Members of the troup participating in the dances were Linda Laford of the Ojibway tribe from Manitoulin Island, Jeanne Corbiere of Garden River, Ont., and Sam Sandy of the Cree tribe from Moosonee, Ont.

Master of ceremonies for the evening was Laurie Claus of the Mohawk tribe from Tyendinaga Reserve, who also kept time with the tom toms for the Indian dancers.

This group is outstanding with their costumes and authenticity of the dances and are booked to appear on the grandstand at the Canadian National Exhibition this year.

At the close of the evening delicious Indian corn soup was served to all.

Home Nursing Course Ends With Ceremony

DESERONTO — Thursday, April 22, a graduation ceremony was held for the participants of the Home Nursing Course sponsored by the Deseronto branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society.

Mrs. S. Claus Sr., Mrs. G. Martin, Mrs. D. Detlor, Mrs. R. Huffman, Mrs. G. Jackson, Mrs. T. Tinney, Mrs. William Ryan, Mrs. G. Stuart, Mrs. J. Miller, Mrs. G. Clarke, Mrs. I. Shetman, Mrs. T. Lindsay, Mrs. G. Topping and Mrs. M. Ryan were presented with certificates and pins by Mrs. G. Walker, president of the local branch.

Mrs. Fern Rand, Reg. N., director of the course, was also presented with a pin, on acceptance Mrs. Rand stated, she felt anyone who wears this pin carries a certain responsibility where there is illness in the event of a disaster.

Mrs. S. Claus Sr., spoke on behalf of the class, to thank the Red Cross for sponsoring the course and, Mrs. Rand for her leadership.

Lunch was served and a social half hour was enjoyed.

Speakers heard during the course were Colonel Angus Duffy of Emergency Measures Organization, Belleville to Deseronto Firemen who explained and demonstrated various methods of artificial respiration and resuscitation.

BEDLAM — Teen-agers crowd against a fence at Treasure Island Gardens at London, Ont., Monday night to get a look at British singing group the Rolling Stones. Several fans scaled the fence during the performance and chairs were thrown, police were attacked and one policeman had his shirt torn off by hysterical teen-agers. (CP Photo)

Australia Will Send Battalion To Viet Nam

Will Provide 800 Men For Infantry Service

CANBERRA (Reuters) — Prime Minister Sir Robert Menzies announced today that Australia would provide an infantry battalion for service in South Viet Nam.

The government decided to do so after considering a request by the government of South Viet Nam for more Australian military aid, Menzies said.

Menzies said there was "ample evidence to show that with the support of the North Vietnamese regime and other Communist powers, the Viet Cong have been preparing on a more substantial scale than before, insurgency action designed to destroy South Vietnamese government control."

The prime minister said it was Australia's judgment that the decision to commit a battalion, about 800 men, was the most useful additional contribution Australia could make to the defence of the region.

DEMANDS DEBATE

In Sydney, Opposition Leader Arthur Calwell demanded an urgent parliamentary debate on the government's decision to send combat forces to South Viet Nam.

He said the federal parliamentary Labor party would discuss the announcement Tuesday and he would demand the debate after question time that day.

In Hong Kong, Labor Senator R. Turnbull said the sending of SAIGON (AP)—A force of more than 1,000 South Vietnamese troops was trying today to drive a key Viet Cong unit in the Mekong River Delta into the South China Sea.

Government commanders claimed at least 96 guerrillas were killed and 34 captured in the opening phase of the operation in Kien Hoa provinces Wednesday. U.S. helicopter pilots caught about 60 Viet Cong trying to swim an estuary and machine-gunned them in the waters. The Americans estimated they killed about 40 of the swimmers.

The government suspects that arms and munitions from North Viet Nam are landed in the area by junks.

U.S. advisers said the operation was preceded a month ago by an intense bombardment by 41 U.S. Air Force jets. Then leaflets and loudspeaker broadcasts advised all civilians to leave the area to avoid being killed. 4,000 refugees, about half the population of the area, left the swamp for governmental controlled areas nearby, advisers said.

More air strikes, an artillery barrage and shelling from three-inch naval guns and 20-millimetre cannon came Wednesday. Vietnamese Army and ranger troops went ashore in landing craft and helicopters, accompanied by seven armored personnel carrier.

Six American B-57s dropped 13 tons of bombs on North Vietnamese roads Wednesday night leaving large craters in three of the country's main highways. A U.S. spokesman said all the planes returned safely.

The spokesman said 58 aircraft from the carriers Midway and Hancock made 10 strikes against patrol boats and sampans.

U.S. Presidential Envoy Henry Cabot Lodge left Viet Nam today, saying it is inconceivable that the Communists would be defeated or abandoned to the Communists.

Orillia Driver Burns to Death As Truck Upsets

NORTH BAY (CP)—A highway transport driver was burned to death Wednesday night when his vehicle left the road four miles south of here and caught fire while he was trapped in the tractor unit.

He was identified today as Lloyd Irvin, 51, of Orillia.

The tractor-trailer owned by Hoar Transport Co. was headed south with newsprint on the highway 11 when it failed to take a curve and the cab went over a 30-foot embankment. No other vehicles were involved.

Police were trying to pull the driver—apparently not seriously injured—out of the cab when an explosion and fire forced them away. Dripping gasoline had become ignited from the exhaust manifold.

Two policemen were singed but not seriously hurt.

Wrong Town, Wrong Target

SAIGON (Reuters) — The U.S. information service was apparently today corrected a story issued Wednesday which said the South Vietnamese air force strafed and set fire to a residential area at Phu Yen in South Viet Nam.

The agency corrected the name of the town and the target, saying that the planes had attacked Phu Viet, where they set fire to a large military installation and not a large residential area.

THE SCENT OF SMELT! — Night falls over the Moira River in Belleville bringing crowds out to seek the biggest smelt run in years. (See story, pictures page 15.)

Proposes Changes In Act

TORONTO (CP) — Transport Minister Irwin Haskett proposed in the Ontario legislature Wednesday a law that would make drivers turn their headlights on during poor daytime visibility conditions.

Mr. Haskett said drivers ought to switch them on if, because of fog, rain or snow, they could not clearly see cars or pedestrians 500 feet away.

This was one of several amendments to the Highway Traffic Act proposed by Mr. Haskett.

Another suggestion was that the present rule prohibiting television sets operating in cars be changed. Sets would be permitted in the back seat — out of the driver's line of vision.

Mr. Haskett also presented an amendment proposed last January in the speech from the throne. This would establish a licence suspension appeal board to review suspensions made under Section 25 of the act, which gives the minister special discretionary powers to cancel drivers' permits.

MAY SEIZE LICENCE

Under the present section the minister can ignore a lack of demerit points and can seize a licence at his own discretion for such violations as drunken driving.

Last year the minister took

Marines Land to Evacuate Santo Domingo Americans

SANTO DOMINGO (Reuters) — A detachment of 500 U.S. marines have landed here to aid in the evacuation of American citizens as the tide in the see-saw battle to topple the Dominican Republic government rose in favor of the rebels.

U.S. officials said the bloody six-day-old revolt to topple the government of Donald Reid Cabral involved a large number of trained Communist agents.

The 500 marines landed by the helicopter Wednesday night after President Johnson ordered them in because Dominican authorities admitted they could not guarantee the safety of the 2,000 remaining Americans.

About 1,200 were evacuated earlier.

The rebels seek to restore President Juan Bosch, who was deposed 19 months ago and has been in exile in Puerto Rico.

Wednesday night a U.S. embassy spokesman said rebel forces had gained strength and controlled the centre of the capital.

The spokesman said "a pretty savage drumhead kind of justice" was being handed out in the city centre, where 12 persons had been shot by a crowd shouting "Al paredon" ("to the wall").

The hospitals were crowded with wounded, the spokesman said, and at least 30 persons had been killed.

The rebels had set up barricades in several parts of the city and apparently controlled the vital Duarte Bridge between the city and the San Isidro Air Force Base which is the headquarters of the armed forces supporting the Reid regime.

The U.S. spokesman said Reid was "well and in hiding." Earlier reports said he had been given asylum in the Israeli Embassy, but the Israeli government said in Jerusalem that no one had asked for asylum.

Jose Rafael Molina Ureña, the rebel who declared himself acting president pending Bosch's return, had apparently sought asylum in the Colombian

Freedom to Voice Beliefs Not Protected by Courts

TORONTO (CP) — The key civil liberties of free belief and free speech haven't been protected by courts in Ontario, a Toronto law professor told a royal commission on civil rights Wednesday.

Prof. H. W. Arthurs of Osgoode Hall said "too often the basic right to entertain and advocate political, social and religious beliefs has been overwhelmed by such considerations as public order, commercial convenience and legal esthetics."

He told J. C. McRuer, former chief justice of Ontario conducting the one-man inquiry for the provincial government, that "recent decisions in the Ontario courts and the Supreme Court of Canada make sorry reading for the civil libertarian in this province."

He added there should be a bill of rights built into the constitution that would guide judges in defence of freedom of speech.

Lawyer Stanley Simpson, speaking for the Ontario Building and Construction Trades Council, told the inquiry that courts had severely restricted freedom of speech by limiting the rights of unions to picket.

He presented a brief recommending a law outlining the rights and limitations on picketing and said the labor relations board should administer the law and criticized judges who grant temporary injunctions and orders against picketing.

He told former Ontario chief justice C. McRuer of a judgment handed down by Ontario Supreme Court Justice Leo Landreville.

"(Picketing) constitutes . . . a conspiracy and a nuisance," the judgment said in part.

Mr. Justice McRuer agreed with Mr. Simpson that the ruling "unhappily expressed" and added that "other judges would not have written it that way."

Toronto's chief coroner, Dr. Morton Shulman, said in a brief he is important to a coroner, but medical experience is vital. A coroner should have access to legal advice, he added, although some Crown attorneys have refused to attend inquests.

Suspense Element Lacking

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP) — The life of the minority Liberal government goes on the line again today in the Commons but the element of suspense is lacking.

The government is expected to vote down a New Democratic non - confidence motion criticizing the new budget for two omissions: Higher old age pensions and bigger tax cuts for low - income brackets.

The Liberals survived three other tests of confidence in the early days of the 1963 session when opposition MPs who don't want an election stayed away in droves.

The NDP motion was introduced Wednesday by the party's financial critic, Colin Cameron (Nanaimo - Cowichan - The Islands), as the six-day budget debate opened.

Mr. Cameron said he wanted to make a Conservative non-confidence motion more specific.

Ottawa 'March' Fails To Win Commitments

Hays Admits Prices Falling Behind Costs

By KEN CLARK

OTTAWA (CP) — More than 1,000 farmers made a mass appeal to the federal cabinet Wednesday for measures to put more money in the farmer's pocket, but got no definite commitments.

Agriculture Minister Hays told the farmers gathered in a hotel ballroom he recognizes prices of farm products and farm incomes have failed to keep pace with the rising costs of farm operations.

He told his sometimes hostile audience the government has made certain moves, such as the new dairy support program, that indicate its intention to do something about the problem.

A brief from the Ontario Farmers Union, which organized the demonstration, sought higher price support levels for farm products, improved deficiency payments and a temporary national commodity marketing board.

The brief suggested the agricultural stabilization board could handle marketing of farm products until legislation is on the books to permit establishment of national marketing boards.

CITES DANGER

Ignoring occasional hecklers, Mr. Hays said price support levels that everybody would consider desirable only would produce unmarketable surpluses.

The meeting chairman, farm leader Alf Gleave, was forced to take the microphone from Mr. Hays at one point and call for order to halt hecklers. The agriculture minister had fairly clear sailing the rest of the way.

Government officials wondered whether the farm leaders had snubbed Prime Minister Pearson by declining an invitation to meet with him at his office a half hour before the Wednesday session.

Mr. Pearson's office was told by a farm spokesman the group leaders had to attend a conference meeting and could not see Mr. Pearson.

The OFU brief—backed by a 33,000-name petition and endorsed by the National Farmers Union—said it is essential for the federal government to "immediately implement a comprehensive farm price policy that will enable the survival of the family farm in Canada."

MAY DEMONSTRATE AGAIN

After Mr. Hay's rapid-fire reply to the brief, Roy Atkinson, president of the National Farmers Union, told him and three

Dief Tours Quebec To Lasso Votes

By CY FOX

MONTREAL (CP) — Opposition Leader Diefenbaker confessed to a few flaws in his personal bilingual equipment Wednesday but expressed confidence about his party's prospects in largely French - speaking Quebec.

"If these are ashes, I've seen today a phoenix rise from the ashes," Mr. Diefenbaker said of his Conservative organization in the province.

Mention of the recent departure from Tory ranks of former Quebec Conservative Leader Leon Balcer left the Opposition leader nonplussed as he confronted Montreal reporters at a press conference.

Mr. Diefenbaker, now the Independent member of Parliament for Prairie-Riverest, was quizzed as making a veiled reference to "Diefenbaker and his Western cowboys."

LIKELY TO RIDE RANGE

Mr. Diefenbaker, who sits for Prince Albert, Sask., in the Commons, said:

"Mr. Balcer for a long time apparently liked to ride—on the range. But we found he liked to determine the direction of all those in the corral and outside."

He remained unperturbed at chuckles by five Tory MPs from Quebec who flanked their leader at the conference.

Mr. Diefenbaker was in Montreal to make a speech. He acted like a campaigner out to lasso votes but showed no concern that a federal election is actually near.

"After the Gordon budget (brought down by the finance minister Monday night), and the cold reception it has received, any idea that it was an election budget would have to be given second thoughts," he said.

Many of the interviewing reporters were French - speaking and one asked whether Mr. Diefenbaker thought national

Misinterpreted Order Is Blamed For Fatal Rail Crash in North

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: A complex low pressure system crossing Hudson Bay this morning will sweep warm air into northern sections of the province today and temperatures are expected to rise into the 70s at some localities above the upper lakes. It will be somewhat cooler in southern Ontario but a fine spring day nonetheless.

On Friday some localities in the lower lakes regions have a chance of hitting 75 to 80 figures.

KIRKLAND LAKE, Ont. (CP) — A coroner's jury Wednesday found a misinterpreted order sent to Ontario Northland Railway trains into a head-on collision three miles east of here Feb. 26 that killed two men.

Carl Hoaston, 54, and Allan Wheler, 30, both of Englehart, died with the snowplow they were riding at the head of a westbound work train collided with an eastbound freight.

The jury found an order to the work train crew to clear the tracks for a westbound freight after 4 p.m. followed an earlier order to clear for an eastbound after 3 p.m. The word "west" was missed by the train crew in the second order and they believed they had an extra hour before the eastbound freight was due.

The jury also found a contributing factor was the inability of the work train to communicate with the freight. It recommended that all radio equipment be kept in proper working order.

Evidence was that the radio equipment aboard the freight was not working at the time of the accident.

The jury further recommended that the railroad consider providing a quicker means of escape from snowplows. The only exist was at the rear of the unit.

Three Sailors Are Guinea Pigs In Tests of 100-ton Hydrofoil Boat

OTTAWA (CP)—Three Canadian sailors are spending two months on the bounding main in a mechanical engineering laboratory of the National Research Council here.

They are the human guinea pigs in this experiment: How well sailors get in the navy's 100-ton hydrofoil boat?

The 150-foot boat will ride 11½ feet out of the water on wing-like hydrofoils when she hits speeds up to 60 knots. The boat is scheduled to begin sea trials next year.

NRC has rigged up an exotic mechanism with a bunk which dips, rolls, pitches and tosses.

Into this climb AB. Ronald Hubbard, 19, and OS. Claude Boulegon, 19, both of St. Catharines, and AB. Lorne Laruc, 23, of Pembroke, to ride out mechanically-created storms.

Boulegon, who has served in the aircraft carrier Bonaventure, said in an interview he finds the rolling and pitching worse than in the carrier.

"But I'd still like to ride the hydrofoil, mostly because of the speed," he said.

Hubbard, who has served in destroyers and frigates, said his current tossings and turnings aren't as bad as those experienced in a couple of bad storms he'd been through.

"We slept pretty well but woke up every two or three hours," Hubbard said.

NRC, the navy and the Institute of Aviation Medicine hope to obtain answers to such questions as: What effect does the hydrofoil have on the crew? Can they eat and sleep in enough comfort to avoid that draggy feeling all day long? Can they read dials and operate levers in a speeded craft in bad weather?

The scientists engaged in this project couldn't simply ask old salts what it's like in rough seas because conditions in a hydrofoil are classed as "none-what unusual."

Sailors in the navy's hydrofoil may have to wear crash helmets like jet pilots and be strapped into seats when the boat is operating at high speeds.

The navy is hoping that the hydrofoil will provide the answer to its need for a fast, relatively inexpensive anti-submarine ship.

Realtor Sales Exceed Pace Set by Assoc. Last Year

More than a million and a half dollars worth of business was done in 1964 by Belleville realtors and so far this year sales have slightly exceeded last year's pace, members of the Belleville Real Estate Board were told last night.

The occasion was installation night for the board's 1963 officers who were installed by L. G. Found, regional vice president for Eastern Ontario.

James Fox is the new president of the local real estate board with Bev Foster vice president and Ed. McKinney as secretary.

Directors include Ted Saunders, Gordon Woods and Bill McCormick.

Mr. Found congratulated members of the local board for their sales record of last year and said statistics revealed sales so far in 1964 were ahead of last year.

One new member, Roger Wambolt representing King Edward division of Central Mortgage and Housing, was admitted. In the real estate group, bringing to 17 the number of member firms. Including salesmen, the local group has close to 60 members.

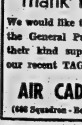
Death Accident Finding of Coroner's Jury

A coroner's jury last night in Belleville returned a verdict of accidental death in a three-week-old Highway 2 car crash that took the life of a Trenton-based airman.

Instantly killed March 30, when his car ran into a tow-truck hauling an automobile from a ditch near the Bay of Quinte Country Club was Flight Sergeant Wayne Wesman, 21.



The jury made one recommendation governing use of tires at accident scenes should also apply to tow trucks engaged in similar operations.

The recommendation did not specify whether the suggestion should apply on municipal, as well as provincial thoroughfares.

Prelude to the fatal incident began when the automobile of Adam Chalmers became stuck on the roadside while backing it in a driveway shortly before 9 p.m. A tow truck was called from a nearby highway service station.

Wesman's car crumpled itself against the truck and, Provincial Police Constables Jack Chase and Charles Rowsome told the inquest, no skid marks were found at the scene.

Belleville General Hospital pathologist Alex Sutu said tests showed 2.1 parts alcohol in the airman's bloodstream. "Intoxication," he said, "was estimated in the area of 1.5 parts."

The Byron Street home of Dr. and Mrs. W. A. L. McDonald yesterday was the scene of the most successful Victorian Order of Nurses' Spring Tea to date. Hundreds of Trenton ladies attended the event in the century-old home. Legend has it that a four-year-old Trenton girl once saw a ghost in the hall of the stately home. It was a friendly ghost, however, as "he" said, "Don't be afraid, little girl."

Pouring tea at yesterday's VON tea in the Byron Street home of Dr. and Mrs. W. A. L. McDonald, was Trenton's First Lady, Mrs. James MacDonald, the wife of the mayor. In the picture, she offers a cup of tea to the charming hostess, Mrs. W. A. L. McDonald.

Shooting starts at 6.30 p.m. and will be held each Tuesday.

REJECTS FRENCH CLASSES

OTTAWA (CP) — The management committee of the Ottawa public school board has turned thumbs down on French-speaking classes in its school system. The decision was made at a committee meeting Tuesday after it had considered a proposal to set up a special grade 1-4 French - speaking class for pupils whose mother tongue is French. The committee found only 14 such pupils.

Victorian Order of Nurses' Spring Tea Much Enjoyed

TRENTON — They came in their hundreds . . . and jammed, pushed and wiggled their way in to the annual Victorian Order of Nurses' Spring Tea in the Byron Street home of Dr. and Mrs. W. A. L. McDonald. New high hats were much in evidence, as were Easter outfits, which have hardly had a chance for an airing this spring.

Receiving at the door was the charming hostess, Mrs. McDonald, and she was assisted by Mrs. Clifford Miller, the wife of the VON president. Mrs. A. Richards, who handled publicity for the event, took tickets.

In charge of the tea table was Mrs. F. J. Ash, and the tea pourers were Miss Hazel Farley, Mrs. D. James MacDonald, Mrs. J. Beach and Mrs. Ralph Weaver.

Hostesses were Mrs. W. T. Burden and Mi s Mary Margaret Gillies, VON nurse-in-charge.

Assisting in the tea room were Mrs. W. L. Griffiths, Mrs. E. W. Dow, Mrs. W. Alexander, Mrs W W. Weaver, Mrs. H. Hutchison, Mrs. E. M. Parker, Jr., Mrs. Neal Ramsay and Mrs. Carl Weese.

The floral arrangements for the centre table were donated by Thompson's Flower Shop.

In charge of the well-patronized bake table were Mrs. Bruce Ireland, Mrs. William A. Ireland and Mrs. Robert Campbell.

The sewing table and the candy table, which were set up in an upstairs room, were conveyed by Mrs. W. Steenburg, (assisted by Mrs. G. L. McClintock) and Mrs. R. J. Oliver, (assisted by Mrs. M. Rore).

In the kitchen, Mrs. J F. Embleton and Mrs. Daniel Smith held sway.

Ladies attending the tea were encouraged to tour the century old home, and many openly admired the fine pieces of antique furniture, collected over the years by Dr. and Mrs. McDonald.

READS FRENCH

"I read French with the same facility as I read English," the Conservative l e a d e r replied. "But for the life of me . . . you've heard my pronunciation."

"It's awful," someone said, and the Tory chief joined in a wave of laughter.

"I've tried so hard," he added ruefully as the laughter subsided.

He went on to lambaste the Fulton - Favreau formula for constitutional amendments as a "straitjacket" for Confederation and a danger to Quebec.

The formula, worked out as a federal - provincial conference last fall, would provide for amendment of the British North America Act without the need for reference to the British Parliament.

It was named for Justice Minister Favreau and Mr. Diefenbaker's justice minister in the f o r m e r Conservative government, Davie Fulton, some of those ideas are included in it.

CALLS FOR CONFERENCE

In his speech earlier Wednesday to an executives' club and at the press conference he called for the convening of a national constitutional conference, at which federal and provincial legislators, constitutional experts and representatives of all major interests could consider any changes necessary in the Canadian constitution.

The BNA Act should first be transformed into a Canadian statute, he said, and this was something the Fulton-Favreau formula would not achieve.

He said special efforts are necessary to end the "spirit of defeatism in Canada" and to overcome the problems of farmers, economic expansion and automation.

The federal government's new budget left businessmen in the lurch and the ordinary Canadian no better off despite the announced 10-per-cent reduction in income tax.

But, said Mr. Diefenbaker, "to follow Mr. Gordon and the peregrinations of his uncertain mind" is always a difficult proposition.

Week Will Be Set Aside For a Clean-up Campaign

TRENTON — The Trenton Board of Health, meeting yesterday, voted to designate May 19 to May 14 as Clean Up Week in Trenton.

Residents will be asked to collect rubbish in attic and cellar and place it at the curb on garbage days, or on days named especially by town council. Board chairman H. S. Pane will notify council of the board's ruling.

Mr. Pane said, that contrary to general opinion, the garbage men would pick up leaves . . . if they are packed neatly in cardboard boxes.

Board member Miss Marjorie Gothard asked Mr. Pane what progress was being made in the board's campaign to discourage the burning of leaves in the backyard or the street.

"Not too much," said the chairman, "I've asked council to consider other ways of disposing of leaves but have received no answer. They should be reminded once more." The board considers open leaf burning a menace to health and a traffic hazard).

Mr. Pane said he had recently turned down a request to burn a large pile of brush beside a service station. He said that the person concerned had then gone to town engineer Eric Aldersey and received permission.

"The fire department is cooperating one hundred per cent with us and refusing to issue permits for fires." he added, "Council doesn't want to spend any money on health . . . but there's plenty for curbs."

Because the board feels that many houses are being built locally on ground unsuitable for drains, the board will recommend that no building permits be issued until the land has been approved as a building site by Mr. Pane, who is the town's sanitary inspector.

WATER POLLUTION AIRED

On the subject of water pollution, Mr. Pane noted that the new federal budget allowed industries a 50 per cent rebate on income tax if they carried out a program of waste disposal, which would do away with the pollution of waterways near the factories.

Dr. E. W. Dow, MOH, reported to the board that he had contacted the town engineer on several matters brought up at last month's board meeting.

Dr. Dow said the engineer had agreed that something should be done about the ineffectual disposal of sewage at a trailer camp in the east part of town. The owner will be asked to take steps to block onto the town's main.

The engineer was also said to have agreed that arrangements should be made for Rossmore Ave., residents to be provided with a sewer. The new sewer might tie in with sewers relayed in the new W. P. Carswell School, the engineer said.

Arrangements are being made to provide Louis Street with a storm sewer and this should alleviate water "saturation" in this area, and Flindall Street residents will be asked to hook onto a water main rather than getting their water from a well on the street. Although the well is chlorinated, the effect dies out as the persons using water come from areas further down the street from the well.

The next regular board meeting is scheduled for May 19.

Murrow Dies

The death of Edward R. Murrow of cancer severs another link with one of the brightest chapters of broadcast journalism.

During the early days of the Second Great War, Murrow's voice on the radio gave a magic touch of authenticity to news reports from London. In a day when one knew that news was heavily censored, Murrow and his fellow workers, such as Eric Sevareid in Paris and William L. Shirer in Berlin, managed to somehow convey the impression that what they spoke was the truth and, if not the whole truth, at least nothing but the truth. By some subtle tone of voice, they could throw doubt on what they doubted, or stamp with their personal guarantee of accuracy the reports they believed.

Murrow, of course, had a distinguished career in his homeland after those wartime days. His "Person-to-Person" interviews on television were frequently illuminating in bringing forth the true character of celebrities. His appointment as head of the U.S. Information Service was met by his admirers with mixed feelings. Some resented seeing him consent to play the role of what they considered would have to be a propagandist. Others interpreted it as a guarantee of the essential reliability of the Service's reports.

Coming a few days after the death of Quentin Reynolds, one of his most distinguished colleagues in London broadcasting circles at the time of Marvik, Dunkirk and the air war, Murrow's passing is a doubly stirring reminder of the swift passage of the years, and of the decline of broadcast journalism from the days when a few men, privileged to be able to establish a standard of accuracy from the redoubt of official neutrality, gained the confidence of the listening public in a manner not matched today by any individual or network.

The Cancer Problem

Reading one of the latest surveys on the fight against cancer someone was heard to remark, "is there anything that doesn't cause cancer?"

He had a point. Not content with cigarettes and gasoline fumes and industrial smoke, it is now being suggested that drugs used in healing a variety of ailments may be causing the disease. Note, mention made, agents as insecticides, pesticides, fertilizers and preservatives.

A lady phoned this office the other day to voice her concern about a substance used to "tenderize" meat and a chemical which had killed a raspberry bush in her garden. She was concerned, she said, not for herself, but for her grandchildren.

Well, there is ample room for concern, in view of the growing incidence of cancer. On the other hand, not even the researchers can say for certain what causes cancer. Heavy cigarette smoking is thought to be one certain cause of lung cancer, but mystery surrounds other substances such as have mentioned.

Probably the best advice on the subject is that causes and treatment of cancer are best left in the hands of the medical profession and researchers. The public itself stands to gain little by worrying about the scourge.

An Old British Custom

When it comes to marriage the British aristocracy still holds to some of the old traditions and disciplines.

And sometimes this may lead to trouble, as a report from England indicates. A court in Slough, Buckinghamshire, fined Viscount Fielding, 22-year-old son of the Earl of Denbigh, $18 for speeding.

Why was he speeding? "I was on my way to ask a stern father for the hand of his daughter and didn't realize I was speeding," said the young peer.

In the circumstances, the "stern father" would probably agree that Viscount Fielding deserved the hand of his daughter. Arriving at the old man's mansion in a cloud of dust would surely indicate enthusiasm and ardor, as well as a straightforward character.

Pray Where Have Those Absent Conservatives Gone?

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The dismayed Conservatives are soul-searching to discover the reason for their absence — they can do about their dismal record of attendance in the Commons.

All five parties have been under fire in this particular Parliament for what has been charged as chronic absenteeism.

And the Conservatives have a special reason for concern. Critics of Parliament — and as they are legion you may be one — clamor that since MPs now are well-paid $18,000-a-year-man-hunter, the least they could do would be remain on the job.

The charge of absence absenteeism is sometimes a little off base because an MP doing a good job cannot let his voters home doesn't necessarily have to perform it all here in the Commons.

Often he can do more effective work lobbying around the hundred or so government departments, boards, bureaus and agencies for his constituents and the things they need such as new post offices and federal buildings, defence contracts, regional tax incentives, pension adjustments—or, again, at home, meeting and addressing the scores of individual and collective demands for Federal assistance, data, facts and a thousand different things.

He doesn't have to be on call in the Commons, as he may last Parliamentary working day except when votes are scheduled.

MEMBERS ACT

They be should be there, but often isn't.

Especially, the record shows, he isn't there if he happens to be a Conservative.

Why? Instead, he has vanished.

Where exactly, who knows?

The Opposition is in the Parliamentary business of opposing the Administration.

And if ever in this Parliament the Conservative Opposition had a chance to oppose the Administration and make it look silly, it was just before the Easter recess.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker was attacking the Government for failure to clean house in the wake of the scandals. Basing his formal vote-of-confidence challenge to the Government on political morality — or immorality — he had an issue on which the four Opposition groups were united.

Better still, they were united in advance. Publicity for words, Liberal Leader Pearson had proclaimed that he could not support the Government — if he did — on this or other issues — if the question was that of administrative immorality.

So did both New Democratic Leader Douglas and Creditiste Leader Caouette.

This show-down vote was scheduled. Every MP for days knew it was coming, knew the day and knew the hour.

So it was with no great surprise vote. No MP could plead he didn't know about it, and know with its significance.

But when it came, only 93 Conservatives, New Democrats, Socreds and Creditistes were there. And the Government won easily with 109 Liberal MPs there to vote. The Opposition had laughed and laugh at an Opposition that lacked both the political courage and the discipline to muster a meaningful vote.

DON'T WANT ELECTION

Those 93 votes of combined four - party Opposition were only one less than the Conservatives. Conservatives could have marshalled—if had had been there.

Instead, the Conservatives had an absentee rate of about 30 percent, registering only 66 votes of a total 265.

The New Democrats were even worse, with only 10 of their 18 MPs voting.

The Socreds had six of their nine MPs there to vote, and had all of among the Opposition groups were the Creditistes with 11, of 13 present and voting.

Now, what about those 38 Conservatives absentees?

Five were ill and couldn't be there. And that is confirmed. The others?

They all had reasons or excuses.

But not all of them were convincing — especially when they knew this not only to be the crucial vote of the Session with the splintered Opposition united for the first time and enthusiastically able to topple the Government, but knew exactly, to the hour and the minute, when it would be called.

There are two conclusions:

1. Some, at least, of the absentees were using this as another device to further oppose John Diefenbaker's leadership;

2. Others were plainly showing they didn't want—for a great variety of personal reasons—a snap election.

Just what might be done about it is the problem currently occupying Diefenbaker and his colleagues.

Ironically, it is just possible those Conservatives who chickened out on the show-down vote because they wanted to avoid any election have wasted their time. For when this was written, there was a definite rumor that night after the budget, the prime minister is having the whistle.

Youngest Is Frequently The Smartest

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Purely Personal Prejudices: Research indicates that the youngest child in a family tends to be the smartest; which simply suggests that the youngest child learns more from its older brothers or sisters than they learned from their parents.

On the whole, I'm glad to think that the affluent have more money than they really have; while the affluent think that the poor cannot really be as poor as they seem to be.

We feel easier with a famous figure when we can grasp a weakness or foible of his: Churchill's fondness for fast cigars and strong brandy endeared him to millions of non-Britons, while Dr. Gallup's affinity has done much to alienate millions of non-Frenchmen.

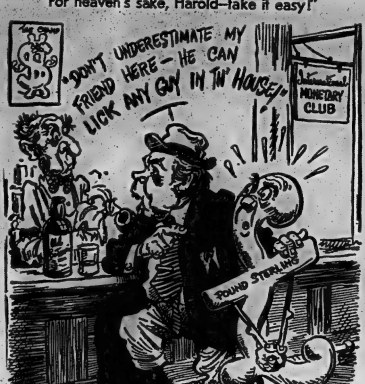
Speaking of politicians, I would never vote for a candidate who makes use of a sound-truck, on the theory that a man who doesn't grant me the right to hear him for a potential sentence, wouldn't see any reason to reject a candidate who forced us to look at his billboards?

Chronic complainers remind me of Oliver Herford's penetrating comment: "If some people got their deserts, they'd be left complain about being deprived of their wrongs."

We pervert names, as well as other words, to our own use, regardless of their original significance: for example, "epicurean" was not an "epicurean," as we understand the word today; Midas did not have the "golden touch" was a curse to Midas, rather than the blessing we have turned it into.

The personal tragedy of the 19th century was the young woman forced by her family to marry against her will; the personal tragedy of our time is the young man who doesn't get his family's position to enter a white-collar occupation against his will, temperament and talents.

Those who prescribe "back to the woodshed" as a cure for juvenile delinquency don't prescribe "back to the buckboard" as a cure for the rising rate of auto fatalities, or "back to the farm" as a cure for the increasing congestion of metropolitan areas; it is as impossible to "go back" in the treatment of personal problems as of technical and physical problems.



Great ideas take their revenge upon their opponents, by eventually fixing the terms in which to use them, despite their conscious dislike, the basic ideas of Freud for instance, are now unconscious assumptions today even of people who think they disagree with Freudianism.

Both "love" and "hate" are distortions of reality — but the former is a distortion that simplifies reality, while the latter diminishes it.

Canadian corporations complain of the high rate of taxes. But they're much better off than some. In Sarnia, for example, tax rates are 99 per cent on profits over $63,450 for domestic companies and 85 per cent for non-resident companies.

Aneurysm Blowout Danger, Favors Removal if Possible

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: What about an aneurysm on the leg directly behind the knee? Is an operation necessary? Is it dangerous to let be? If not, what results can one expect? — Mrs. W. H.

Let's discuss aneurysms in general, not just those behind the knee.

An aneurysm is a weak place in a blood vessel. If you had a bulgy place in a tire on your car, you wouldn't "just let it go." You would know that it might not be long before the tire altogether, and could, in some circumstances, cause a bad accident.

So consider an aneurysm in exactly the same way.

There are different types of aneurysms, and most of the differences are medically technical and you wouldn't be interested in them. But there's one type of so-called "dissecting aneurysm," which you should know about. In it, the weak spot develops between the inner and outer layers of the blood vessel. Gradually the pressure pushes the gap along between these layers, so the weakened area becomes bigger and bigger. This is continues for quite a long time. Sometimes.

What if the aneurysm finally bursts? Blood escapes and seeps through the surrounding tissues. The amount of pain varies, from none to quite a lot, depending on the location and other circumstances. So does the danger. But at best it is a serious condition, and in some cases it can be permanently disabling or even fatal.

If an aneurysm bursts in the brain, we have a "stroke." That is an example which is sometimes gloomy, in that there is scant if any chance of finding it in advance, and after it happens the outlook depends on whether the "blowout" has been mild or severe. But you see the point.

If the aneurysm exists high in the chest, in the all-important artery (the aorta) leading from the heart, there is the added risk that the bulging may put pressure on other structures, and cause trouble and discomfort. This, however, is not an unmixed evil. It is also a warning that trouble is developing and ought to be corrected.

As in the area behind the knee that is the popliteal artery, a large one, running through soft tissue and hence not strongly supported.

It is not by any means simple to correct such a weak place, but it has been done many times by removing the affected section and replacing it with tubing made of woven plastic. Living tissue grows into the "weave" of the fabric, and what was weak becomes strong.

Whether such surgery is feasible in any given case depends on so many technical factors that I can't discuss them here. But if your doctor recommends surgery, say yes. Refuse, and you have to take your chances on losing the use of the leg, or formation of clots which carry later stray and cause serious consequences elsewhere, as in the heart, lung, brain or kidneys.

Some aneurysms cannot be foreseen or readily identified when they develop. Some, when found, may be too ticklish to permit surgery. Others can safely be corrected before they become disastrous, so I am all in favor of correcting those which can be corrected.

Dear Dr. Molner: My mother, who is a waitress at night, stops after work and drinks beer with her friends. After she gets home she very soon visits the bathroom once and sometimes twice. Does the beer affect bowel action? — Mrs. W. F.

Yes, for some people beer can cause diarrhea.

Note to Mrs. A. Q.: Yes, if all but the head of a lamprey is expelled, the head will grow a new body.

Know Little About Fish

Picton Advocate

Fish is said to be brain food, but it doesn't provide enough for most people to distinguish one fish dish from another.

Several members of the Nova Scotia government fisheries committee attended a luncheon at the fisheries school in Pictou.

Fish was served. It was nice and white and tasty.

When someone asked what kind it was, no person rushed in with an answer.

After a moment or two, a member of the legislature whose riding has many fishermen suggested it was cod. A couple of others agreed.

After the luncheon was over, The Advocate editor went into the kitchen and asked the chef, "Was that cod we had?"

She had a big laugh and said, "You live in a fishing town and you don't know your fish?" It was sole.

This is undoubtedly one of the reasons Canadians consume less fish per capita than people in most other countries.

We don't even know our own fish when our own neighbors are fishermen.

There's a job here for the department of fisheries.

To provide a better home market for fishermen a start could be made by teaching Canadians some of the basic fish dishes.

Action of the elements on a stone facade in the outer walls of the Corby Public Library is resulting in a potential danger to persons passing beneath. It was revealed following the regular meeting of the library board last week. Recently a large slab of stone, part of the facade on the west part of the building, crashed off even with the stone wall and crashed to the lawn beneath.

A local stone mason ascertained the reason for the falling stone indicated it was the result of weather action in gradually weakening the rock grain with a result that it crashed off even with the wall. Had the stone facade been located with the grain running at right angles to the wall, the trouble would not have developed.

Space-age Training Available to Cadets

The youth with stars in his eyes these days can discover more about them while still keeping his feet firmly on the ground.

The happy space-age combination is provided by Belleville Air Cadets' training schedule.

The program receives added emphasis this week by the fact it is Air Cadet Week in Canada.

Last weekend local teenagers in the airforce blue of Belleville's 608 Squadron were out and about city streets tagging for funds — and netted $600.

The cash is put to good use —as any citizen interested may find out on a brief any Wednesday evening to Belleville Armouries.

Here, the cadets drill for a time, in the time-tried tradition known as square-bashing.

For the rest they devote their more-than-two-hour turnout to all the basic tenets of flight.

But, since this is the 1960's, something new has been added.

"Now," says commanding officer Flight Lieutenant Bill Brown proudly, "we are going into some space technology. In this day and age it's only a natural advance."

The four-year-course — for youth between 14 and 19 years of age — has other advantages, notably those of wider communication among like age groups.

Linked with national and international programs, it provides a means of travel and experience as a bonus to the enthusiastic, the flight lieutenant notes.

Calls Pact Canadian 'Piracy'

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — The auto industry's fight against Canada's "piracy" of America's production and jobs.

Canadian efforts to boost output in its auto industry — one-fifth of that in the U.S. — constitutes a "seemingly disguised raid on the U.S. market to be accomplished by employment of undeniably unfair means," Washington lawyer Wm. E. McConley told the ways and means committee of the House of Representatives.

"Canada is after U.S. production and does not care how this piracy is accomplished," he said.

He also suggested, under questioning by Republican Johnsen of Wisconsin, that Canada is so bound by the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade that in effect it would have to live with its big auto pact dutch with the U.S. if there were no U.S. - Canada agreement.

The unilateral action by Canada to raise its tariffs or otherwise make it more difficult for U.S. to sell in Canada might make Canada liable to U.S. claims for compensation, he said.

SPEAKS FOR CITY

McConley was testifying on behalf of the Industrial Committee of Paducah, Ky., which he said is an organization concerned with the industrial welfare of the community. He said it opposes any new agreement with Canada - U.S. agreement which would abolish tariffs at the manufacturer level for most North American motor vehicles and their original parts.

Those included a threat seen to the future of the Modine Manufacturing Co., third largest plant in the Kentucky town. Modine, which turns out radiators, forced U.S. government scrutiny last year of the previous Canadian auto - manufacturing plan. This plan was replaced by the existing agreement before the government study was completed but the Paducah committee has also filed a complaint against the new agreement.

McConley's case disputed previous assertions by U.S. government witnesses and the auto makers that Canada's market growth will absorb much of the increase planned for Canadian plants. It is held that the U.S. industry—at least over the longer haul—can expect to preserve or expand its share of the Canadian market and continue to enjoy a hefty trading surplus which has been running in excess of $200,000,000 annually.

WILL INCREASE

Under side agreements with the four main Canadian auto makers, Canada's output over a three-year period ending in 1968 is to increase beyond the level of last year by $260,000,000 in Canadian funds. This is beyond normal market expansion.

McConley contended Wednesday that the Canadian government in effect is continuing an illegal export subsidy by keeping its tariff for the manufacturers. He said this runs at a rate of $60,000,000 annually.

He also assumed that every dollar of the required $260,000,000 increase in production will be sold in the U.S., with serious disruption resulting.

He attributed this theory to the fact the U.S. is removing its tariffs too, which would give entry to the higher-cost Canadian cars and parts.

McConley was the first witness for the opposition in the study of the agreement begun Tuesday. The hearing is scheduled to end today. Witnesses will include the United Auto Workers, which has most of the workers in the auto industries of each country. The UAW supports the agreement.

ENDORSE PACT

In other testimony Wednesday, the American parents of the four main Canadian car makers — General Motors, Chrysler, Ford and American Motors — each endorsed the agreement. They said it is a far superior alternative to the possibility that Canada might turn to more restrictions to increase her production.

Republican Congressman Thomas Curtis, Missouri, called the agreement a "neat little cartel setup" benefitting the car makers.

MAY HEAD INSTITUTE

OTTAWA (CP) — Dr. Wilder Penfield of Montreal, world-famous neuro - surgeon and writer, is expected to be elected the first president of the Variety Institute of the Family at Government House Friday, institution to relieve farmers from the "cost-price squeeze." Mr. Douglas said farm costs have increased out of proportion to prices.

Finance Minister Gordon told the Commons in reply to questions that changes in income tax regulations announced in Monday's budget, will permit farmers to claim deductions for making their representations.

During the question-and-answer period with Mr. Hays, Alfred D. Hales (PC—Wellington South) asked when the government would implement the report of the late Turgeon board, which suggested a higher duty on imported live turkeys. Mr. Hays said the world "is taken care of in due time."

Australia

Australian troops to fight the Viet Cong would do incalculable harm to the country's prestige in Asia.

Australia should send troops only at the request of the United Nations, he said.

In a simultaneous statement Defence Minister Senator Shane Paltridge said the first battalion of the Royal Australian Regiment would be deployed, with 30 Air Force, to secure specific areas in South Viet Nam.

Australia already has in South Viet Nam about 100 public combat advisers and a Australian Air Force transport unit. The jungle advisers, the their U.S. counterparts, are not classified as combat troops. But they have been in combat areas for months and have suffered casualties in action, including one killed.

In Wellington, Prime Minister Keith Holyoake said today New Zealand might send troops to South Viet Nam in a combatant role at any time but at present had no plans to do so.

Holyoake said that about a year ago it was decided to send 26 army engineers to South Viet Nam in a non-combatant role.

Memoies read to Parliament a letter from President Johnson thanking Australia for its support.

The president said the Australian action proved once again the deep ties between Australia and the U.S. in the defence of freedom in Southeast Asia.

Defence Minister Paltridge said the battalion had undergone rigorous training and preparation for operation in a Southeast Asian theatre.

He said that a number of officers and NCO's in the battalion had seen active service during the Second World War and in Korea and the Malaysian emergency.

AID IN MALAYSIA

An Australian battalion was sent to Malaysia to help local and British security forces combat Indonesian incursions.

The U.S. ambassador to South Viet Nam, Maxwell D. Taylor, told Italian newspaper men earlier this month that "aside from the United States, the nationals of supporting nations in South Viet Nam number over 3,000." He said 37 nations have provided support or are about to give support to South Viet Nam.

The United States at present has about 32,000 troops serving in South Viet Nam. There have been reports that the number may be increased by more than 5,000 in the next two months.

At Ottawa, officials recalled that Prime Minister Pearson has said repeatedly that only under the United Nations flag would Canadian troops conceivably be sent to Viet Nam.

Embassy, the spokesman said.

The rebels were led by Col. Francisco Caamano and Hermando Ramirez, both army officers, the U.S. spokesman said.

Brig.-Gen. Elias Wessin y Wessin, the military strong man who toppled Bosch's government in September, 1963, was believed to be at the San Isidro base. The Reid government was believed to have the support of virtually all the armed forces despite losing control of central Santo Domingo.

A new three-man military junta headed by Col. Pedro Benoit was named in a broadcast by Radio San Isidro.

The broadcast warned the public to stay away from all places where there were rebels, as they would be bombarded. It also said the new junta would promote "free and democratic elections."

The capital city was without electricity and radio, a U.S. spokesman said. The described the situation as very fluid, and said it was difficult to know what might happen.

The marines from the U.S.S. Boxer were camped on a pole 15 kl near the hotel where Americans have assembled for evacuation.

A spokesman said the Marines' action would depend on the development of the confused political and military situation. He said they had not taken sides in the revolt and the U.S. was not intervening in Dominican Republic internal affairs.

RENEW YOUTH SERVICE

The Lutheran Church of America decided at a recent meeting to reorganize its youth service completely.

other cabinet ministers on the platform that unless action is taken, more demonstrations are in the offing.

Trade Minister Sharp and Forestry Minister Hays also were served with Mr. Hays on the cabinet agriculture committee, and Veterans Minister Lamoureux were also on the platform, but did not speak.

The group complained that prices of manufacturing milk will receive less than an acceptable minimum of $5.30 a hundred-weight under the new dairy program. Mr. Hays said they would get the $5.30 or he would resign.

He said he was surprised at criticism of the new dairy program, "which is designed to do just what the resolutions naming recognize the need for better prices."

Dealing with another hassle, he said the dairy products board is not a suitable agency to handle the milk. When it went into marketing milk 20 years ago, it had a depressing influence on the market.

Mr. Hays also said some of the figures in the brief in relation to support levels and other matters were wrongly interpreted.

HUNT ADJUST

The only answer to the problem of fluid milk surpluses, he said, is for local authorities to adjust zoning to discourage fluid milk shippers from producing surpluses.

Mr. Hays later told the Commons he expects this government to do more for the farmers than any other.

In reply to a series of questions on the meeting, Mr. Hays said all of their problems are under consideration.

He had been asked by T. C. Douglas, leader of the New Democratic Party, whether the government is planning any so-

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM KENDRICK

Kendrick — Belch

St. John's United Church, Tweed, was the scene of a lovely wedding on Saturday, April 16, when Sylvia Belch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Belch of Tweed was united in marriage to William Kendrick of London, Ontario. Rev. J. Payton officiated at the ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, and gowned in a floor-length white satin dress, with wrist-length sleeves and lace-appliqued neckline and skirt, carried a cascade bouquet of lily-of-the-valley, ivy and stephanotis, centred with a large white orchid. Her shoulder-length net veil fell from a crown of seed pearls and teardrop crystals.

Attending as bridesmaid was her sister, Margaret, and as maid-of-honor, Anne Rashotte. They were gowned in golden crystal peach with elbow-length jackets and matching headdress and carried nosegays of gold and mauve chrysanthemums with lily-of-the-valley.

The bridegroom's attendant was Kenneth Young of Ottawa. The bridegroom's twin brothers, Rick and Ronny, ushered the guests.

Kenny Bronson as soloist, was accompanied by Fred Porter at the organ.

The bride's mother wore a turquoise lace and chiffon dress and tulle hat to match. A mink stole completed her outfit.

St. Mrs. Clarke Kendrick was also dressed in pink lace and matching hat.

Wedding breakfast was served in the church parlors by the United Church Women.

For a wedding trip to Pennsylvania the bride wore a fawn-colored woollen suit and dark brown hat with corsage of Orange Delight roses.

The couple will reside in London, Ontario.

Guests present at the wedding were from Niagara Falls, Chatham, Windsor, Hamilton, Burlington, South Woodslee, Essex, Oakville, Ottawa, Burlington, Belleville, Richmond Hill, Toronto, Marlee, Ottawa, Kingston, Oshawa, Napanee, Cobtam, Thessalon, London and Tweed.

Prior to the wedding, Mendames G. Hodgins, L. Elliott, E. Emerson, R. Wey and L. Quinn gave a miscellaneous shower for the bride at the home of Mrs. A. Quinn. An afternoon shower was held by Mrs. Annie Rashotte. Parties were given by the staff of Oakridge High School, Sylvia's students, and the bridegroom's law firm and some of his other friends. Mrs. Elma Smith, aunt of the groom, entertained the relatives at a dinner party for the bride and bridegroom.

After the wedding rehearsal the bridal party and relatives were entertained at a dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarke Rawson of Actinolite.

WEDDING

HANOSKI — FERGUSON

FRANKFORD — St. Alphonsus Church, Wooler, was the scene of a lovely wedding, Saturday, April 24th at 11 a.m. when Rev. G. F. Sullivan of Wooler united in marriage Sharon Ann Ferguson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas E. Ferguson, Frankford, and Richard Alan Hanoski, son of Mr. John Hanoski of Frankford.

The church was decorated with baskets of gladioli and mums. Mrs. Kathleen Cowan played traditional wedding music.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length white bridal gown of lace over net with lily point sleeves and shoulder-length veil. Her headpiece was a band of pearls and she carried a bouquet of red roses.

The maid of honor was Miss Paulette Ferguson, Frankford, sister of the bride, dressed in a street-length dress of pink nylon with matching jacket with lily point sleeves and white accessories. They wore white nylon bows on their heads and carried cascades of yellow mums.

Flower girl was little Miss Jean Ferguson, niece of the bride who wore a white nylon dress with white accessories and carried a bouquet of white mums tinted with red.

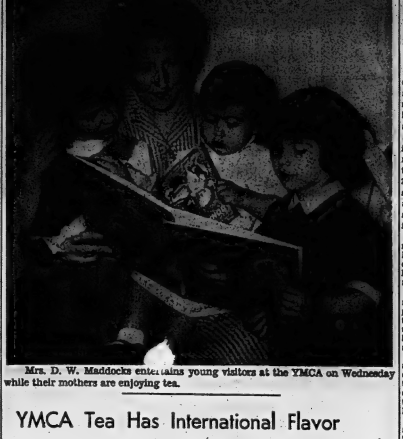
Groomsman was Mr. Roland Hanoski of R. R. 2 Trenton and ushers were Mr. Gordon Spratt of Frankford, and Mr. Theodore Smith of Batawa, brother-in-law of the bride.

The reception was held in Frankford Legion Hall. The bride's mother received the guests wearing a three-piece turquoise suit with white accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

For their wedding trip to points east, the bride chose a beige travelling costume a three-piece blue wool suit with white accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

The couple will reside in Frankford.

Out-of-town guests were present from Toronto, Oshawa, Belleville, Wooler, Trenton, Glen Miller, Foxboro and Batawa.



Church Groups

HI-C GROUP

FRANKFORD — Frankford Hi-C held their regular meeting last Friday in Rose Lowery Hall. The meeting opened with a worship service led by Miss Bernice Grills and Miss Linda Mallory.

The business period was conducted by Mr. Lynn Herrington, chairman for the meeting. An interesting Bible study was conducted by Rev. C. Judd. Mr. Grant Hannah showed pictures. He gave a most enlightening talk on "Kemptville Agricultural College."

Games were played and refreshments served. The evening closed with the singing of Taps.

Mrs. D. W. Maddocks entertains young visitors at the YMCA on Wednesday while their mothers are enjoying tea.

YMCA Tea Has International Flavor

The YMCA's programs in underdeveloped countries is slightly richer today — thanks to a highly developed sense of community co-operation among Belleville women.

The ladies turned out yesterday to attend the "recreation hall of the Y in support of the international organization's World Service.

Inspiration for the event was an afternoon of tea, chat and sale of food balls around the theme of internationalism.

This called out many of the ladies in the native costumes of their countries of origin to add that extra dash of color to the occasion.

Blending the flavor a little more were such additives as background music from Israel, France and Italy; silver teacups from Korea and a Pakistani embroidered tablecloth.

Neither was the event hampered by the lack of family-caretaking.

A special nursery complete with toys, story books and all things guaranteed to pacify restive childhood, was supervised by Mrs. Don Maddocks and Mrs. Glen Shaver.

The ladies, however, were not alone in their contributions to a worthy cause. Toward the end of the afternoon representatives of three YMCA youth groups turned up to present the kitty with $40 they had collected toward world service.

Receiving the guests were Mrs. Hugh Watson, wife of the Y.M.C.A. president; Mrs. F. E. Burrows, chairman of the World Service Committee who convened the tea; and Mrs. R. N. Laughlen, World Service Committee.

The home baking table was in charge of Mrs. W. Holway and Mrs. R. Moorman. Mrs. R. N. Laughlen supervised the decorating.

Miss Mildred Grey looked after the swimming pool, and Mrs. I. Smilman was director of publicity.

Pouring tea during the afternoon were Mrs. W. H. Finkle, Mrs. D. C. Diamondides, Mrs. R. N. Laughlen and Mrs. Gordon Woodcock, who were assisted in serving by many willing workers. Mrs. Vernon Weir supervised the work in the kitchen, and the tearoom was convened by Mrs. D. G. Williams.

Christ Church W. A. Holds 'Pink Tea'

A recent highlight in the centennial celebrations of Christ Church this year was the "Pink Tea" in the Parish hall. The women of this branch of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Anglican Church of Canada enjoyed serving tea to a large number of friends of the auxiliary.

Many women will remember "Mother" talking about the "Pink Teas" that she attended. It was a highlight in the community, and originated because pink was considered feminine and dainty, when the hostess brought out her finest china and served clear tea that almost looked pink in the beautiful cups.

Christ Church has had 100 active years in Women's work, with the Woman's Auxiliary entering the picture in 1906. Prior to that time some missionary work was begun in the children's department. The Afternoon Branch of the W.A. in Christ Church has had many fine enthusiastic leaders, with some exceptional leadership, and also Dominion offices.

During the afternoon a number of the members demonstrated the art of quilting. These women produce a good number of quilts a year, and are known in the district for their fine workmanship.

ATTRACTIVE TEA ROOM

The chairman of the decorating committee was Mrs. W. McLaughlin. Treasurer for the afternoon, Miss Bessie Thomas. The beautifully adorned tea room with its nosegays of pink and white flowers lent a cheery atmosphere. The tea table had a centerpiece of pink and white carnations and snapdragons, and white spider mums, circled with pink tulle. Those pouring were: Mrs. A. Dunlop, Mrs. E. Smith, Mrs. A. S. McConnell, Mrs. R. B. Wright, Mrs. G. Button and Mrs. L. Winters.

The talent table with its pretty embroidered articles, novelties of soap and bathsalts, dolls' clothes and jewellery, was well solicited by the visitors. The bake table with many memories of bake tables in the last 100 years with home baked bread, rolls, pies and cakes were tempting for the modern housewife who doesn't know the long hours of hot ovens, hot kitchens.

Miss Lillian Hart, a local artist and a member of the Afternoon Branch of the W.A. displayed for sale three of her beautiful paintings.

The successful event was convened by Mrs. Ridley Wallbridge and Mrs. Leonard Hall.

Various Activities Planned by Kinettes

TWEED — The regular monthly meeting of Tweed Kinette Club was held at Hotel Tweedsmuir on Monday evening. After dinner the meeting was in charge of the president, Mrs. Marlene Spencer.

A decision was made to the Ladies Auxiliary of the Royal Canadian Legion to help with the fireworks display. There will be a rummage sale held late in May with Mrs. Mary Boncroft being the convener. A report was given on the results of the recent play "Too Many Relatives" which was presented by the Kinette Club. The play will again be presented in Albury.

At the May meeting the annual election will take place and the nominating committee will be Mrs. Helen Hurter and Mrs. Kathy Moffatt.

Mrs. Shirley Smith was appointed delegate to attend the convention which will be held in Cornwall on May 20, 21st and 22nd.

The draw prize was won by Mrs. Pauline Hughes.

Mexican Decor Features OES Fiesta

"Spring Fever," that lethargic condition brought on by warm sunshine and balmy breezes, was further abetted by the weather and the decor of the auditorium of the Masonic Temple, Foster Avenue, on the occasion of "Fiesta Fair," on Wednesday afternoon. The Fair was presented by Minerva Chapter, No. 138, Order of the Eastern Star.

The lobby, in true Mexican siesta style, was colorful with Mexican shawls, ponchos, sombreros, balloons, and paper garlands complete with lifelike sleeping senors and a senorita lolling in a hammock. In contrast to the adobe, two Mexican children seemed very wide awake.

The auditorium proper glowed with all beautiful spring colors, each table being covered in a different color, while overhead amidst paper garlands were flowers, birds and butterflies of all kinds.

The decorations, which created a feeling that spring is at last actually with us, were arranged by Mrs. G. Oliver and Mrs. W. Gray, P.M.

Conveners for "Fiesta Fair" were Mrs. Y. Kimball, P.M., and Mrs. ch. W. Jordan, P.M.

Receiving the guests were Mrs. M. Collyer, W.M., and Mrs. G. Reedell, A.M. Mrs. N. Clarke and Mrs. E. Broad sold tickets at the door.

Displayed to great advantage, for the approval of the guests, articles for sale included a loaded table of mysterious parcels sent from many places; handiwork of aprons, fancy clothes brushes and cleaning gadgets, and delicate and pretty containers for almost everything; a table of salads, one of candy and one of homebaking, each attractive enough to break any resolution of dieting.

Mrs. Lois Clarke displayed one of her own oil paintings, a lovely scene, which should be a treasured joy to the lucky winner.

Mr. A. W. Jordan, Mr. A. Cooper and Mr. W. Adams offered iris and dahlia bulbs and other plants for sale and Mr. W. Marmer sold tickets on well-laden baskets of groceries, which were won by Mrs. Roy Brickman, Mrs. C. Sager and Mrs. H. Spencer.

Tickets were also sold by Mrs. D. Tugnett on a large doll in a cradle, complete with wardrobe, which was won by Mrs. W. Warren.

Conveners of the booths were: home making, Mrs. A. Ireland, Mrs. E. Smith, Mrs. D. Day and Mrs. E. Elgie; candy, Mrs. I. Calvert, Mrs. R. Gray; delicatessen, Mrs. A. Little and Mrs. N. King; parcel post, Mrs. L. Jordon and Mrs. C. Oliver; miscellaneous, Mrs. L. Pound, Mrs. E. Heim, Mrs. J. Cummins and Mrs. F. Cole.

Those present were welcomed to the tea room by the hostesses, Mrs. M. Hunt, Mrs. W. Gunsolus and Mrs. F. Clare. Tickets for the tea were collected by Mrs. M. Moorman, Mrs. V. Brown and Mrs. F. Boulton.

The tea table, a splash of lovely color, was presided over at different intervals during the afternoon, by Mrs. L. Hyde, P.M., Mrs. G. Vanner, P.M., Mrs. Mary Johnson, D.D.G.M., Mrs. R. Grey, P.M., Mrs. Bobbs Locke, W.M. Belleville 56, Mrs. G. Smith, P.M., Mrs. C. Reed, P.M., Mrs. H. Matthews, P.M., Mrs. B. Marsh, P.M., Mrs. N. Cooper, P.M., and Mrs. H. Wilson, P.M.

Mrs. E. Nobes, Mrs. M. Stalker, and Mrs. R. Poste assisted in the tearoom. Serving in the tearoom were other members of the chapter.

Work in the kitchen was supervised by Mrs. K. Bushell.

Close-knit Family Unit On Easter Is.

HALIFAX (CP)—The pastoral calm of remote Easter Island seems to have produced a neuroses-free society where the inhabitants maintain a happy and close-knit family unity.

Dr. Maureen Roberts of Halifax, member of a two-month medical and sociological expedition to the small Pacific Isle 2,000 miles west of Chile, says she found the natives friendly and "laughing a lot. . . . It did seem to be a relatively stress-free life."

"At least we didn't see any neuroticism," she says. And Dr. Roberts says she discovered a casual relationship within families and a highly-developed community spirit.

"For example, if a family moved to Chile, there was no problem about leaving one or two children with aunts and uncles. One woman spoke of her child who turned out to be a niece."

Large families are common among the islanders, Dr. Roberts says. "It's not unusual for there to be 10 or 12 children in one family." Parent-child relationships compare with those of North America.

Dr. Roberts says she noted a slight class distinction among the inhabitants regarding personal possessions, but very little distinction in attitudes toward each other.

"Some of the islanders were better educated and some are vivouly thought well of in the community," she says.

Ann Landers

Unhappy Truth Is Better Than a Candy-coated Lie

DEAR ANN LANDERS — What should a mother tell her 11-year-old son when the boy's father is mentally ill? I've always felt it is needless to burden a child with adult problems.

They learn soon enough that life can be cruel.

About two years ago my husband lost his business. He went into a depression and would not speak to anyone. He began to drink heavily and it became difficult to distinguish between the alcoholism and the sick mind.

Two weeks ago I signed papers which committed him to an institution. I told our son his daddy was taking a vacation, I am exhausted keeping up the pretense but I don't know how else to handle it. Am I doing right by the boy?—ANXIOUS MOTHER.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR MOTHER — No. Please tell your son that daddy is no longer on vacation — that he is ill and had to go to the hospital.

Your son must sense that you are anxious and trying to hide something. This will make him anxious, too. And if you don't let him know there is always a chance that he will learn from outside the home that his father is mentally ill and in the hospital. This would shake his confidence in you and add to your problems.

Children often understand a great deal more than their parents give them credit for. And they adjust better to an unhappy truth than to a candy-coated lie.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am a mother of four children who must work because my husband has asthma and can't hold down a job.

The widow next door calls my husband almost every day to help her out. He has fixed her plumbing, painted her kitchen, put new fixtures in her bathroom and helped her carry barrels from the basement to the attic. Every year he takes off her storm windows and puts up her screens.

When I ask him to go to the store for me he starts to wheeze up a storm and tells me he is a sick man.

If I am being unreasonable I would like you to say so in the paper. — THE NAG. (His name for me.)

DEAR CHUMP: (My name for you) — Any man who is well enough to do all the things you listed should be able to hold down a part-time job. I recommend it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am a woman 70 years old. When my husband died I felt very much alone. It seemed like a good idea to ask my married daughter, her husband and three children to move into my home. They have lived here free from time to time (once for 3 years) so this was nothing new to them.

I pay the taxes, half the utilities, buy my own clothes, pay my own doctor bills, do all the cooking, most of the ironing and I take care of my small grandson while my daughter works with her husband.

Last week I told my daughter I was making out a will and that I wanted everything I own to be divided between her and her brother. She said, "I think you are being unfair. You should leave this house to me."

Actually my daughter and her husband have been able to save a lot of money by living here. They have a free roof, a cook and a built-in nursemaid for their child. They buy only groceries and pay half the utilities. I want to treat my son and daughter equally. If you feel I am wrong please say so. — AN HONEST OPINION WANTED.

DEAR A.H.O.W. — I know of few sentences more grasping and ugly than the ones your daughter uttered. If you want your son and daughter to share equally in your estate, by all means write your will that way.

EVERY CLOD FEELS A STIR OF MIGHT

Dear Sasann: With the good ol' summertime knocking at the garden gate, and dear young seedlings waiting to be gently sprinkled," an extra watering can or two tucked away beside the taps are a delight to any gardener. You've got them, you know, right in your laundry cupboard.

Those large plastic bleach bottles (the kind with the handles) will hold a great deal of water and the cap can be punctured with small holes for a fine spray. This type is perfect for apartment dwellers with large pots of greenery on the patio, or for watering bedding plants that you are starting in the basement. Spills and drips are cut to the minimum.

If you wish a coarser more "speed-out" spray for outdoors, use a larger pick and allow the holes to extend down over the neck of the bottle.

I spread newspapers on the floor and dampen them well first before emptying the contents of my vacuum bag—this helps tremendously to keep down the dust. — Mrs. C. Willing.

Dear Susanna: Grapefruit are a plentiful and such a good buy that I like to serve them once a day. They become a little uninteresting, however, and sometimes it is difficult to get everyone to eat theirs.

Just by chance last evening, I discovered a new, delicious, easy way to serve them. Someone said they were dying for an ice cold drink. Since there didn't happen to be anything interesting like soda pop in the house, I got the idea of juicing a grapefruit in the squeezer the same as one would squeeze an orange. One made a whole glass of juice. We added a sprinkle of sugar and an ice cube for a most delectable drink . . . and small chunks of grapefruit sections floating about don't hurt in the least. — Rose D.

C.A.'s MEET

FRANKFORD — The C.A.'s of Frankford Full Gospel Tabernacle met on Friday evening. Mr. Willard Whitman of R.C.B.C., Peterborough, led the song service. Mr. Richard Patrick led in prayer. Miss Beverly Wannamaker sang a solo, "Jesus, I will Follow Thee." Evangelist "Aunt Betty" Freeman was guest speaker speaking on "Lot."

The service closed with prayer.

FIND LOST ROOM

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP) — A room as big as a house has been discovered on the upper floor of an Auckland hotel, during alterations. The owners thought the blank space on their plans belonged to the house next door, but when they took down an old wall they found an empty space 40 by 26 feet and 15 feet high.

SESAME SEED ROLLS FOR 8

"Mum, are there any more of those seedy rolls?" John's mother had, on impulse, invited three more people for Sunday night's supper than she had planned for when buying her groceries. So one dozen sesame rolls had to stretch for eight people. What three of them are boys it cannot be done.

But they were so good I decided to make them for a party for eight that I was having. From the recipe which I am giving you below I had 36 sesame seed rolls.

Incidentally I served these with a tasty Turkey Mulligatawny followed by Seafood Scallop in Shells, Hikers' tossed salad and a fresh refrigerator pie — recipes for all of which will be in Healthood, show up here next week.

Dinner Menus

by Mary Moore

THURSDAY

Grilled Beef Patties; Noodles Romanoff; Rosebud Beets; Spinach, Tomato and Shredded Cauliflower Salad with Chive Dressing; Ice Cream with Fruit Salad Topping; Tea.

SUNDAY

Cream - Baked Chicken; Glazed Canadian Carrots; Baked Stuffed Potatoes; Mixed Bowl Salad; Apple Dessert Crisp (see Tuesday); 10% Cream; Coffee.

SESAME ROLLS (makes 36):

1¼ cups milk, scalded, 1 package granular yeast (fresh — erase the old stamp), 1 tablespoon sugar, ½ cup lukewarm water, 2 teaspoons salt, 2 tablespoons sugar, ½ cup shortening (¼ cup each butter and shortening recommended), 1 egg, 5 cups sifted all-purpose flour, 1 beaten egg (for topping), sesame seeds — about 1/3 cup.

Heat the milk just to scalding point. Measure the lukewarm water in your measuring cup, add the 1 teaspoon sugar, sprinkle yeast on top, give it one stir and let stand for 10 minutes or until it rises to top of cup. Pour the hot milk into a large mixing bowl and add the salt, 2 tablespoons sugar and shortening and let cool to lukewarm — the same temperature as your finger. Now add the risen yeast liquid and then stir in the egg and 3 cups of the sifted flour until incorporated. Add another 3½ cups of flour reserving the last ¼ cup for your kneading board. Mix as well as you can, then turn out on board floured with ¼ cup of the reserved flour and knead 100 times. Return to bowl, cover and let rise until more than doubled. Punch down dough, turn out on board floured with remaining ¼ cup flour and knead 100 times. Shape into long roll and cut into 36 even pieces with sharp knife. Shape them into little football-shaped rolls — tucking ends under. Have ready the sesame seeds and egg in 2 shallow bowls. Dip top of each roll into the beaten egg, then into the sesame seeds. They really cling. Place unseeded side down on greased cookie sheets (you need 3) at least 2½" apart. Let rise until light and puffy — don't hurry them. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. about 12 to 15 minutes, being careful not to burn them. If possible, serve at once and provide plenty of butter.

NOTES:

1) Leftover baked rolls may be freezer-wrapped and frozen. To reheat place in paper bag and heat in oven at 250 deg. Fahr. for ½ hour. 2) The above roll dough may be used for Parkerhouse, Bowknot, Crescent Clovarleaf, Pocketbook Rolls, etc.

PERK UP SALADS

Salad dressings can be improved by blending a finely-chopped hard-boiled egg with each cup of dressing.

MARMORA — Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Brady, McGill Street, celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary on Saturday, April 24th.

Miss Mabel Archer became the bride of Eugene Brady in a ceremony performed by Rev. R. L. Farrell now of Deseronto. The couple were Marmora residents and have always remained in the village, Mr. Brady as an employee of Deloro and now at D. S. and R. in Belleville. Mrs. Brady is an active worker in the community, in the church and I.O.D.E.

Mass was said at Sacred Heart Church by Parish Priest Rev. W. P. Healey when a quartette composed of granddaughters Cathy, Patty-Lee, Christine Scanlon and their father Richard Scanlon sang, accompanied by Mrs. Hugh Brady.

They have one son, Tom, of Marmora and one daughter, Pat, Mrs. Scanlon of Scarborough.

A dinner for 60 was served in the Parish Hall of Sacred Heart when relatives were present from Ottawa; Toronto, Scarborough, Don Mills, Penetang, Brantford, Peterborough, Bowmanville and Campbellford. Mr. Ross Archer flew from Vancouver for the occasion.

Open house was held in the evening when Mrs. F. Franklin and Mrs. J. O. Benor, sisters of the bride, poured tea. Mr. and Mrs. Brady received a purse and many cards of goodwill.

Mother of Year Busily Prepares for Ottawa Trip

WEYBURN, Sask. (CP)—"I have a feeling sometimes there's been a big mistake," says Henriette Van Der Breggen, chosen Canadian Mother of the Year.

Husband Pieter disagrees.

"I have been married for 19 years to this woman," he said, "and in my opinion she is the mother of the world."

Even while busily preparing for her trip to Ottawa May 10 to receive the honor, Mrs. Van Der Breggen refused to let the excitement interfere with one of the essential duties of motherhood.

She worked on plans to hold a birthday party for one of her seven children, two of them adopted.

"You just don't put off birthday parties," she said knowingly.

Mrs. Van Der Breggen, whose activities range from teaching a Bible study class to home nursing for the St. John Ambulance Association, was chosen Mother of the Year in the annual contest sponsored by the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association, topping 600 entries from every province.

In Ottawa she will meet Prime Minister and Mrs. Pearson and Governor-General and Mme. Vanier as well as government officials and representatives of several countries.

A story of international brotherhood, the result of an understanding nature and considerable travel, is one of Mrs. Van Der Breggen's qualities.

BORN IN HOLLAND

Her husband is a mechanical engineer and his work has taken the family from their native Holland to Indonesia, Venezuela, the United States and Canada.

Four of the five children were born in Venezuela and the fifth in Alberta.

The Van Der Breggens believe world government is the key to peace and have tried to prepare the children for world citizenship.

"You get a bit looser in your feelings about nationalities when you have lived in other countries," she says. "You get a view that goes over nationalities."

Mrs. Van Der Breggen said proudly her 16-year-old son, also named Pieter, on his own initiative recently sent a letter to UN Secretary-General U Thant asking about the possibility of becoming a world citizen.

Another of her qualities is that her attitude toward the world is matched by her attitude at home.

"I would like to have love and understanding govern all things. Love is the key to everything."

The family moved to Valley View, Alta., after 14 years in Venezuela and settled here in 1961. Mr. Van Der Breggen is a production manager for a large oil company.

Not content to speak English and Spanish almost as well as her native tongue, Mrs. Van Der Breggen has acquired a working knowledge of German and French and now is studying Japanese.

STARTED SUNDAY SCHOOL

Wherever she has lived Mrs. Van Der Breggen has found time to devote to community and church affairs. In Venezuela she started a Sunday school and in Valley View she and her husband started a teen club in their home.

In this city of 10,000 people 70 miles southeast of Regina, Mrs. Van Der Breggen conducts a Bible study class at Grace United Church, devotes time to the Sunday school library and has at times conducted church services.

She is president of her home and school association and vice-president of the Weyburn Writers' Association, a member of the home nursing division of the St. John Ambulance Association and donates blood regularly.

She has other interests in the literary field, having reviewed books for the United Church Observer, and has also contributed to that magazine.

She has had several articles published by the daily press and now is working on material to contribute to a planned historical book on Weyburn.

A few drops of Resolv on a wool vest keeps it from shrinking, too!

St. Margaret's Guild Holds Tea, Bazaar

A delightful sweet tooth place at St. Matthew's-on-the-Hill Anglican Church recently when members of the Sharonon Guild held an "April Shower" tea and bazaar, under the convenorship of Mrs. C. Brewer.

Mrs. J. A. Dunlop with of the minister warmly greeted the guests at the door, while at the prizes locale Mrs. T. Smith was in charge of ticket sales.

The highlight of the tea room was the prettily appointed tea table centred with a centre piece of golden daffodils and flanked at either end with gleaming silver tea services. The guest tables further carried out the theme of the tea, and were centred with a tiny doll each holding an open umbrella. Here, Mrs. Gorham was in charge assisted by Miss B. Hunt, Miss Wolmo and Mrs. Black.

While the mothers were enjoying a cup of tea Mrs. Lloyd and Mrs. Jeaf looked after the little tots in the nursery.

The kitchen convenor was W. Moore who was aided by Miss Rebner, Mrs. Stewart and Mrs. Idden.

FINE DISPLAY

The various sales tables showed an attractive display of goods with each laden with an array of items and these included the novelty and apron table with Mrs. J. Dodson assisted by Mrs. W. Meens and Mrs. C. Penn in charge; the bake table in charge of Mrs. Bell, Mrs. J. Ritchie and Mrs. Leeming; a fish pond operated by Miss Doctor and the plant table in charge of Mrs. W. Collyer. A table laden with jams, jellies, pickles, and relishes was the contribution of the W.A. with Mrs. J. Bennett and Mrs. Hickering in charge.

Thanks were expressed to each and everyone who helped in any way to make the event a success.

Special Council Session Sets New Mill Rate

CAMPBELLFORD — The Municipal Council met in a special meeting on Wednesday night primarily to set the mill rate.

Clerk E. M. Ibey presented a letter from Ontario Water Resources acknowledging receipt of application for installation of sanitary sewer between Maebet St. and Cromwell. Mr. Sharp of O.W.R. referred to the fact no mention had been made as to what action the Council anticipated taking in regard to sewage disposal. The O.W.R. replied they were reluctant to approve the sanitary sewer application until some information had been received about sewage disposal. Clerk E. M. Ibey said the approval or disapproval of sewers would have a bearing on the planned building of a new community centre.

The clerk was instructed to inform O.W.R. that as yet they had been unable to inspect the different forms of sewage disposal because of winter conditions. A form will be made and information forwarded to O.W.R. Uncontrolled pollution on the Trent above Campbellford is causing some wonder as to why Campbellford is being asked to take action at this time.

Councillor Torrance asked for permission to use some funds from the reserve arena fund to put all specifications for the arena building in the hands of a capable consultant and thus eliminate architect charges. Tenders will be called in the near future. The by-law for necessary closing of a road for arena property will not be considered at County Council until the July meeting.

RATE REDUCED

The mill rate for Campbellford this year has been slightly reduced.

The road and bridge committee has been budgeted at $35,000, an increase of $6,000. This is all time high for this committee and is responsible for an increase in the mill rate of 1.910 mills. Due to increased grants the payable school requisition is reduced by $10,450, the high school school reduced by $6,645. These reductions because of higher budgets in other committees reduced the mill rate only by approximately two mills, leaving a mill levy of 116.1 commercial and 116.1 residential.

Deputy Reeve Locke said the United Counties' road and bridge committee had overspent their budget by $91,000. Clerk E. M. Ibey stated this overspending was more than one-half of total of all service committees in Campbellford council or approximately 30% of the budget for this county council committee.

The mill rate in Campbellford rose 20 mills in the past two years; education costs being less this year. Had the road and bridge budget been held to last year's figure the rate could have been lowered by approximately four mills.

away about 500 licences under these discretionary powers.

Only these cases may be reviewed by the appeal board, to consist of three or more members. Drivers who have lost their licence through court judgments or demerit points will have no recourse to the special appeal board.

Section 2 of the act itself will be changed to switch the discretionary powers from the minister of transport to the registrar of motor vehicles. INCREASES FINES

All Exhibiting Space for Show Now Booked

PICTON (Staff) — Plans are now finalized for the weekend's popular, Kinsmen sponsored, Home and Sports Show. This is an annual event and this year will run for two days beginning Friday evening and running through to Sat. night.

Ronald Hotston, chairman of the show, said that the show has added a further impressive attraction - the flying frogmen from RCAF Station in Trenton. A huge glass tank, 10 feet square will be brought in from Toronto for the performances. All the exhibiting space has been booked and the booths will contain a great variety of displays. Trailers, camping equipment, furniture, appliances and wood carving will also be shown. There will also be a driftwood display and gun collection, he said. The event will be set off this year with a parade from the cenotaph to the fairgrounds.

Confederation Caravan Will Visit District

PICTON (Staff) — The Confederation Caravan will visit Picton in 1967. According to a letter received by the town clerk the caravan consisting of several trailers will make this town a "Port of Call." No firm date has yet been set for the caravan's centennial year visit, but Mrs. George Kleen, chairman of the town council's centennial committee is to meet with representatives of the Ontario centennial branch on May 29.

RENOVATION LIQUIDATION SALE

Ends Saturday at 5.30 p.m.

TIME CAN NOT BE EXTENDED

Last week we were overwhelmed, but there are still hundreds of bargains left. Here's why we've got to liquidate our entire stock — now! Renovations to the inside of our store are now behind by three weeks and we're going to run right into our busiest selling season of the year unless we do something . . . fast! We've been postponing the reconstruction because of the tremendous backlog of merchandise we've collected due to the slow spring selling season. The contractor won't wait any longer and he intends to enforce the terms of his contract. There's no place to go but to a sale. A sale so big that it MUST liquidate everything to the bare walls in order to make room for renovation. Time means money and we're losing both. Most items are priced slightly above cost . . . at cost . . . or below cost in order to move out fast and get the store rebuilt before the really busy season begins. You may never get a chance like this again. GET FIRST CHOICE OF THE PLUMS ONE WEEK ONLY, OR WHILE THE MERCHANDISE LASTS. Time cannot be extended . . .

High School Pairings Is a Daring Project

By JACK HUTTON

A daring project under study since September to "pair" high schools across Canada with schools in other Commonwealth countries has been unveiled by the Canadian Education Association.

And I say brave.

Any student council in search of a 1965-66 project would do well to spend an hour sometime soon talking over this idea with a local school authorities.

The plan works this way. The local school, after considering possibilities with staff and senior students, contacts the CEA, stating a preference inside the commonwealth. Most of the links are expected to be with the developing countries.

A London office will be responsible for putting schools in touch with each other. Once that's done, success of the venture will depend on how the local school responds — and particularly the student body.

The possibilities are unlimited. CEA planners say they expect that students will exchange correspondence, books, pictures, art, tapes, films, portfolios and other objects.

But the contact needn't stop there. Eventually students and teachers may even change places. This, of course, requires an immense amount of liaison and financial backing from somewhere. It wouldn't happen overnight.

HEAVY RESPONSE

Response so far has only confirmed what the project's planners have suspected for a long time: there is an unbelievable hunger across Canada to learn more about other parts of the world.

Almost half the high schools in Alberta and Saskatchewan have already submitted applications with the CEA twin schools.

Applications are expected to come in from Ontario schools very shortly.

The future? Some principals I know expect that almost every large secondary school across Canada will be involved in the project in some way or other. Most will have twin schools overseas.

Any student council that would like to get involved should remember one important fact: this isn't a short-term project. The links will extend far beyond the school career of any student now in a classroom. Local planners will have to think about a continuing school committee.

What are the benefits of such a link?

Every student I know who has visited another country — even for a short time — returns with a broader viewpoint that's hard to define but obvious to see. Correspondence isn't the same thing — but it's the next best.

I always remember a friend who shared an interest in French with me. The year we were both in Grade 12 he was offered the chance to spend a few weeks of summer vacation with a French-speaking family. I was never even close after that to his grasp of the language.

That's the type of reward I mean. A personal contact, either through daily living or correspondence, gives you something you'll never find in books. You are immediately involved.

And, as someone has said, it's pretty hard to get mad at another country if you have a friend there.

Any exploration of this possibility should go through your local principal. But the address for further information is:

AIR CADETS

A belated happy birthday to the Air Cadet League of Canada on its 24th birthday. Twenty-eight thousand cadets are honoring the League in an official week that ends this weekend.

Walk into any RCAF base across Canada and chances are that you'll find graduates of the League in uniform — some of them, in fact, station commanders. The League has trained about 300,000 cadets in war and peace time since 1941.

Cobourg Owns Land Not Water Says Solicitor

COBOURG, Ont. (CP)—For a few hours, Cobourg town councillors had visions of their municipal financial problems being solved with a toll on Great Lakes shipping passing through what may be legally the town limits.

The hopes were dashed, however, when the municipal solicitor advised that the town might own the land under the water of Lake Ontario, but it does not own the water.

At incorporation in 1849, Cobourg town limits were established as being 1.4 miles under the water of Lake Ontario.

In 1958, the town annexed a part of Hamilton Township and town council was told the southern limit of the land was 22.4 miles under the lake.

That would take the town limits to the international boundary and ships using the Canadian side of the lake would be passing through the town, council was told.

RAW REVENUE SOURCE

The Ontario Municipal Board, in a letter to council, said Monday that Cobourg might conceivably have a new source of revenue if it could substantiate a deed from Hamilton Township, approved by the OMB, designating the southern limit of the land annexed in 1958 as the southern boundary of the province.

Town Solicitor Fred C. Richardson said Tuesday, however, that even if the deed is legal, the town could take no action calculated to obstruct navigation on the Great Lakes.

The use of navigable waters is vested in the crown, he said, and no government has the right to deed the water to any other party.

A deed seems to have been made out, he said, to the land under the water, but this would have no effect on the water itself.

More French Federal Police Head for St. Pierre-Miquelon

By DAVE BUTLER

ST. PIERRE, St. Pierre-Miquelon (CP) — More French federal police reinforcements landed here today while the first contingent, which landed several days ago amid simmering labor unrest, assumed the focal point of street protests.

The French frigate Commandant Bourdais steamed from Halifax to these French islands off Newfoundland, after 65 guards landed in Canada Wednesday aboard an Air France airliner. The ship was expected to arrive late in the day.

Spokesmen for the town council and the general council, legislative body in this last remnant of the French colonial empire of North America, have promised a resumption of a general strike will greet any new police landing.

Elected officials and the islands' 5,200 inhabitants—split over proposed general wage increases until the first 67 police landed Sunday from another warship—closed ranks during the week against Paris - appointed Governor Jacques Herry.

ARRANGES STRIKE HALT

Governor Herry, who asked for the police after reporting he had been threatened by unidentified persons, arranged a halt Wednesday in a three-day general strike after meeting with a spokesman for 600 townspeople who marched on his mansion.

Albert Penn, former vice-president of the general council, told the gathering after meetings with the governor and the mayor that they should end the strike.

However, he said it would resume if the first police group, which landed with jeeps, trucks and weapons Saturday night, was not withdrawn within a reasonable time.

And he said it would also resume if the extra police landed today.

A joint committee of the mayor, town council, several members of the general council and union representatives said the trouble "is in the imagination of the governor" and appealed to French Premier Georges Pompidou for the recall of the governor and the police.

The additional police would bring to 152 the number of law officers on the islands, usually policed by 20.

Northrop F-5 Likely Choice Of New Bomber

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — The American Northrop F-5 Freedom Fighter is the likely choice as the RCAF's new fighter-bomber, informed sources said Wednesday.

It was emphasized, however, that no final decision has been made by Defence Minister Hellyer or the government.

The only other plane still in the running is the American Ling - Temco - Vought A-7, on order for the U.S. Navy but not scheduled for flight tests until this fall.

The main pointer to Canadian choice of the F-5 is the reported decision by the U.S. defence department to buy 200 F-5s for the U.S. Air Force. Selection of the same plane by the two air forces would simplify the problem of spare parts and ease of basing.

Canada is prepared to spend $215,000,000 on production of about 100 fighter - bombers at Canadair Limited, Montreal.

WOULD MAKE DEAL

In exchange for a licence to produce the F-5 in Canada, it is understood Canada might be prepared to put development funds into a successor such as the F-5X.

Canada would use the F-5 to support the army in the field. Because it is supersonic, it would have a side use as a patrol plane over Canada.

Authorities said there is no present intention of buying another jet interceptor for RCAF to replace Defence Command because the Soviet bomber threat has not materialized to the extent anticipated.

North American Air Defence Command has withdrawn its public estimate that Soviet Russian bombers could hit this continent.

Mr. McNamara said recently that 100 Soviet bombers could hit the U.S. and perhaps another 150 parts of Canada. Alaska and a small segment of the northwestern U.S.

Existing Foreign-Owned Papers in Canada Not Affected by Legislation

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal government's new proposal aimed at preventing foreign takeovers of Canadian newspapers does not apply to any existing foreign-owned paper in Canada.

This assurance was given today by a finance department spokesman in commenting on the proposal made by Finance Minister Gordon in his budget speech Monday night.

Mr. Gordon said then: "The purpose of this measure as it affects newspapers is purely preventive. No existing commercial interests will be affected, nor will any changes in existing advertising patterns be required."

The proposed legislation, which the government is seriously intended to cover only periodicals, disallows tax deductions for advertising in non-Canadian newspapers as well.

Known foreign - owned publications are the Canadian editions of Time magazine and Reader's Digest; and the Scott Deer (Alta.) Advocate and four weeklies owned by Liverpool Post and Echo. On the basis of the finance department's comment these publications will be exempt from the proposed tax change legislation.

It defines a Canadian newspaper or periodical as one set in type and printed in Canada, edited here by persons living in the country, and published in Canada.

It further defines a Canadian newspaper as one of which "the right to produce and publish issues. . .belongs to or is vested in:

—"A Canadian citizen. . ."

—"A partnership of which at least three - quarters of the members are Canadian citizens and in which interests representing in value at least three - quarters of the total value of the partnership property are owned by Canadian citizens.

—"An association or society of which at least three-quarters of the members are Canadian citizens, —"Her majesty in right of Canada or a province, or a municipality in Canada, or —"A corporation" meeting various conditions.

To be treated as Canadian, the legislation specifies that a corporation must be one:

—"That is incorporated under the laws of Canada or a province,

—"Of which the chairman or other presiding officer and at least three - quarters of the directors or other similar officers are Canadian citizens, and

—"Of which, if it is a corporation having share capital, at least three-quarters of the shares having full voting rights under all circumstances, and shares representing in the aggregate at least three - quarters of the paid-up capital, are owned by Canadian citizens or by corporations other than corporations controlled directly or indirectly by citizens or subjects of a country other than Canada."

Finance department officials said the Thomson group of newspapers in this country, founded by Lord Thomson of Fleet, is not affected by the proposed legislation and it is their understanding the Thomson setup is such that any portfolio additions to the group in Canada similarly would not be affected.

Parliament At a Glance

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

WEDNESDAY, April 28, 1965

The Commons opened the budget debate, Conservative and NDP members moving motions of lack of confidence in the government.

The motion by George Nowlan, Conservative financial critic, criticized lack of tax relief for lower income groups and aid for pensioners.

An amendment by Colin Cameron, NDP critic, spelled out lack of higher tax exemptions and a raise to $100 a month for the old age pension.

Mr. Nowlan also hit at the sales tax on production machinery which he said penalized the manufacturing industry and business.

Mr. Cameron said the tax cut announced in the budget would annoy many persons when they found how little they would get.

Bert Leboe (SC — Cariboo) said the budget speech reference to money needed for invest ment was meaningless because the Bank of Canada could make more.

THURSDAY, April 29

The Commons meets at 2:30 p.m. EDT to continue the budget debate. The Senate stands adjourned until May 4.

GM's Earnings In First Quarter Highest Ever

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. Wednesday reported the biggest first-quarter earnings in U.S. business history: $36,000,000, equal to $2.22 a share.

GM's earnings for the first three months of 1965 shattered its previous corporate and U.S. record high of $336,000,000 and $1.97 a share set in the first quarter last year.

General Motors thus became the third of the big three auto makers to report business at a new high in the first quarter this year. Ford earned $200,800,000 and Chrysler $56,600,000 in the same months.

American Motors, whose auto sales have trailed its 1964 pace, is to make its first quarter financial report early next week.

Chairman Frederic G. Donner and president James F. Gordon announced that GM set quarterly records in sales, earnings, world - wide employment and payrolls in the first three months of 1965.

Dollar sales were $5,558,000,000, 16 per cent ahead of the like period last year.

Worldwide employment averaged 727,983 workers with payrolls of $1,725,000,000 for the quarter. This compared with 681,680 and $1,175,000,000 in the comparable period last year.

Parents Decide To Discontinue School Boycott

KINGSTON (CP) — Parents in the Township, of Hinchinbrooke decided to discontinue a three - day boycott of rural schools in the south of the township and send their children back to classes today.

A similar boycott — against centralized schools — continues in the neighboring Kingston Township. Both areas are about 20 miles north of Kingston.

Hinchinbrooke Township Education, affecting 60 children in three public schools, began Monday. A spokesman for the parents said Wednesday they have decided to discontinue means to bring pressure against a new $180,000 centralized school in the north of the township.

The school board is to open tenders for the new building Friday night.

The Loughborough boycott began April 9. Ninety - five pupils were involved in the original walkout. Parents sent 22 of them back to school Monday but only 13 were in classes Wednesday.

Closing of the small rural schools would forces a few of the children to travel as much as 18 miles to the new institutions.

Gen. de Gaulle Has Lived To See Dream Come True

By BORIS BISKEW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Big Charles de Gaulle has lived to see his dream of a France with an independent foreign policy come true—and he is wasting little time in proving it.

The French president has been ridiculed in the past for having visions of grandeur, of a new France that would emerge as a leader of Western Europe.

Despite critiicism, he forged tirelessly toward his major goal: "... to assure France primacy in Western Europe, to co-operate with East and West . . . without ever accepting any kind of dependency." He appears to have succeeded to a greater extent than most of his critics would give him credit.

Although France cannot yet claim leadership over Western Europe, she is the only major European country—the other being the Soviet Union—that has been able to pursue her own defence and foreign policy and get away with it.

HOW POLITELY

The other Western European countries that count — Britain, West Germany and Italy—continue to bow politely to the wishes of the United States, primarily because of the post-war conditions which had shown that what was good for the United States was also good for them.

But Europe has changed since the war and the relatively inflexible policies laid down by Washington have been cracking, with the most noticeable crevice in the North Atlantic alliance binding France to the United States.

The split between the United States and France became apparent when de Gaulle turned his back on American nuclear policy for Europe, seeking his own independent course, and later was widened by subsequent events, including differences over the war in Viet Nam.

To add to the irritation, de Gaulle has courted the friendship of the Soviet Union, with whom he sees the picture in Viet Nam in much the same light, and met with Andrei Gromyko in Paris Tuesday. The Soviet foreign minister said he was "happy" with the meeting.

AMERICAN FRIENDSHIP

De Gaulle, prior to his meeting with Gromyko, recorded a 17-minute speech in which he stressed French independence "without going back on our American friendship."

France had regained her "faculty of judgment and action," he said, adding that this summed sometimes "to offend a state that might think itself because of its power, to be vested with supreme and universal responsibility."

And that who knows if one day this country," he asked, referring to the United States," "which is her friend, may not find that a France arisen is far more to its interest than the subservient France of 1940?"

This could be the key to better American - French relations, if only the United States would accept France as a country with the right to independent action in carving her future course in world affairs.

Partners, Floor Employees Ignored Rules in Buying Shares

TORONTO (CP) — Partners and employees of a Toronto stock brokerage firm ignored company policy and stock exchange rules when they bought 33,000 shares in Windfall Oils and Mines last July, the Windfall royal commission was told Wednesday.

George Hunter, a director of T. A. Richardson and Co., testified the shares should not have been bought from Viola MacMillan, Windfall promoter, because she was a Richardson client.

Mr. Hunter said the employees' orders "just got in with the rest of the flood of orders."

"It was an error . . . I can't explain it."

The commission under Mr. Justice Arthur Kelly of the Ontario Court of Appeal is investigating the surprising rise and fall of Windfall share prices last July when prices rose to $5.60 from 36 cents on rumors of an ore strike and then plunged to 40 cents when assays showing no valuable ore bodies were revealed.

BOUGHT SHARES

Testimony Wednesday showed the two floor traders who established the July 6 opening price of $1.05 — Windfall each bought 15,000 shares for his personal account within minutes of the opening.

Harold Field of Breckenridge, McDonald and Co., said he and the late Cecil Lecour of T. A. Richardson noted the heavy buying coming over the wires first and accordingly set the $1.01 price.

As Toronto Stock Exchange floor governors, Mr. Field testified, this was part of their duty when trading was unusually heavy. Seldom is the price set reserved to eliminate buying orders that carried a $1 limit.

The late Mr. Lecour testified he had bought 15,000 shares.

Mr. Field and Mr. Hunter both said Mr. Lecour also bought 15,000—by means of a "trading" account in Harold Field's buying the shares nominally, at $1.01, under agreement that Mr. Lecour then sell the shares to Mr. Lecour at $1.02.

DOES TAKE PLACE

Mr. Hunter was asked if this is usual practice. He said "it does take place on the floor," but added: "I don't condone it."

Mr. Justice Kelly questioned Mr. Hunter about the propriety of Mr. Lecour's manoeuvre that ended in Mr. Lecour's owning 15,000 shares.

"Was the sum total of his action in these two transactions not an evasion of the (exchange) prohibition, or any rule of your firm?" the commission chairman asked.

"We didn't like it," replied Mr. Hunter.

"If it happened, and you did not know about it until August," pursued Mr. Justice Kelly, "where is apparently our very effective mechanism to find out that it doesn't happen."

Pakistan Army Claims Easy Oasis Victory

By DAN COGGIN

BIAR BET, Kutch (AP)—Pakistani forces claim they scored an easy victory over Indian troops in a desultory battle that ended with Pakistani occupation of this oasis in the baked, barren Rann of Kutch.

It is one of the most unlikely and desolate battlegrounds on earth. Soon the heat-scorched wastes will become marshy swamps, inundated by water from the Arabian Sea whipped up by monsoon rains.

Daytime temperatures reaches 120 degrees during the days. The desert shimmers in the blinding heat.

Pakistani field commanders said almost all fighting takes place at night, when the heat subsides. The darkness also allows cover from observation of movement across the empty flats where during the day one can see for miles.

"We could have pushed them clear to Bombay," a Pakistani captain said of the Indians. He said his troops suffered no fatalities in taking Biar Bet.

CLAIM LIGHT CASUALTIES

The Pakistanis said they captured the seats Monday night, inflicting heavy Indian losses. Biar Bet is the only oasis in what India claims to be its western border in the disputed Rann of Kutch area.

PROPOSES LAW

TORONTO (CP) — An economist with Ontario welfare department wants legislation to make all children legitimate whether or not the parents are married. Bohumil Kubat of Toronto says in a report prepared for the department and made public Wednesday there is a world-wide trend toward removing the stigma attached to illegitimate children, partly because concepts of social justice recognize the child's innocence and the parents' responsibility.

AHA! — Trio (from left) Peter Hawley, Albert Howard and Bill White ready for smelt as dusk falls over Victoria Park.

Pickerel, Smelt Running In River But Officers of Law Watching Poachers

It's that time of year around the mouth of the Moira River, folks!

The smelt are running — and the citizenry's after 'em.

The pickerel are running and so are the poachers — with the game wardens after them!

There the similarity ends.

For the pickerel is one of the biggest eyes on recent record.

For the pickerel it's the other way around.

Cold weather has caused one of the poorest pickerel runs in years.

"In fact," said one veteran Department of Lands and Forests officer patrolling the river bank last night, "I think the Moira pickerel are now passed its crest. And not that many of them have been around this year as far as that."

However, neither those who police or poach the waterway speak for a farmer's almanac. Good or bad, as the weather may be, they pin their activities on luck.

The poacher hopes with any luck to strike at the right time in the right place.

Trouble is, so do the wardens.

The result is a battle of wits that has been racing up and down the city banks of the Moira in recent days.

At times the battle hasn't been all that witty.

Although there have been no ugly incidents, threats have been thrown out as surprised and surpriszers meet in the early hours near favored fish-filled pools.

AN OLD GAME

However, it's an old game, and the law and the illegal landers of fish has been skillfully playing it for years.

Some are caught. Some are not. But all haunt the haven of natural hatchery along the river.

Game wardens scout the areas where poachers stealthily gaze. And, as a reminder of the ultimate strength of the law, police cruisers periodically slide from the shadows to scan the peace.

The battle, however, ends the same way each year.

"We'll be laying quite a number of charges—but not until the run is over," says Belleville-area game warden Jim Moore.

Jim, who this year replaced George Warner on government game conservation horsebouts, is only one of reinforced platoons keeping watch and ward over this season's wan game-fish run.

It's a frustrating job for men recruited and trained as conservationists — not the least of it being placidly ignoring the wisecracks, concerts and threats as they go about their orders.

Like the situation last night where a net-carrier asked a man if he could grab for smelts above the CPR railroad bridge over Victoria Park.

"You'd be better to fish below the bridge," suggested the game warden.

"But, does the law say I can't catch smelt up here?"

"No. The only trouble is that a lot of people who say they catch above the bridge happen to net a pickerel too and don't say anything to the law about it!"

"But it's still legal."

"Yes. It's legal."

STAYED BELOW BRIDGE

And so, he joined several other smelters along the bank, necessitating a game warden only periodically inspect catches by flashlight.

Meantime, the biggest concentration of netters observed the unwritten rules and stayed below the bridge, warned by boatrides.

The game warden watch can take anything up to 24 hours in coves of a river like the Moira. It is in the dark hours there takes on a more dramatic tint.

It is then that those who openly their trade and the wardens like to watch them.

At least, observe them enough to gather sufficient court evidence that could guarantee greater safety to spawning fish next season.

Meantime, back at the smelting grounds, darkness also is a key factor— though for good reason.

CAN MAKE KILLING

Operating under the cloack of darkness net-wielding fishermen can make a killing of the sardine-sized delicacies massively moving upriver.

It has nothing to do with fishing as much as local tradition. It's a job for an elementary amateur.

Some of those hauls along the river bank in recent nights are still learning public school biology.

This year, few could miss— according to the Lands and Forests people.

"It's the best it's been in seven or more years along here," said one veteran officer. "The other night five guys got four bushels along here."

Ice Jam Cuts Spillage Over American Falls

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) An ice jam cut the spillage over the American falls Wednesday, exposing a quarter of the rock on the 1,050-foot-long brink.

Several hours later, the jam broke and the water flow was about normal.

The rock at the top of the 182-foot-high cataract was bare for a time on the north side, near the observation tower, and on the right side, next to Luna Island.

Soft ice floes from Lake Erie have been sweeping into the river for about a week. Many of them caught on rock at the lip of Goat Island, above the American falls, and in the upper rapids. The pile-up diverted the water from either side of the falls.

Rebuilds Career After Rescue Disaster

A Doctor's Saga of Courage

By DENNIS ORCHARD

VANCOUVER (CP) — The moment he regained consciousness at the bottom of the cliff, Dr. Nigel Clark knew he would spend the rest of his life in a wheelchair.

A sharp pain stabbed at the back of his head and he could not move his hands. Diagnosis: Fracture-dislocation of the neck with cord lesion. Nigel Clark, 32, was a quadriplegic.

A simple slip on a mountain in the Cariboo meant he was through as a physician and surgeon. He faced support of four children under five years of age, of his wife Shirley, and of their fifth child, to be born in six months.

Five uphill years from the date of the accident in January, 1963, Dr. Clark expects to be a practising radiologist. He is almost halfway there now, wheeling himself around the classrooms of the Vancouver General Hospital with powerful biceps, the only major muscles below the neck functioning at his will.

It has been a painstaking adjustment for a man who was the subject of Canada - wide sympathy after his 150-foot fall on Mount Brew.

Dr. Clark had been called from a badminton match in Lillooet, 90 miles north of Vancouver, to help rescue 16-year-old David Offin, unconscious after a tumble on a mountain near the community.

FELL OVER CLIFF.

The boy was not seriously hurt, and when he was safely strapped on a stretcher, Dr. Clark led the rescue party back through the darkness by flashlight.

Carrying his medical bag in the other hand, he lost his balance at the top of a steep cliff and fell. The resulting injury to his spinal cord kept him in hospital for three months, and he spent eight more months in a Vancouver rehabilitation centre.

He regained good use of his arms, but with only five-per-cent use of his hands he could not possibly carry on his half of the active and varied Lillooet medical practice he had shared with his brother Michael.

It meant giving up a lot more than that. His wife recalls that before the accident "there was nothing he couldn't do or build or fix."

He had supervised construction of their $30,000 home on 15 wooded acres near town, built himself a cottage on Seton Lake, and by swapping weekend calls with Michael had taken time to swim, fish, hunt and play tennis and badminton.

"But our material loss or gain is of very little importance," says Mrs. Clark. "The material things are the least we have lost."

IN CROWDED QUARTERS

The family now rents a cramped, three-bedroom home in suburban Richmond. For some time the Clarks received $200 a month from a benevolent fund of the B.C. Medical Association and $100 a month from an anonymous donor.

Since Dr. Clark began his radiology residence last September, he has received a $900-a-month grant from the provincial government.

Meantime he has made the best of his limited functions. At the rehabilitation centre, using wrist splints, he built a table and desk and a cabinet for a stereo set.

"You learn certain tricks about eating," he says. "I used to have a fork with a handle fitting around my palm but now I can grasp it lightly in my fingers. I can't cut my meat, of course, but I can hook my thumb into a cup if it's the right cup.

"I have a sense of light touch —normal in some fingers to the first joint. The sensations of heat, cold and pain are lacking and I have some trouble with burns and bruises."

His greatest and most satisfying outlet is driving the family station wagon, which he accomplishes with hand controls and a forearm splint that fits over a shaft attached to the steering wheel.

PLANS NEW CAREER — Three years after a fall over a cliff made him a quadriplegic and ended his career as a doctor, Nigel Clark of Vancouver is well on thev ay to be'ng a radiologist. His biceps are the only major muscles below his neck functioning at will, but in a wheelchair he is able to get around the classrooms of Vancouver General Hospital. Here he is with three of his five children — eldest daughter Elisa, 6½, and sons Jon, 4, (front) and Spencer, 3.

Dr. Clark was a superb driver who had two foreign-built cars in his garage near Lillooet, one a datsun sedan, the other a powerful sports model.

STILL ABLE TO SMILE

Last year, when he was making 36-mile round trips daily for consultative work at the Oakalla prison farm, he ran up 17,000 miles.

"It's the greatest expression of physical independence that I have. There, I can compete with the average person."

Dr. Clark has a high capacity for cheerfulness and a relaxed smile that lets the whole world in.

The adjustments in life, he says, have been less difficult for him than they would be for most persons, possibly because as a doctor he has seen others in physical distress "and developed certain maturity."

But the most mature person would find it difficult to keep smiling when Elisa, 6½, the oldest of the Clarks' children, recalls wistfully the days "before daddy fell down the mountain."

"Nige always wanted to teach the children to do things," says Shirley Clark. "Those are things they won't remember. Nige will, of course."

Food Pollution?

Swedes Cut Down On Insecticide Uses

STOCKHOLM (Reuters) — Plans are being made to cut down the use in Sweden of insecticides and weed killers to prevent food from becoming polluted by chemicals whose long-term effects are not known.

The Swedish Natural Sciences Research Council, which is working on the problem, has called public attention to the lack of knowledge available on what biocides do to human beings and whether they can produce cancer.

For some time, Swedish recommendations have discouraged the use of chemicals on food crops for a "safety period" before harvest. The period varies from three to 45 days, depending on what chemicals are involved. It is calculated to give them time to disperse before the plants are used.

The council now is drawing up recommendations, which it hopes will get government backing, to stipulate the maximum amounts of chemicals allowed on produce being sold.

DDT IN MILK

Even human milk can contain traces of DDT, according to analyses quoted by the Swedish council. DDT finds its way into the milk of cows fed on treated fodder, or sprayed with the insecticide.

The concentration increases as the milk is processed. Milk containing 7.5 parts per 1,000,000 of DDT has been shown to produce cream containing 87.5 parts per 1,000,000; and butter containing 100 parts per 1,000,000.

This is because DDT particles attach themselves to the fat particles of the milk.

Chemicals can also enter the growing crops indirectly. One biocide, dieldrin, persists in the soil for up to four years and can be absorbed by crops long after the original spraying. Carrots grown in such soil can contain a higher percentage of dieldrin than the soil surrounding them.

Poisons can also enter the human system through eggs.

Grain treated with mercury compounds has, when fed to hens, produced eggs containing the same substance. The Swedish government now has forbidden the use of dressed seed as feed for chickens.

SPORTS SLICES

Arnold Palmer whose interesting articles on golfing are now a special feature of these sports pages, is the most magnificent, in the eyes of many, the greatest golfer in history. He is now on his way to work on his second half-million dollars on the golfing tour.

The 26-year-old Pennsylvanian raced past the half-million mark early in a somewhat peculiar but extremely remunerative 1964 season, during which he won $113,983.97 in official money.

However, when the big financial year, second only to his record $128,230 in 1963, Palmer ran his official earnings in his fabulous decade on the Tour to $586,211.46, more than second-place Billy Casper has collected in the Modern Era of Golf.

Passing the $500,000 mark was another milestone in an exciting 10-year period filled with a succession of highlights, most of them in the seven seasons since the amazing Latrobe strongman won his first major championship—the 1954 Masters.

Among his 47 championships in full-scale tournament play, Palmer has scored 43 of them on the PGA Tour, has twice won the British Open and added three other International Golden.

Undoubtedly, the highest of 1964 for him was his acquisition of a fourth Masters Championship, a feat never before accomplished in the history of that highly respected event. He also won at Augusta in 1958, 1960 and 1962 and landed the USGA Open Championship in 1960, leaving the PGA Championship the only major championship to have eluded him to date.

It's getting so that it is hard to pick out a season and say that it was Palmer's greatest.

How do you select among 1960, when Arnie began to master his volunteer Army with eight victories, including both the Masters and the USGA Open; in 1962, when he scored seven Tour victories, including the Masters, and won the British Open; or 1963, when he won seven times on the Tour, set the astronomical money winning record and captained the Ryder Cup team to victory over the British at Atlanta?

In 1963, the golfer with the fullback shoulders and wasp waist displayed his greatest attribute, that of never quitting, when he staged tremendous rallies to win both the Masters and the USGA Open, the latter by making up a seven-stroke deficit in the final round. Palmer also won the Texas, Baton Rouge and Pensacola Opens in succession and later the Insurance City and Mobile Opens. He banked $81,275,25.25.

Arnie's fortunes tapered off "slightly"—$61,021.46 —in 1961. Still, he won five titles—the San Diego, Phoenix, Baton Rouge, Texas and Western Opens.

In 1962, his victories came in spurts, the Palm Spring Golf Classic and Phoenix Open back to back, and later the Texas Open, Tournament of Champions and Colonial National Invitational in succession. In between came his third Masters victory, in a gripping playoff comeback against Gary Player and Dow Finsterwald, and later in the year he won the American Golf Classic. For a second time (first in 1960), Palmer was voted PGA Player-of-the-Year. He added $81,448.16 to his bank account.

Enroute his record financial season in 1963, Arnie picked off the three biggest checks of the year —$26,000 in the Whitemarsh Open in Philadelphia, $25,000 in the Thunderbird Classic and $23,000 in the Cleveland Open, the latter two after playoffs. He also won his third straight Phoenix Open, the Los Angeles, and Pensacola Open and his second Western Open.

Besides the Masters, Palmer's only other 1964 victory came in the Oklahoma City Open. He lost in a playoff in the Pensacola Open, finished second five other times, third four times and fourth twice.

Palmer was successful almost from his professional debut in January of 1955, just a few months after he won the USGA Amateur in Detroit. He won his first Tour title in the 1956 Canadian Open and has been a multiple victor in every season since.

It all began when Arnold was three and received his first set of cut-down clubs. His father, Milfred (Deacon) Palmer, professional since 1921 at Latrobe Country Club, Latrobe, Pa., has been responsible for most of the development of his son's dynamic game ever since. Arnold dominated golf in Western Pennsylvania and played as No. 1 man on the Wake Forest College golf team for four years. He served in the Coast Guard in the early 1950's.

Hawks At Home Have Backs To Wall

By JERRY GLADMAN

CHICAGO (CP)—All through the National Hockey League season, Montreal Canadiens and Chicago Black Hawks were good road clubs. Now, all of a sudden, they can't buy a victory away from home.

Before the Stanley Cup playoffs began, the Montrealers were enthusiastic travellers, winning 16 games, losing 15 and tying four on the other fellow's rink during the NHL campaign. They had broken even in Chicago with three wins, three losses and a tie.

"I can't understand it," said Canadiens coach Toe Blake Wednesday. "This year more games were won on the road in our league than ever before. Then we get into the playoffs and . . ." He broke off with a shrug.

The Hawks, whose deplorable road record in past years has contributed to their failure to finish first in their 38-year NHL career, achieved respectability this season with a 14-15-2 mark. At Montreal they won two and two ties in seven games.

HOME TEAM WINS

The two clubs have met five times since the start of the current, best-of-seven cup final and every game has gone to the home team.

Chicago coach Billy Reay, analyzing the situation as the clubs prepared for tonight's sixth game here, felt the harder, smoother ice surface at the Montreal Forum favors the fast-skating, smooth-passing Canadiens. The ice at Chicago Stadium has been affected by the warm spring weather.

Big Jean Beliveau, who scored two goals and set up two more in Montreal's 6-4 victory at the Forum Tuesday night, agrees.

"The ice was better there than it is in Chicago," the Canadiens' captain said. "But I don't want that to be an excuse for our play here."

If the Hawks should repeat their semi-final performance by taking the sixth game here and seventh in Montreal Saturday, they will then have won the 72-year-old cup four times.

WERE IN CUP SQUAD

Present Hawks who played on the 1961 squad—the last cup triumph — are goaltender Glenn Hall, Pilots, Elmer Vasko, Bill Hay, Hull, Eric Nesterenko, Mikita and Wharram.

In two previous finals against the Canadiens, the Hawks came out second best. Montreal won a best-of-five series in 1931 and took the first four games of a best-of-seven set in 1944.

Montreal's last championship was in 1960, and six of the players of that team will be on the ice tonight. They are defencemen Charlie Hodge, Jean Guy Talbot, Ralph Backstrom, Belliveau, Claude Provost and Henri Richard.

The Canadiens, currently tied with Toronto Maple Leafs for the most cup championships, are shooting for a record of 11 with this season's series.

Commercial Softball League

8 Teams Place Entries

A strong case of growing pains hit the Commercial Softball League last night.

League Secretary Ron Ferguson said this morning that eight teams classed themselves as "definite starters" at the organization's third meeting of the year.

It was quite a difference from the first two get-togethers when only four clubs turned out.

"And there is a possibility that a ninth team will also seek entry next week", said Ferguson, "but the feeling seems to be that we hold the line at eight."

Lightfoot Construction, City Hotel, Belvedere Hotel, Point Anne Cementmen, Black Diamond Cheese and Ter-Hart Daubers are returning from last year's lineup of teams. New entries at the present time are Stewart-Warner and an RCAF team.

While all clubs said they were "in" last night, the final count will be made next Wednesday when the league holds its entry deadline meeting.

This meeting will start at seven o'clock, at the Recreation Centre, Pinnacle Street.

Other important business planned for this meeting, the final pre-season one it is expected, will be the election of officers for 1965. Last year's executive has handled matters to date this spring.

A representative of the Belleville and District Umpires' Association will also be present to clear up the umpiring situation for the league.

Ferguson said that the league will play on the same diamonds as last year. They include Zwick's Island, Alemite Field, King George School and Prince Charles School.

All clubs are urged to have a representative at next Wednesday's meeting and anyone interested in a spot on the executive is also invited.

Star Thinks Suspension Too Strong

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (AP) Dennis Ralston, the United States' top amateur tennis player who was suspended Tuesday from the U.S. Davis Cup team, says he thinks "the punishment is a little strong."

Ralston, 22, has been ruled out of his hometown match here against Canada June 4-6.

Team captain George MacCall said the suspension was a result of Ralston's defaulting a doubles match last week in the River Oaks tournament in Houston, Texas following a loss in the quarter-finals singles to veteran Ham Richardson.

Etobicoke Defeats Kitchener 5-3

TORONTO (CP) — Etobicoke Indians spotted Kitchener Rangers a 3-1 lead then stormed back for a 5-3 win in an Ontario Hockey Association junior B final game Wednesday night.

Etobicoke now leads the best-of-seven series 3-1.

Down 3-2 at the end of the second period, Etobicoke scored three unanswered goals in the third as they outshot the Rangers 30-5.

Gary Marsh, Tim Ecclestone, Lorne Knowles, Bob McGuinn and Johnny O'Flaherty scored for Etobicoke.

Walt Tkachuk, Gary Hopcroft and Wayne Gowing were the Kitchener marksmen.

Fourth NHL Playoffs Star

Beliveau Enters Scoring Circle

By BILL NEVILLE

MONTREAL (CP)—Big Jean Beliveau, a key man in Montreal Canadiens' current Stanley Cup drive, has become the National Hockey League's fourth all-time playoff scorer.

The veteran Canadiens captain-centre has scored seven goals and added seven assists in the current playoffs to move up two notches in the all-time list with 106 points.

He now trails only Detroit's Gordie Howe, who leads the pack with 146 points, and former Montreal team-mates Maurice Richard and Bernie Geoffrion, who have 126 and 115 points respectively.

Beliveau, 33, who has been in the playoffs every year of his 13-year NHL career, began the current series in sixth place in the all-time list.

His 14-point output—and he has at least one, and possibly two, games to add to it—lifted him over both Dickie Moore, the former Canadien now with Toronto, and Detroit's re - retired Ted Lindsay.

Beliveau's 49 playoff goals also rank fourth to Richard's 82, Howe's 61 and 56 by Geoffrion.

Beliveau, however, has scored his only 96 games, while the other three all played in more than 125 playoff contests.

ALTERS LITTLE

With the exception of Beliveau's spurt, the current playdowns have done little to alter the all-time Stanley Cup scoring list.

Lindsay, who entered the p' off trailing Moore by one point, out-scored him 3 to 2 in their respective semi-finals and the pair now are tied for fifth place with 96 points apiece.

Alex Delvecchio of Detroit and Toronto's Leonard (Red) Kelly each scored five points in the semi-finals and remain in sixth and seventh places respectively with 91 and 85 points.

The lone new face in the all-time playoff top 10 is Chicago's Bobby Hull, whose 10 goals and seven assists lead the scoring parade for the current series.

Although a relative newcomer to the playoffs with only 37 games to his credit, he now is tied for 10th place with former Montrealer Elmer Lach, each with 64 points.

Hull, only 26 years old, appears the prime threat to any future advance is concerned. All other members of the top 10 are either retired or apparently within one or two years of it.

The top 10 all-time playoff scorers:

BEER IN ZIP OPEN CANS
Now available
The most convenient thing to happen to beer since the bottle.
Take a second look and check the advantages of cans. When you're finished, you'll probably like the idea of beer in cans even before you try them.
To start with, cans are lighter so they're easier to carry. And they're smaller: take up less space in the trunk of your car; take up less space in your fridge.
Cans chill faster—a big advantage in the summer months ahead. They protect the flavour. And, obviously, cans can't break.
Cans need no deposit. Need no return. So no more storing up the empties.
And these new beer cans need no openers. Just lift the tab, zip open and pour.
People who like convenience are going to like beer in cans.
In short, cans are the most convenient thing to happen to beer since the bottle. Try them.

'Bold Lad' Run-For-Roses Favorite

Field of 10-12

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Bailes, Mr. Pak, Dapper Dan, Bold Lad, with Kentucky Derby favorite Bold Lad, last and enough to predict that the post-time favorite will win Saturday's classic.

"I know he's a good horse and I expect him to be in contention," he said, "but he'll have to prove himself Saturday."

The combination of Bold Lad and Hartack, who has won three Kentucky Derbys in six tries, is expected to go postward as the 9-to-5 favorite Saturday.

Entries for the Derby were to be made today, with a field of 20, and possibly 13, is prospect.

Hartack won on Venetian Way in 1960, Decidedly in 1962 and Northern Dancer in 1964. He had no mount in 1961 and 1963.

WON ON IRON LIEGE

Hartack also won the derby in 1957 with Iron Liege. He finished second on Fabius in 1958 and was 13th on Easy Spur in 1959. Hartack was to have ridden Tim Tam, who won the Derby in 1958, but the jockey broke his leg and lost the mount.

If 12 horses start in the 91st running of this first jewel of racing's triple crown, the race will have a gross value of $155,000 with $133,500 going to the winner, $25,000 to the second place horse, $12,500 to third and $5,000 to fourth.

The race will be televised by the CBC and CBS starting at 5 p.m. EDT. Post time is set for 5:45 before an expected crowd of 100,000.

Bold Lad is expected to get his major challenge from Florida Derby winner Native Charger, California campaigner Lucky Debonair, stretch running Hall to All, front running Flag Raiser and Tom Rolfe, who has won three of his four starts as a three-year-old.

Other definite starters are Arkansas Derby winner Swift

Amerks Lead Bears 3-1

HERSHEY, Pa. (CP)—Rochester Americans, who haven't been accustomed to coming from behind in the American Hockey League this season, found themselves Wednesday night in a role usually reserved for Hershey Bears.

The Americans trailed the Bears 2-0 after the first period in their best - of - seven Calder Cup finals, but came through with a 3-2 win to gain a 3-1 lead in the series.

Ordinarily, the Bears have a franchise on comebacks. The Hershey club trailed Baltimore Clippers 3-0 in the quarter-finals before wrapping up the series with three straight victories. They were down 2-1 to Buffalo Bisons before coming back with two consecutive wins to gain a berth in the finals.

On the other hand, the Americans won the AHL's western division title in a cakewalk, and disposed of the eastern division champion Quebec Aces in five games of the best - of - seven semi-finals.

Dick Gamble, Brooce Horvath and Larry Hillmen scored the Rochester goals. Pete Conscher and Chuck Hamilton replied for Hershey.

Ups Average to .400

'Littlest Alou' Powers Giants' Victory

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Matty Alou of San Francisco Giants is hitting 2½ times his weight for San Francisco Giants but that's still four points less than his younger brother.

At 160 pounds the littlest and least conspicuous of the three Alou brothers, Matty lifted his average to .400 Wednesday when he drove in four runs with a double and a bases-loaded triple that powered the Giants to a 9-3 victory over Philadelphia Phillies.

It was the second straight game in which Matty had produced the winning run — his ninth - inning homer Tuesday sended the Giants 16-13 shutpost against the Phillies. He now has hit safely in the nine games he has started while producing the winning hit in four of seven San Francisco victories.

And it is possible that Matty, 26, will step up as the Alou family leader instead of Jesus, 29, or Felipe, 28.

Felipe was the first to reach the majors and was well established when Matty came along. Then when Matty started to develop, Jesus broke in with the Giants and received raves as a rookie standout last season.

But Matty is waging a battle with Jesus this time while both are providing the Giants with bit after bit. Matty currently is in his usual spot in second place—Jesus is hitting .404—but he leads in the power department with two homers and eight runs batted in.

Felipe, meanwhile, is currently in the also-ran category with a .135 average for Milwaukee Braves.

In other games, three top pitching performances were turned in. Bob Gibson of St. Louis Cardinals three-hit Milwaukee 5-0 and Bob Veale of Pittsburgh Pirates three-hit Los Angeles Dodgers 2-0. Joey Jay pitched 7 2-3 innings of no-hit ball for Cincinnati but was gone when the Reds finally edged Chicago Cubs 3-2 in 14 innings.

ASTROS WIN AGAIN

And Houston Astros extended the longest winning streak in the majors this season to seven by walloping New York Mets 12-3.

The Giants trailed 3-2 in the fourth when Phillies' starter Ray Culp hit Tom Haller with a pitch, walked Jose Pagan and Harvey Kuenn and then hit Matty Alou's bat with a pitch that was rifled into the right field corner for a triple.

Ron Herbel got the victory with five innings of hitless relief after taking over for Jack Sanford. Sanford allowed only three hits but two were homers by Johnny Callison and Wes Covington. Willie Mays hit one for San Francisco.

Gibson brought his record to 3-0 with his second shutout as the Braves' slumdance shrank to 1,534—an all-time low for County Stadium for the second night in succession.

Lou Brock led the Cardinals, scoring a run and driving in two more.

Veale (3-0) didn't allow a runner past first base as he won his duel with Claude Osteen, who had a six-hit shutout until the eighth inning when Deon Clendenon won it with a two-run single.

Jay, leading 1-0 on Deron Johnson's homer off Larry Jackson, held the Cubs hitless until Vic Romonsky collected his first hit of the season, a two-out single in the eighth inning. Billy Williams brought the Cubs a tie with a two-out homer in the ninth.

Each team scored a run in the 10th before the Reds won in the 14th when Ernie Broglio committed a balk with the bases loaded, enabling Tommy Harper to score.

Bob Aspromonte supplied the big bat for the Astros, driving in three runs and capping a four-run sixth inning uprising that put Houston ahead to stay.

Canadian Football Ruling

Violation of Rights Code?

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Canadian Football League may have to take a long, hard look at its American import rule following a report by a University of Toronto law professor on the issue.

Prof. Bora Laskin advised the CFL its restriction on American players "probably violates" the Ontario Human Rights Code and may be a violation of rights legislation in the province since football import quotas went into effect in 1946.

In Calgary, CFL president Pat Maloney expressed confidence the CFL can rephrase its constitution limiting teams to 14 imports to comply with fair employment legislation.

Mahoney also said CFL Commissioner Sydney Halter would meet with Ontario government officials in Toronto within a week.

But CFL officials apparently have their signals crossed.

HAS NO PLANS

Halter, in Winnipeg, said he had no plans to go to Toronto and he disagreed with Mahoney's interpretation of the report. He would not recommend other than to say it is confidential "it will be discussed by the league."

Meanwhile, in other football news, Sonny Falconey, former Hamilton Tiger - Cats quarterback who is currently negotiating with Montreal Alouettes on a contract, disclosed at a sportsmen's dinner in Ottawa Tuesday that CFL players are on the threshold of organizing a players association.

Falconey's remarks held a meeting in Hamilton Monday and Falconey said future meetings sessions are planned.

Fred Lashin's 16-page report was the result of a CFL request last month for his legal opinion on the league's new naturalization ruling which limits each of the nine CFL teams to three naturalized Canadians.

Mahoney said the report apparently found the ruling illegal and went on to question the entire quota system as a violation of the Human Rights Code in Ontario.

GRANTS REPORTED

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal government has given out grants totalling $1,118,791 under the Fitness and Amateur Sport Act in its three years of operation, the Commons was told Wednesday. Ontario has received $171,623.

Twins' Bobbles Pave Way to Third Loss

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Cesar Tovar of Minnesota Twins has notched another hole in his glove en route to the second annual Richie Allen fielding award.

Tovar's latest entry in his bid for the honor came Wednesday night in Minnesota's 9-3 loss to Cleveland Indians.

The Allen award, established last year in honor of the third baseman of Philadelphia Phillies, goes to the rookie infielder whose season-long performance in the field is the most conspicuous—and embarrassing.

Tovar has played in only six games and has committed two errors, so it's unlikely he'll achieve Allen's freshman report card of 41 errors, most by a player in the majors last season. But the two the Twins rookie has already been outstanding.

As a third baseman in the opener against New York Yankees the 24-year-old Venezuelan dropped a two-out pop fly in the ninth inning, allowing the tying run to score. Fortunately for the Twins, Tovar redeemed himself at bat by lashing a game-winning single in 11th, much the same way Allen did for Philadelphia.

Tovar had pop-up trouble again Wednesday night against the Indians. With two out and none on in the first inning, Leon Wagner lofted an easy pop toward second base where the rookie was playing. Tovar dropped the ball, and Cleveland was on its way to three unearned runs.

The freshman had help, however, in leading the Twins to only their third defeat in 10 games.

DROP FLY BALLS

Right - fielder Tony Oliva started the third inning by dropping Dick Howser's fly ball while left - fielder Bob Allison followed shortly after by doing the same for Max Alvis. The result was another three unearned runs.

In other AL games, Detroit Tigers nipped Los Angeles Angels 3-4, Baltimore Orioles defeated Washington Senators 6-3 and New York belted Kansas City Athletics 5-1.

While the Twins were aiding the Indians defensively, Rocky Colavito was leading the Tribe's offense, driving in four runs with a three-run homer and a single. Alvis homered with one on for Cleveland while Jimmie Hall connected twice and Allison once for Minnesota.

Detroit's three-run rally in the seventh inning chased Dean Chance and brought the Tigers a victory over Los Angeles. Chance retired the first two batters before he walked Jim Northrup and gave up a single to Dick McAuliffe.

George Brunet replaced Chance and was greeted by Jerry Lumpe's two - run triple. Lumpe then scored on Norm Cash's single. Jose Cardenal blasted a three - run Angel homer in the fifth while Joe Adcock connected with none on in the sixth.

John Orsino's three - run homer in the sixth inning, the Orioles' third homer in two innings, boosted Baltimore past Washington. Jack Brandt and Jerry Adair had homered in the fifth, helping Robin Roberts to his second victory. Doug Camilli and Frank Howard connected for the Senators.

Al Downing hurled a five-hitter for the Yankees, who lost right fielder Roger Maris for two and possibly three weeks. Maris injured his right thigh in making an outstanding catch of Bert Campaneris' line drive in the seventh.

Braves Defeat Kings

WINNIPEG (CP)—Winnipeg Braves scored five goals in the second period to beat Edmonton Oil Kings 8-4 Wednesday night, tying the Western Canada Memorial Cup final at two games each.

The fifth game was scheduled here tonight but might be postponed until Friday to avoid a clash with the Stanley Cup playoffs.

Dunc Rousseau and Gerry Maxur scored two goals each for Winnipeg and their other markers came from Barry Merrell, George Anderson, Bill Burns and Dave Pearce. Edmonton scorers were Graham Longmuir, Craig Cameron, Greg Tomalty and Ron Anderson.

At the final buzzer, a three-way tussle erupted, which resulted in 70 minutes in penalties, including two game misconducts.

CHARGES DISMISSED

OTTAWA (CP) — A magistrate dismissed two charges of uttering against Jeremie Symko, 25, Wednesday after ruling they had been laid under the wrong section of the Criminal Code. Symko had been charged in connection with the forging of Ottawa Ski Club and ski tow passes. Police said the passes were being sold at $18 each.

Says Cup Voting Farce

TORONTO (CP)—The Globe and Mail calls the voting method for the two Conn Smythe Trophy a farce.

Sports Editor Jim Vipond says in a sports editorial the trophy, donated by the former Toronto Maple Leafs owner for the most valuable player in Stanley Cup playoffs, is to be awarded after a vote of National Hockey League governors.

But, he says, three of the governors — Weston Adams of Boston Bruins, Bruce Norris of Detroit Red Wings and William Jennings of New York Rangers —have not attended a single game in the final round between Chicago Black Hawks and Montreal Canadiens. Montreal leads the best - of - seven series 3-2. Sixth game is tonight.

The editorial adds that each of the absentees has appointed an executive member of his club to appear at the games in his place and vote for a trophy winner.

But this is not enough, Vipond says.

The governors should attend as a mark of respect for the man who donated the trophy.

"The system in use is a poor one and if the governors are really interested in the advancement of hockey, they should consider a better scheme."

The editorial favors a system worked out by Ron Andrews, league statistician.

Under Andrew's plan, the league would invite six former hockey stars to watch playoff games and they would vote at the most valuable player in each game. Their vote totals at the end of the series would then decide the winner.

HANSON SIDELINED

PINEHURST, N.C. (CP) — Eric Hanson of Toronto lost 4 and 5 to Moss Beecroft of Newport News, Va., Wednesday in the fourth round of the North-South Amateur golf tournament. The loss sidelined Hanson, who had beaten Bill Bupert of Arlington, Va., 2 and 1 in the third round.

THE "COMPACT" SWING

The golfer who has a "compact" swing is certainly to be admired. But, just what is a "compact" swing?

To me, it is a swing that is always under control, a swing in which there is no wasted motion.

Such a swing gives you the confidence about control that you need to be a great player.

Perhaps the easiest way for the average golfer to develop a compact swing is to see that his elbows remain consistently close together throughout (see illustrations).

When the elbows move farther apart than they were at address, the swing becomes loose and sloppy and inconsistent shots result.

In building a compact swing, it also helps to keep your head well-anchored throughout.

Defeat Lachine 4-1

Flyers Take 2-1 Lead

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — It took muscle and the power play to give Niagara Falls Flyers a 4-1 win over Lachine Maroons here Wednesday night.

The muscle softened up the young Lachine team and the power plays accounted for three of the Flyers' goals.

The win gave Niagara Falls a 3-1 lead in the best-of-five Eastern Memorial Cup final. They could wrap up the series with a win here Friday night. If a fifth game is necessary it will be played in Niagara Falls Saturday.

The winner of the series will meet either Edmonton or Winnipeg for the Canadian junior championship.

The first period of Wednesday's game was scoreless. Niagara Falls picked up all four penalties in the first 20 minutes.

The Ontario Hockey Association Junior A champions powered up the game in the second period, scoring three unanswered goals.

Jim Lorentz was the first to break Lachine goaltender Cliff Rose's spell over the Flyers, flipping in the second rebound from a scramble at the 40-second mark.

Rose, who has been just the other side of spectacular in the three games to date, stopped 36 shots in the game as the Flyers outshot Lachine 40-34.

Ted Snell scored the first power play goal eight minutes later with Lachine's Don Young sitting out a holding penalty.

SNELL CONNECTS

Snell knocked down a high pass with his hand, drew Rose out of position, and pushed the puck in the open corner of the net.

Gilles Marotte counted his first of two goals on a 30-foot slapshot from the point with Michael LaPalme in the penalty box.

Lachein spoiled Bernie Parent's shutout bid after 30 seconds of the third period, scoring on a backhand shot by Gilbert LaPalme.

Marcotte added an insurance goal for Niagara Falls with less than five minutes remaining, shoving a rebound under Rose.

Referee John McIvor of Ottawa handed out 14 penalties in the game, eight of them to Niagara Falls.

YOUNG CLAY WINS

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)— Rudy Clay, younger brother of world heavyweight champion Cassius Clay, won a unanimous 10-round decision over Levi Forte Wednesday night. Levi, who has won 22 of 25 fights, was bleeding from the nose and mouth when the fight ended before a crowd of about 1,800. It was Clay's second pro fight. He has been sparring with Cassius, who is in training here.

Cross-Country Rally

Team Leaders Out of Running

By CLAUDE HENAULT

EDMONTON (CP)—The Ford Mustang team, which had been leading in the team's category of the Cross-Canada 4,000 mile rally, was eliminated Wednesday when their second - place car was forced to drop out.

The car had been in fourth position at the start of the run Wednesday but had to retire because of transmission troubles, only 20 miles from the end of the Regina - Edmonton run.

To compete in the teams category, three cars must participate in the rally from beginning to end. There are only two Mustangs left in the event.

The Volvo team, which had been second, now takes over first place, followed by a Chevelle squad and a team of Japanese Toyotas.

In individual competition the team of Klaus Ross and John Bird of Toronto remained in first position and, in fact, increased the number to 43 from 46 of penalty points it was responsible.

The reduction was the result of an adjustment of figures from Tuesday's lap of the rally.

PENALTIES SPREE

The Volvo team picked up seven penalty points Wednesday, and two of them in a closed section held at the Wainwright army camp, some 200 miles east of Edmonton. The run-off set by the points they gained in the re-assessment.

Ross and Bird, of Toronto and John Wilson of New Dundee, Ont., not only covered the 200 - mile Volvo route without picking up a single penalty point, but also had the fastest time of the day in the closed section.

Their Mustang covered the 11.8 mile-long route in 15 minutes and 57 seconds, despite a violent windstorm which blew sand across the route.

The Mustang also benefited from a point re-assessment, and its total was lowered to 98 from 103.

Henry Taylor of London and Robin Edwardes of Fabreville, Que., also finished the day with a perfect score. Taylor, driving a Ford Cortina, dropped from second to first place because of the re-assessment of the McLennan - Wilson score.

VALIANT IN FOURTH

The Valiant of Gene Henderson of Dearborn, Mich., and Doug Gallop of Points Claire, Que., finished with 184 points, again due to recheck of Tuesday figures. They are fourth.

Ewen Graham of Midnapore, Alta., and Henry Acteson of Calgary picked up only five penalty points during the run, and finished in fifth place.

Because the effect of the storm hit drivers while they were going through the closed section, the real blast was felt by those who had already passed through the area.

Jean Steagall, of Merchantville, N.J. navigator of the Volvo which is leading in women's competition, pointed to the speckled hood and windscreen of the car and said she was hit by hail. She and her partner, Diana Carter, of Toronto, have 265 penalty points.

Their only competitors, Anne Coombe and June Taylor of Toronto, driving an Isuzu, have 2,287 points.

BECOMES ILL

At the end of the leg Wednesday, rally officials announced that Francis Bradley had become ill and was retiring from his event. He had been driving a Toyota.

Bradley, Canadian sports car driving champion in 1962, and navigator Pat Piggott of Chertsey, Que., were in first place at the end of Wednesday's run. They carried 1,086 penalty points. Neil Johnson of Toronto will take Bradley's place.

Point standings in the manufacturer's category left the Volvo team well ahead with 460 points. The second - place Chevelle team had 1,944 and the Toyota team had 3,548.

Mechanical defects forced the Volkswagen 1500 of Klaus Barzatis of West Hill, Ont., and Rodman Nye of Canfield, Ohio, out at the end of Wednesday's leg. The team had been in 15th position with 362 points at the end of Tuesday's run to Regina.

Today, the cars, now reduced in number to 41 from the original 43 that started in Montreal Saturday night, begin the 830-mile run from here to Kelowna, B.C.

FORT ERIE, Ont. (CP)—Messrs. E. P. Taylor's 1965 hopeful for the June 26 running of the Queen's Plate, won $ 6¼ thirlong test for Canadian-bred three and four-year-olds Wednesday, at the Fort Erie Jockey Club's beating a field of eight.

The bay colt shred by Menetrier out of the Bull Page mare Bull Tyne, has won once in eight starts as a two-year-old and made his seasonal debut Wednesday with Jockey John Le-Blanc.

The colt from Windfields Farm was pulling away with a 4½-length lead when he hit the finish wire.

Two of the other three plate Candidates were place and show in Mener' wake. Phil Boylen's brown gelding Blue Mel, by Blue Man, was second under Hugo Dittfach. The Golden West Farms' colt Lemartel, owned by Calgary publisher Max Bell and ridden by Jimmy Fitzsimmons, finished third.

Lemartel was sired by Tall Chief II, a big grey ridden to victory by Johnny Longden in the 1962 Santa Anita handicap.

Barbra Streisand a Hit In Hour-long Special

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Television audiences Wednesday had an hour-long introduction to the current singing sensation, Barbra Streisand, at 23 the star of a Broadway hit.

My Name is Barbra on CBS was a flashy and imaginative demonstration of her talents. It was literally a one-woman show. In which she sang 21 songs, ranged in an outrageous spoof of the high fashion business and even tried a comedy monologue.

We met many different Streisands in moods ranging from serious to silly.

She has an exciting voice, a highly individual style, interesting looks and a glossy sophistication of style. She is just starting in Funny Girl on Broadway.

The sleek program production was reminiscent of that which surrounded Judy Garland in her earlier specials.

ABC's King Family hour will continue through the summer with new programs and will be cut by half when the fall season starts in September.

The diversity of material, plus the warm relationships among the 36 members of the family — husbands, wives, children — have made it an extremely popular weekend show. There was a vast outpouring of sympathy notes recently when the senior member of the clan, William King Driggs, died at the age of 79.

Jax Suns Blank Leafs 2-0

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Maple Leafs' 14-2 International Baseball League rout of Jacksonville Tuesday didn't do much for the Suns' pride, but it gave pitcher Fritz Ackley a chance to redeem it.

Ackley sat in the stands during that 14-run blitz and studied the Toronto hitters.

Wednesday, he became the first Jacksonville pitcher this season to last the entire nine innings as the Suns defeated the Leafs 2-0.

You saw what happened when you pitch this club (Toronto) high," the 28 - year - old right - hander said after the game. "So I concentrated on keeping the ball low."

The strategy, except for the occasional wild pitch, paid off and Ackley allowed seven hits as the Leafs hit the ball on the ground all afternoon.

BEAT RED WINGS

Elsewhere, Columbus Jets defeated Rochester Red Wings 5-1, Toledo Mud Hens downed Syracuse Chiefs 4-2 and a game between Atlanta Crackers and the Barons was postponed at Atlanta.

Joe Lahoy scored both Jacksonville runs, getting the first on a home run and crossing the plate on Ted Savage's single to right field in the second.

Pete Charton took the loss, his first in three starts.

Syracuse pitcher Jack Hamilton, after allowing only four hits over seven innings, sprained his ankle while racing to first on routine out and Toledo scored all its runs in the final two innings.

Joey Durelle Stripped

Says Fans Cost Title

MONTREAL (CP) — Joey Durelle says he thinks the fact Montreal boxing fans don't like him may have cost him his Canadian welterweight title.

Durelle, stripped of the crown Tuesday by the Canadian Boxing Federation, said in an interview he is unpopular with local fans because he beat their favorite, Armand Savoie, in two straight fights.

Durelle was suspended by the Montreal Athletic Commission for refusing to meet Savoie for a third time May 4. This suspension led to the federation's decision to lift the welterweight title.

Durelle said he informed promoters of the May 4 fight that he could not meet the date because of the recent death of his father.

Newlyweds Honeymoon In Hills of California

By JAMES BACON

CARMEL, Calif. (AP)—Movie stars usually spend honeymoons in glamorous settings like the Riviera or Acapulco.

But not newlyweds Kim Novak and British actor Richard Johnson. They've been camping out in the hills of the rugged Big Sur country near here.

"We just packed our supplies in the station wagon," says Kim "and honeymooned in sleeping bags. It's the world's greatest way to get away from it all.

"For days, we saw nothing but deer, and rabbits."

Kim is used to the rugged life. For years, she has maintained a home here as an escapee promontory. For Johnson, the camping trip was something he hadn't done since childhood.

"But I found out that my wife is a good cook," says Johnson. "It was a fortunate thing because out in those wilds you have a captive appetite."

GOING ON ROAD

Kim and her husband wind up their honeymoon here next week or so to go on the road for The Amorous Adventures of Moll Flanders.

It's the picture where the two met, and under, Kim says, a terrific handicap for an actress and actor.

"Richard kept upstaging me" she says. "And when I'd complain, he would apologize by saying that he had spent most of his life in the theatre and didn't understand movie technique.

But when an actor upstages an actress and finally marries her, he's got to be quite a guy. There are some who say that Johnson is one of Britain's finest actors.

He's been in the business for 20 years, starting with John Gielgud in Hamlet.

Both he and Kim are shopping for a script to do together.

"I'm anxious to concentrate on films from now on," he says. "If we had so many years in the theatre that I'm now ready for a new challenge."

The newlyweds plan to divide their time between California and London, where Johnson has a house.

RICHARD BUYS HOUSE

Actor Cyril Richard, now in the new musical The Roar of the Greasepaint with Anthony Newley, has bought a house and 21 acres in Ridgefield, Conn.

— Francois Leduc, new French ambassador to Canada, counts scores of Canadians among personal acquaintances he made in France during the post-war years. France's New Ambassador To Canada Says Winter's Not So Bad After All

By BENOIT HOULE

OTTAWA (CP)—After shedding several layers of clothing, France's new ambassador to Canada decided on the ski slopes of the Gatineau River valley last month that Canadian winters are not so bad after all.

"I was wrapped up like an onion," Ambassador Francois Leduc, 52, told a reporter, "But the sun's heat won out."

The warmth of the day was evident also in the sunburned faces of Mrs. Leduc and three of their children who went along on the skiing excursion.

Mr. Leduc, who succeeded Raymond Bousquet as ambassador in March, had never set foot in Canada until 1954, when he visited Ottawa as a member of a French government mission dealing with the operation of his country's fishing vessels off Newfoundland.

Still he feels he is no stranger here.

His counts scores of Canadians among the personal acquaintances he made in France during the post - war years. Among them is Governor-General Georges Vanier, who at the time was Canada's ambassador in Paris, and thus it was to "an old friend" that Mr. Leduc presented his credential in Ottawa.

GIVEN TROPHY

One of the ambassador's treasured possessions is a trophy received from Canadians stationed at Marville and Grostenquin air bases in France.

A model of a jet aircraft, it is engraved "in appreciation of the generous co-operation" of Mr. Leduc and refers to his work in 1952-53 as head of a central liaison mission to assist Allied forces in France.

"Making contacts was easy with these military men who came into a friendly foreign country without seeking to impose their own ways," he said. "Rarely have I seen men adapt so quickly to new surroundings."

The ambassador said he hopes to increase the number of his Canadian acquaintances, as well as his knowledge of the country, by visiting all parts of Canada as soon as it can be arranged, beginning with Montreal and Quebec City.

There will be no language barrier anywhere on his cross-Canada trip, since he learned to speak English fluently at an early age.

CAPTURED BY GERMANS

Born in Paris in 1912, Mr. Leduc graduated in law and political science from the University of Paris and later studied history and international law at King's College, Cambridge.

As a lieutenant in the French artillery during the Second World War, he was taken prisoner in June, 1940, and spent five years in a prison camp at Pommern in eastern Germany.

On his release he joined the French government service and subsequently accepted posts in Tunis, Bonn and Brussels.

In addition to his diplomatic work, Mr. Leduc is chairman of the board of a large European radio and television station and president of la Federation Parisienne des Clubs de Prevention, an organization that works with youths of between 15 and 20 to prevent juvenile delinquency.

Two days before his arrival in Canada, he was re-elected mayor of a Paris suburb of 900 population, an office he has held for the last 12 years.

Mr. Leduc said he hopes to take care of his various additional responsibilities by correspondence. "At least, we will see how it works out."

With him to Canada came Mrs. Leduc, Bruno, 14, Beatrice, 12, and Monique, 9.

Their four older children—Jacqueline, 19, Etienne, 18, Bernard, 17, and Jean-Paul, 16—are attending school in France.

China Seen Only Winner In New Border Clash

By JOSEPH McCREEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

China is seen as the only winner in the new border clash between India and Pakistan, the Commonwealth sister countries which so often seem ready for a cat fight.

To British observers it seems clear that frontier clash between the two countries in the barren Rann of Kutch can only benefit their powerful Communist neighbor.

The British government has undoubtedly planned public opinion by instructing the two high commissioners, John Freeman in New Delhi and Sir Morrice James in Karachi, formally to express concern to the squabbling subsidiaries.

At the very least the conflict must deflect Indian attention and resources from the Chinese border, a danger district ever since the Chinese aggression of 1962. There are unshown reports that China may be ready to take advantage of the diversion.

A SAD FACT

India may well feel that the trouble, for which she blames Pakistan, has been inspired by Peking in the light of the more friendly moves between Pakistan and China and the exchange of visits by their leaders. But the sad fact is that India and Pakistan have not needed a third party to stir up trouble between them since they attained independence in 1947.

There were encouraging signs before Indian Prime Minister Nehru's death last year that both countries were taking a more moderate approach to their main problem, disputed Kashmir.

And when Lal Bahader Shastri succeeded Nehru there seemed to be a gentleman's agreement — perhaps unspoken — between Shastri and Pakistan's President Ayub Khan to avoid mutual recriminations and provocations.

The agreement—if it ever existed — was short - lived and within a few months there were new Indian statements about bringing Kashmir into the union, accompanied by moves to put Kashmir under Delhi control.

British newspaper comment on the new turmoil is pessimistic, along the lines that neither side can afford this fight when they should instead be devoting their resources to crucial internal problems.

FUELLING HATTER

There is considerable puzzlement as to why the fighting occurred over the barren area, which has valuable exploitation in the oil potentialities of its distant offshore. There has never been a definite agreed-upon border line. Generally the fighting is seen as a symptom of tension between the two countries rather than outright instead for land.

Some British observers comment, somewhat ironically that India's stress claims was taken not because the Shastri regime has established itself firmly but because of its weakness.

In this view, Shastri betrayed weakness when he called in the Indian Parliament for end of criticism of his governament and added: "We must show the world we stand united."

The theory is that Shastri hasn't even a fatal lease of face if he showed softness in the dispute. As the Yorkshire Post put it:

"After that a cynical world can hardly be blamed if it wonders" that the Kutch trouble is due to Pakistan, and how much is due to increasing domestic political pressure on the Shastri government."

BATTLE RAGING IN SANTO DOMINGO

Quake Leaves 5 Dead, Damage In Millions

SEATTLE (AP) — Washington State counted five dead today, scores injured and damage in the millions of dollars in the wake of the Pacific northwest's worst earthquake in more than a decade.

In Seattle, the hardest hit area, Frank Brock, assistant superintendent of schools, said the loss to the system "should easily be in excess of $1,000,000."

Eight public schools were closed and two may not be back in operation for some time, he said.

Easley Llewellyn, state civil defence director, said it was impossible to give an accurate damage estimate than reports from around the state had been compiled.

Some roads heaved upward, others sagged downward; bridges swayed and some freeway ramps buckled as the tremor rolled through at 8:29 a.m. Thursday.

TANK EXPLODES

Raymond Haughton, 32, and Eugene Goulet, 40, were near a 14-storey tower at the Fisher flour mills when a 50,000-gallon wooden water tank atop the structure exploded. Torrents of water and twisted timbers cascaded down upon them. Haughton died in the debris, Goulet was critically injured.

Adolphus Lewis, 69, was hurrying to his usual morning breakfast at a restaurant near his downtown rooming house. A concrete parapet struck him down. A pile of bricks quickly covered the dead man.

Mrs. James Johnson, 56, of Seattle, died while talking on the telephone. Mrs. Ethel Veh, 75, Tacoma and Zenola Lorenz, Olympic, were found dead. All were victims of heart attacks.

The earthquake knocked the needles off the University of Washington seismograph, but seismologists elsewhere said it registered 6.5 to 7 on the Richter scale. The devastating Alaska earthquake of March 27, 1964 was rated at 8.3 on the Richter scale that also killed 115.

The epicentre was pinpointed in the vicinity of Dabob Bay or Hood Canal about 30 miles west of downtown Seattle.

The quake rumbled through British Columbia where buildings were jarred and windows rattled on Vancouver Island and 300 miles inland at Trail. It was felt in northern Idaho, western Montana and Oregon, but no injuries or damage were reported in those states.

STATIONS DAMAGED

Three rolling shock waves, lasting nearly a minute tore through the area, the worst in older parts of Seattle and Tacoma. Both railway stations in

Judge Will Give Ruling May 30th

ST. JOHNS, Que. (CP) — Judge Andrew Regnier is to decide May 20 whether to commit Yvon Dupuis for voluntary statement on influence-peddling charges arising from attempts to build a race track in his federal riding of St. Jean - Iberville - Napierville in 1961.

The judge set the date for his ruling late Thursday, after the Crown completed its case against the former federal minister - without - portfolio at preliminary hearing.

Voluntary statement is a stage in Quebec legal proceedings at which the defence may present evidence in an attempt to have charges dismissed without a trial.

Defence lawyer Raymond Daoust has said he will present a defence at voluntary statement if the case reaches that stage.

The charges against Mr. Dupuis allege that he accepted $10,000 in cash for using his influence to support a 1961 application to the Quebec government for a race track charter.

The charter, which would have authorized the operation

Pakistan Rejects Indian Truce Terms

RAWALPINDI (AP) — Pakistan turned down Indian terms for a cease-fire in the disputed Rann of Kutch today.

A government spokesman said the Indian-Pakistani fighting could not end on terms suggested by Indian Prime Minister Shastri.

India demanded restoration of the status quo before the fighting erupted April 8. This would mean Pakistan would have to withdraw from areas it considers to be Pakistani.

London and Washington are both trying to bring an end to the fighting in the barren wasteland about 150 miles southeast of Karachi. British and American envoys in both countries have been actively working for a cease-fire.

Nun Says Animals Have Souls, Flouts Order to Close Shelter

VICTORIA (CP)—A Roman Catholic nun ordered by the church to close her animal shelter says "nobody's going to stop us."

Mother Mary Cecilia, 75, said Thursday she and five other members of her order will not obey the church directive because "the church doesn't own the shelter and they have no control over it."

THE WEATHER

Synopsis — Strong winds will sweep over Ontario by this evening and end the season's first heat wave.

Mother Cecilia built the shelter two years ago with money inherited from her father.

The former mother superior of St. Mary's Priory, a member of the Benedictine order Sisters of the Love of Jesus, says animals have immortal souls and lost life human beings.

The closure order Thursday from Rev. Andrew Keber of the Benedictine order of Westminster Abbey, Mission City, B.C., said the shelter must be closed by next Tuesday. It currently has 60 and five nuns who work with her have been ordered to return to the priory.

Complaints stated by the church include:

That the shelter has an "adverse effect" on the neighborhood. Catholics are surprised at a nun who handles her own finances and disposes of her property as she chooses"; prior to the formation of the shelter the sisters carried out "truly heroic work" with the sick and aged in the priory.

Mother Cecilia said the shelter would continue to operate.

A spokesman for Victoria diocese, Msgr. Michael O'Connell, said the church will "enforce the closure order." He said the sisters took a vow of obedience and if they don't follow the order they will have broken their vows.

"I don't care what they do," said mother Cecilia. "There are no grounds for excommunication."

Complaints that noise from the 100 or so animals in her shelter disturb the neighborhood are "just an excuse" to blanket a theological dispute about the souls of animals.

"God created animals the same as people," she said.

Highway Program Outlined

TORONTO (CP) — A multi-million dollar highways construction program for 1965-66 was announced in the legislature Thursday by Highways Minister Charles MacNaughton.

A total of $138,797,000 will be spent on major construction work, including the start on the Kitchener - Waterloo expressway and the first of three tunnels under the Welland Canal.

The minister said other work will be undertaken on the Macdonald - Cartier Freeway, the Ottawa Queensway, Highways 17, 11, 101 and 105 in Northern Ontario, the Sudbury - Timmins highway, Highway 403 through Hamilton and the Brantford bypass.

Referring to the planned layoff of 1,050 employees by the Ford Motor Co., Economics Minister Stanley Randall said Paul Martin, the external affairs minister, was "running off at the chin" when he claimed the federal government had no advance notice of the move, said to have resulted from the Canada - U.S. auto trade agreement.

Mr. Randall said Ford offi-

Pope Urges Negotiations, Saying War Threat Grows

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope Paul appealed today for "conversations and negotiations at all levels" to avert the threat of war. He made his plea in the second encyclical letter of his reign.

The pontiff said the international situation is "darker and more uncertain than ever, now that grave new threats are endangering the supreme benefit of world peace."

He did not mention specific world trouble spots by name. But he spoke of "unspeakable sufferings caused by agitation, guerrilla warfare, acts of war, ever growing in extent and intensity, which could at any moment produce a spark for a terrible fresh conflict."

The reference seemed to apply particularly to Viet Nam.

The 2,000-word encyclical was entitled "Mense Maio" — the month of May—from the first two words of its Latin text.

Addressing all Roman Catholics, Pope Paul urged prayers for world peace and for the success of the second Vatican ecumenical council, which resumes for its final session Sept. 14.

He noted that the month of May is especially dedicated to devotion to the Virgin Mary, and exhorted his flock:

"So, venerable brothers, let our prayers ascend to Mary in this month of hers."

"We beg all who hold responsibility in public life not to remain deaf to the unanimous desire of mankind which wants peace," the Pope said.

"We ask that they do all in their power to preserve the peace, that is threatened, and continue at all time to foster and encourage conversations and negotiations at all levels, that the dangerous resort to force with all its lamentable consequences, material, spiritual and moral, may be halted."

Pope Paul deplored the horrors of law and human values; he attacked guerrilla warfare, terrorism and reprisals in these words:

"We cannot fail to raise our voices in defence of the dignity of man and of Christian civilization. We cannot fail to condemn acts of guerrilla warfare and of terrorism, the practice of holding hostages and of taking reprisals against unarmed civilians.

"These are crimes which not only reverse the development of the sense of what is fair and humane, but also embitter even more the hearts of those in conflict.

"These outrages can block the paths still open to mutual good will or at least can render more difficult negotiations which, if conducted with openness and fairness, could lead to a reasonable settlement."

Pope Paul noted that other Roman Catholic pontiffs had also asked for prayers to Mary in May "whenever danger hovered menacingly over the world." He went on:

"When we look at the present needs of the church or at the state of peace in the world, we have compelling reasons for believing that the present hour is especially grave: That it makes a call for united prayer a matter of urgency."

Abel Declared Winner of USW Election

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Challenger I. W. Abel was declared today the official winner of a bitter fight for president of the 1,000,000-member United Steelworkers Union.

Union tellers announced that Abel, 56 - year - old secretary-treasurer of the USW, beat long-time President David J. McDonald by 10,000 votes in the Feb. 5 election.

Neither Abel nor McDonald was present at a press conference where the results were reported. Both were expected to have statements later.

The tellers' report said Abel polled 200,810 votes and McDonald 298,768.

The main question now is whether McDonald, head of the union since 1952, will seek a new election under federal labor law, thus perhaps clouding steel contract negotiations during the four-month strike truce ending Sept. 1.

Abel will take office June 1 for a four-year term.

Liberals Win Vote In House

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP)—Members of Parliament took time out from the Stanley Cup finals telecast Thursday night to sustain the minority Liberal government in office by a vote of 106 to 90.

The Liberals were saved by the absence of 37 opposition MPs, including 28 Conservatives, as a New Democratic nonconfidence motion came to a vote on the second day of the budget debate.

The motion criticized the government for failing to boost old age pensions to $100 a month from $75 and failing to increase basic income tax deductions to $3,000 from $2,000 for married taxpayers and to $1,500 from $1,000 for single persons.

Attendance in the House dipped to about 30 before the vote as MPs congregated around office and portable TV sets to watch the sixth game of the Montreal-Chicago National Hockey League finals.

Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson had his three colleagues from the West were the only opposition MPs to vote with the Liberals. Their spokesman in the debate, Bert Leboe (Cariboo), said they supported the aims of the motion but would vote against it to avoid

U.S. Airborne Troops Landed; See Red Threat

From AP-Reuters

SANTO DOMINGO (CP) — U.S. airborne troops landed in the Dominican Republic today, swelling U.S. forces in the country to 4,200 men as civil war dragged Santo Domingo to the point of anarchy.

A major battle was raging in Santo Domingo, the capital, between leftist rebels and loyalist forces, a U.S. embassy spokesman said.

The official said casualties totalled several hundred dead and wounded. Hospitals in the beleaguered city were full to the overflowing, with many patients lying on the floor.

Before today's fighting, estimates of casualties in the civil war ranged between 400 to more than 1,000 dead and more than 1,200 wounded.

News of the battle coincided with a Washington announcement that two battalions of U.S. paratroopers were flown in to the San Isidro Air Base just outside this capital city today.

REINFORCE MARINES

The complement of about 2,500 men from the 82nd Airborne Division were flown to the Caribbean island to reinforce the some 1,500 marines already landed.

The military junta formed two days ago announced it had appealed for intervention by American troops to help restore order, but U.S. officials said action other than to protect American lives and property would require authorization from the Organization of American States.

However, President Johnson's administration was authoritatively reported in Washington to be on the alert for action to meet any Communist threat to take over the Dominican Republic or plunge it into a Communist "war of liberation."

U.S. Ambassador to Santo Domingo released at list of 58 members of Dominican Communist organizations with which they said were believed to have played key roles in the rebellion. Beside the name of each man was the Communist country where he was said to have trained—Cuba, China or the Soviet Union.

The rebellion was launched by a group of young army military officers seeking to return exiled president Juan Bosch to office. But U.S. officials in Santo Domingo and other observers believe no one now is in control—or could regain control—of the armed rebel bands. These include many young civilians.

WEAPONS AUTOMATIC

Armed with machine-guns and other automatic weapons, several thousand rebels were reported still holding out in the centre of this bullet-pocked capital where leftist elements have been trying for seven days to topple the government of Donald Reid Cabral. Thousand Russian-made Rifles Seized 50 Miles South of Saigon

From AP-Reuters

SAIGON (CP) — U.S. jets smashed two major ammunition and supply depots in North Viet Nam today, U.S. spokesmen reported. One of the targets hit was only 75 miles south of Hanoi.

On the ground, South Vietnamese troops today uncovered a Viet Cong cache of 1,100 Russian-made rifles about 50 miles south of Saigon, military sources said.

The troops were taking part in operations by two battalions on an island in the Mekong River delta.

The operation, now in its third day, has cost the Viet Cong more than 80 killed.

Fifty-one A-1E Skyraiders and A-4 Skyhawks from the carriers Hancock and Midway hit the Phuc Linh Secret army supply depot, 75 miles from the North Vietnamese capital, and the Phu Qui ammunition depot, 25 miles farther south.

The pilots reported that 15 buildings were destroyed, seven were damaged and four railway box cars knocked out.

The U.S. planes dropped 38 tons of bombs and hit their targets with rockets and cannon fire.

All the planes returned safely to their carriers, the spokesmen said.

A U.S. military spokesman reported that the big infantry sweep through the swamps of Kien Hoa province, in the Mekong delta, also uncovered some American Springfield rifles in the Viet Cong arms cache and a ton of high explosives. Many of the arms were still coated with protective covering and were wrapped in heavy paper.

Shortly after the weapons were found, the Viet Cong launched a counter - attack which apparently failed.

After the initial assaults Wednesday, government troops claimed 96 Viet Cong bodies were found and that more than 70 other Communist troops had been killed by machine-gun fire from American helicopters.

Tighter Credit In Britain

LONDON (CP) — The Labor government turned the screw on Britain's already tight credit Thursday — a shock move that came just as dealers were expecting credit to be eased.

It was the second tough step in as many days by Prime Minister Wilson's administration in its battle for financial stability and industrial efficiency.

The Bank of England announced it is pulling in £30,000,000 ($270,000,000) from 11 clearing banks under a "special deposits" device used for the first and only previous time by a Conservative government in 1955.

Use of the deflationary weapon simply means it will be that much harder for companies and individuals to borrow money from banks at a time of year when borrowing tends to be brisk.

POUND STRONGER

Following the announcement, share prices were slashed on the stock market but significantly enough, the pound sterling was stronger. One of Wilson's main aims has been to strengthen sterling in international dealings.

Dealers who had been hoping for a small cut in the bank rate — increased by a record seven per cent from five after Wilson took power last October were staggered by the news that credit was to be squeezed tighter still. The news reached dealers at the same time as weekly announcements on the bank rate.

A Bank of England spokesman said the move was made "in view of the sharp increase in bank advances last month."

Loans have continued rising despite a letter sent out last December by Lord Cromer, the bank's president, asking for restraint. Bank loans shot up in five weeks to mid-April by

Planning Board to Request Sidney Place Developments Under Subdivision Control

Spirited discussion of the division in Sidney Township and of Belleville's traffic and parking problems highlighted a Belleville and Suburban Planning Board meeting Thursday night at City Hall.

The Board decided to send a formal letter to Sidney Council requesting it to declare parts of the township as areas of subdivision control. The request was prompted by the creation of two large subdivisions within the Sidney planning area, but outside an area of subdivision control.

Planning Director P. J. Beavis said that these subdivisions contain 295 lots in a ribbon of development along one and three-quarter miles of what he described as largely open rural public. We can do nothing about these subdivisions now, but subdivision control would insure future orderly development of land."

REEVE OBJECTS

Reeve E. Kells of Sidney at first opposed subdivision control. "A portion of land under subdivision control might as well have a plague on it. Nothing happens there," he said.

Mr. Beavis explained that while, in the beginning, the new subdivision might bring in a larger revenue, eventual costs of road improvements and utilities would increase the financial burden on the township.

"We're already paying for roads we wouldn't have to, if controls had been put on," interjected Board member Horace Knight.

Mr. Beavis said that this form of land development reduces the incentive for other developers in the township to create high standard subdivisions.

"I don't like that," said Reeve Kells. "Sidney will need guidance on those parts of the township where subdivision control should be put into effect."

Mr. Beavis suggested that if no action is taken on the Board's letter by Sidney Council, the Board seek the intercession of the Minister of Municipal Affairs.

TRAFFIC PATTERN CHANGED

Belleville's City Council is now ready to implement the five-year-old De Lew-Cather traffic survey results, Mayor J. R. Ellis said Council thinks traffic counts and traffic flow patterns have changed since 1960, and should be retaken. Mr. Beavis felt that, because no planning advice was available to DeLew-Cather, their survey contained no program for growth of the city.

Board member M. P. Wiegand said he thought traffic a vital factor in planning. "I would be afraid to put it entirely in the hands of engineers, who are concerned merely with the movement of cars," he added.

A joint meeting of Planning Board and Belleville members of Council will be held to reconsider the city's traffic problems. Mr. Beavis was asked Board to consider a new approach to parking down-town parking situation. Both parking lots are filled with unemployed cars and don't materially increase the space available for the public. Each parking space costs a developer about $2,500. Mr. Beavis outlined a plan used in the western United States. Merchants pay two-thirds of parking lot costs to the local Parking Authority, which provides public parking facilities.

"Our parking situation isn't desperate enough yet for multi-storied parking structures operated by private investors. But in a few years' time that may be the best solution," he added.

FORESEES AMALGAMATION

During discussion of land use and traffic problems Mayor Ellis predicted, "Most of us will live to see the day Trenton and Belleville are one big municipality. I forecast a quarter million population by the year 2000."

The board accepted the resignation of Assistant Planner, L. R. Kristof, who is leaving to take a position with the Ontario Government. Mr. Beavis said town's such as Belleville are financially unable to attract and retain trained planning staff. There is an overall Canadian shortage of trained staff and small cities pay find themselves without adequate planning advice. In view of the tremendous growth anticipated within the next 20 years it is essential that proper planning policies be determined in the near future or small towns will find themselves faced with all the problems of uncontrolled growth and sprawl, said Mr. Beavis.

Has Hiccupped Twice a Minute For Two Years

ELMWOOD, Ill. (AP). — Frank Dismang, a 66-year-old former truck driver, sat down for breakfast May 10, 1963, and hiccupped. He hasn't stopped since.

"It's not only monotonous, it's just about gotten me down," Dismang said Thursday.

He has been to three hospitals and undergone one operation without success. The doctors, Dismang said, are stumped.

"I'm not a drinking man," said Dismang, "but I drank whisky out of an aluminum pan and drank lemon juice and vodka and things people told me would cure my hiccups. They didn't work."

Dismang, who now works as a porter, estimated he hiccups twice a minute. He said he tries to hold his breath to control the constant strain, which tends to make him nervous.

"It's not funny," said Dismang.

Landing of Marines Bound To Stir up Old Resentments

-By CARMAN CUMMING
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The landing of United States marines in the Dominican Republic is bound to stir up old resentments through the hemisphere—no matter how worthy Washington's motives.

Dominicans and other Latin Americans have not forgotten the free-wheeling "big stick" days when the marines acted as policemen of the hemisphere. Dominicans recall the 1924 occupation that lasted eight years between 1916 and 1924.

That kind of gunboat diplomacy ended with Franklin D. Roosevelt's policy of "good neighbor" policy. But whites in ancient Santo Domingo can still expect an occasional "yanqui" jeer from the children.

In the new intervention, the U.S. says the marines have been sent in only to evacuate Americans threatened by the civil fighting.

But inevitably suspicions have been expressed that they were sent in to act on the spot in case the confused fighting develops into a Communist take-over.

The New York Herald Tribune, in its lead story Thursday, said President Johnson ordered the marines in "hoping to prevent a possible take-over by Communists."

In Washington, the White house denied reports congressmen had been told of a Communist take-over was behind the landing.

In the confused world of Dominican politics, it is not too strange that the rebels described as pro-Castro are the same elements that set out last weekend to bring back ex-president Juan Bosch.

Bosch, though well to the left, was never a Castro sympathizer and he is now described as a "Yankee puppet" by the Cuban leader.

Reports from Santo Domingo have varied widely on the political make-up of the revolution. But there is evidence that what started as a pro-Bosch show, with support from several other leftist groups, has come increasingly under the control of extremists.

If this evidence is borne out, the U.S. will be tempted to use the marines as a bridgehead to prevent formation of a Communist government.

But Washington also will be well aware U.S. intervention, on the side of right-wing military juntas, could provide precisely the threat the extremists need to weld a united front.

Equally aware that many Dominicans still feel the U.S. was partly to blame for conditions that led to the 31-year dictatorship of Rafael Trujillo, whose repressive rule ended with his assassination in 1961.

In the turmoil since then, opposition to military rule has been one of the few factors bringing together the conflicting political views.

So a military government supported by the marines would be hard put indeed for the Dominicans to swallow.

Thinks Canada Due for Slump To Offset Boom

TORONTO (CP) — Canada may soon be due for a recession to correct the excesses of the present boom conditions, V. W. Scully, president of Steel Co. of Canada Ltd., said here Thursday.

Mr. Scully told the Canadian Automotive Parts Manufacturers Association that the Canadian economy is showing symptoms of a decline of slackening business tempo.

Such booms have always been followed by the correction of excesses by recessions, he said.

"The symptoms that a correction may be on the way now are beginning to, show. These include widespread additions to manufacturing capacity, increase in raw material prices, high employment levels and stronger wage pressures than in recent years."

Application for Separation Of McLure and Wicklow From Bangor Made to Municipal Bd.

The number of municipal representatives in Hastings county council could be increased to 34 if reeves and deputy reeves if an application before the Ontario Municipal Board for a division of the three northern townships is successful.

The application is for the separation of the townships of McLure and Wicklow, from the township of Bangor. The application was dumped.

Bangor is not a drinking man," said Dismang, "but I drank whisky out of an aluminum pan and drank lemon juice and vodka and things people told me would cure my hiccups. They didn't work."

Dismang, who now works as a porter, estimated he hiccups twice a minute. He said he tries to hold his breath to control the constant strain, which tends to make him nervous.

Layoff by Ford Cut to 49 Men After Meeting

OTTAWA (CP) — An initial plan to lay off 250 Ford of Canada auto workers at Windsor, Ont., in mid-May has been reduced to 49 men, it was announced Thursday following a 2½-hour conference of labor, management and federal officials.

The May layoff is the first of Ford scheduled at the big Ford plant. By mid-August between 1,800 and 1,000 production workers will be put out of work while Ford carries out an extensive changeover and modernization plan.

George Burt, Canadian director of the United Auto Workers (UAW), told reporters after the meeting that Labor Minister MacEachen is studying a plan to protect the dislodged Ford workers from loss of income during the layoff period which will extend to April of 1966 for some of them.

Kenneth Hallsworth, director of industrial relations for Ford of Canada, said the sharp reduction in the May layoff was in part possible by separating 201 workers in other jobs.

Mr. Burt and Mr. Hallsworth headed the union and company groups at the meeting attended by Mr. MacEachen, Industry Minister Drury, External Affairs Minister Martin and top labor department officials.

MEANS INCREASE

The plant shutdown-layoff is a result of the new Canadian-American agreement for free trade in automobiles. It will mean increased production and employment at the Windsor plant next year.

Mr. Burt has taken the stand that the agreement should include income protection for the workers laid off for plant changeovers.

He said he has pressed Mr. MacEachen and others in the cabinet to adopt the plan being proposed by the U.S. government as part of its role in the new agreement.

The U.S. is proposing to pay dislocated auto workers 65 per cent of the average manufacturing wage in that country. Added to the supplementary unemployment benefit provided in union contracts, this would provide workers with a total payment close to their regular wage.

Mr. Burt said if this plan is adopted by the Canadian government it would mean paying each laid-off worker $106 per week. The supplementary unemployment benefit from Ford would give the workers a total of $102 weekly, just short of the auto industry's average of $106.

The union leader said Mr. MacEachen told Wednesday's meeting that his department has the U.S. plan under study and promised to have a Canadian formula worked out before the heaviest Ford layoffs in mid-August.

Opposition Accused of Filibustering

TORONTO (CP) — Premier Robarts accused the Opposition today of filibustering during a housing debate as the Thursday night sitting of the legislature droned on to the early morning hours.

The premier finally adjourned the House at 12:45 a.m., its latest night session since 1961. The house normally ends its night sittings between 10:30 and 11 p.m.

At 12:20 a.m., Liberal Leader Andrew Thompson rose and told Mr. Robarts it was nonsense to keep the house going for so long.

Members had to be back for the start of today's sitting at 10:30 a.m.

But the premier said he had the feeling the Opposition was engaging in a deliberate filibuster during debate on the estimates of the department of economics and development.

Reg Gisborn (Hamilton-Wentworth East) was discussing housing problems at the time.

Both Mr. Thompson and NDP Leader Donald MacDonald denied their parties were carrying on a filibuster. Mr. MacDonald challenged Premier Robarts to say which of the two opposition parties was guilty.

Annual Meeting Kept in Turmoil For Two Hours

KINGSTON (CP) — Two dissident minority shareholders kept the Lakeland Natural Gas Ltd. annual meeting in a turmoil for more than two hours Thursday.

The argument centred around the acquisition in February of 47 per cent of Lakeland shares by Northern Ontario Natural Gas Co. Ltd.

George F a l l i s and Alfred Best, who claimed to represent the interests of minority shareholders, objected to NONG's gaining control of Lakeland and to authorization of an offer of $8.65 a share for the remaining outstanding shares of Lakeland.

Mr. F a l l i s contended that Lakeland stock could be valued fairly at more than $9.17 in July or August.

The contentious pair nonetheless each other for directorships in Lakeland, but the nominations were defeated.

WON APPROVAL

However, they did win approval for a motion calling for a code of procedure to be followed in takeover bids.

The code would be prepared after consultations between members of the executive committee of the Trust Companies Association of Canada, the Investment Dealers' Association of Canada and the various Canadian stock exchanges.

C. Spencer C l a r k, former NONG president, appeared at the meeting in control of a majority of Lakeland proxy votes. He abstained from voting the motion that recommended compliance with the code on takeover bids.

The Lakeland company reported a gain of 20.2 per cent in volume of natural gas sold in 1964 from the previous year.

Parliamentary Notebook

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — The prospects are that Forestry Minister Sauve will remain active in the federal cabinet and federal politics for some time to come, rumor and speculation to the contrary notwithstanding.

A rash of corridor gossip and speculation in recent weeks has sounded as though the 41 year-old minister is on the point of leaving Ottawa.

But informants say that the only thing which could bring about his sudden departure at the moment is an early general election and prospects for one are fading rapidly.

Mr. Sauve is reported to be "sufficiently hopeful that changes will be made in the federal Liberal party structure in Quebec to ensure his continued participation in federal politics.

The alternatives are a move into the provincial field or a return to private business. Both are said to have been considered by him in recent weeks but set aside.

This is said to be the true significance of a reply by Mr. Sauve when asked in the Commons this week about his political future.

"I thank the honorable member for being concerned with my welfare, but this time he will see what happens."

WANTS NEW BLOOD

Mr. Sauve is understood to be anxious that the federal Liberal party find new blood to participate in the next federal election with a larger number of candidates and campaign workers men involved in Quebec's quiet revolution.

Otherwise, a Liberal administration in Ottawa would find itself repeatedly on a collision course with the Quebec Liberal administration of Premier Lesage. The ultimate result of this could be unbearable strains on the bonds of confederation.

Mr. Sauve is regarded as a strong confederationist but one who considers the partnership of English and French must be an active one. A sleeping partnership on the part of the Quebec participants—except when some matter arises directly connected with Quebec — is not good enough in his view.

He is at times impatient to see French-Canadians play a stronger role in this partnership. He tends to get depressed about achieving this, especially when he contrasts his efforts with the achievements of close friends who are important forces in the Quebec administration.

When it appeared some weeks ago that the federal government was poised on the brink of a federal election, he is reported to have seriously considered leaving federal affairs.

MAKES ASSESSMENT

Prime Minister Pearson is understood to have received a verbal assessment from him covering several points. One is said to have been that the Liberal government and its MPs in Ottawa must show a greater understanding than hitherto of the aims of Quebec Liberals or the drive Quebecers out of federal affairs.

Some criticisms attributed to him were published this week in the Montreal French - language newspaper Le Devoir. Those familiar with his thinking consider many of them sound reflections of Mr. Sauve's views.

He is said to be critical of federal g o v e r n m e n t "ineptitude" in relations with Quebec, arising from a lack of understanding of where Quebec is going. The quality of Quebec's ministers and MPs in Ottawa was said to suffer by contrast with the men active in the Quebec government.

The implication was that neither Justice Minister Favreau, Mr. Pearson's chief lieutenant in Quebec, nor Secretary of State Judy L a m o n t a g n e, regarded as the prime minister's closest adviser and understanding of where Quebec is going. The quality of Quebec's ministers and MPs in Ottawa was said to suffer by contrast with the men active in the Quebec government.

The implication was that neither Justice Minister Favreau, Mr. Pearson's chief lieutenant in Quebec, nor Secretary of State Judy L a m o n t a g n e, regarded as the prime minister's closest adviser among the Quebec ministers, interpreted Quebec trends strongly enough to Mr. Pearson's liking or moving too slowly on efforts to give Quebec federal Liberals a new face.

CAUSE DISTURBANCE

When the Quebec Liberal Federation and the federal Liberals in Quebec decided last year to hold their own ways, setting up separate constituency organizations, the Sauve group of federal Liberals was given some influence on the policy committee.

But the so-called "old guard" remained in control of the party's finances and regional organizations. Within recent weeks, the Sauve group has won some pieces in the Montreal area organization and apparently is striving to break the old guard control.

The aim of these manoeuvres apparently is to attract more Quebec revolutionaries into the federal field, not to displace current Liberal MPs.

And apparently Mr. Sauve considers it essential that this be done before the next election in the interests of a stronger Quebec voice at Ottawa as insurance against Quebec drifting out of confederation.

Of course, this is based on the expectation that the Liberals in the next election will win a majority of seats and at least 15 more than their current 47 federal seats in Quebec.

Fleming Assails Gordon's Plan as 'Dangerous'

TORONTO (CP) — Former Finance Minister Donald Fleming lashed out Thursday night at the government's proposed Canada Development Corp., calling it "extremely dangerous and ill - advised".

Making his first public speech since he retired from public life two years ago, he said the corporation could have "calamitous consequences" and expressed hope Finance Minister Gordon will reconsider and withdraw it.

The proposed $1,000,000,000 corporation was outlined by Mr. Gordon in his budget Monday night. The public would be invited to buy shares, initially at $5 each, and the proceeds used to help finance private business enterprises.

Government holdings in the corporation would be limited to 10 per cent of the outstanding shares.

Mr. Fleming, now practising law, told the annual dinner of the Trust Companies Association of Canada that he was speaking as a businessman, and not as a former Progressive Conservative minister.

Among his points:

SEES NO JUSTIFICATION

There was no justification for the government entering into competition with existing business that was operating efficiently.

It was a "fantastic illusion" to suggest the corporation could be independent of the government as Mr. Gordon said it would. If public money was invested in it, "how can the government and how can Parliament divorce themselves from responsibility to the Canadian public for its operations?"

The suggestion that financial support for the corporation would be sought from insurance companies, banks and other institutions was "dangerous in the extreme." The government had no right to press such institutions, f e e l i n g as it does on other people's money, to invest in the corporation.

The proposal had been greeted by some as a way to "buy Canada back," but even if fully subscribed and used to purchase foreign holdings in Canada the corporation could not account for more than four per cent of such holdings. "... It could never hope to acquire more than a very small fraction of present foreign investment in Canada.

Good investments were already finding adequate markets. "The riskiest of all would remain to be offered to the Canadian Development Corporation."

SEES MPS ENTREATING

Pressures would be exerted upon the corporation in its selection of investments. "I can picture local members of Parliament feeling obliged to add their entreaties ... on behalf of shaky enterprises in their constituencies."

Since the corporation was to provide financing to firms that might otherwise seek funds in other countries, "an enterprise which can scare up a foreign loan will have a march on the Canada Development Corporation and demand a bigger and better price."

If the corporation insisted on having members on the boards of firms it invested in, "its tactics can spread like those of an octopus throughout the Canadian economy."

If the corporation showed a profit, "can we be assured that the exigencies of the government, political and otherwise, will not enter into the declaration or withholding of dividends?"

House so Hot Meat Cooks In Freezer

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP)—"Boy, this place is like an oven!"

Mrs. Richard D. McCormick said Thursday that she returned home after a week's vacation with her two children and found her house baked to a turn.

Mrs. McCormick blamed a faulty shut-off furnace valve for raising the temperature to 200 degrees for seven days, practically r o a k i n g every item in the home. Her husband was away on a golf team.

The heat loosened glue in all the furniture, split plaster in the walls and ceilings and melted telephone records and golf balls. It even cooked stored food — including 700 pounds of meat in the freezer.

"Doors won't open, windows won't shut," she added. Walls, lampshades, rugs and furniture all were baked an even light brown.

"If the c h i l d r e n and I hadn't come back a day early, the place would have blown up, I'm sure," said Mrs. McCormick. Her chemistry professor-husband and firemen agreed.

Work of Concord House Outlined to Kiwanis Club

TRENTON — Boys who stray from the straight and narrow and run afoul of the law may have no qualms if the magistrate decides to send them to the Concord House in Toronto, the correction institution for first offenders, run by the Salvation Army. In fact, they may, and probably will, find conditions in the home much narrow to those in their own homes, and upon their release, they may succeed in introducing an entirely different atmosphere into their homes.

Capt. Louis Ashwell, assistant superintendent at the home, told members of the Trenton Kiwanis Club last night that the boys, generally between 16 and 19, mostly come from broken or unhappy homes, where they have had a minimum of love and understanding. They are mixed up and disturbed, unhappy and depressed. They have a feeling of inadequacy.

Once in the home, they are either sent to school or offered an opportunity to take a choice of three courses: farm work, service station training or kitchen work. They may graduate as expert farm hands, service station attendants, restaurant workers or short order cooks.

Boys in the home live under a rather strict set of rules, but are placed on a merit basis and may gain extra time off or other concessions by good behavior. Boys taking courses are paid. Those attending school or not taking courses receive an allowance.

While in the home they are given the benefit of a good recreational program, psychiatric treatment where indicated and are given opportunities to renew their spiritual life.

The whole aim of the home is to get the boys settled back into society.

70 IN HOME

Cpt. Ashwell said there are 70 boys in the home at present and maximum is only 80. Present expansion plans call for a 50 bed addition to the home, which will include a new dining room and a new chapel.

Cpt. Ashwell said that the home is always willing to work out such instances with money raised through the Red Shield campaign. A Red Shield Blitz night will be held in Trenton, May 3.

Capt. Ashwell was introduced by Jack Richmond and thanked by Geoffrey Robinson.

Fraser James, president of the Trenton Salvation Army Corps and a Kiwanian, reminded the members of the Trishaw concert on May 8, at the high school. There will be no meeting at the Gilbert Hotel next Thursday but members will attend a dinner at the school cafeteria on Saturday, prior to the band concert. Dinner is at 5:45 p.m.

Fraser "Babe" James presented a gift to past lieutenant governor, E. W. (Al) Weaver, who is leaving Trenton to take up residence in Toronto.

Jaycees Will Again Sponsor Soap Box Derby

TRENTON — The Trenton Jaycees decided Wednesday night to go ahead this year with a Soap Box Derby and this will be held May 24.

At Wednesday night's election, Claude Martineau was names president; Tom Alexander, vice-president; Pat Dolan, secretary-treasurer; Ted Bolton and Gary Jamieson, directors. Immediate past president is Jerry Goldberg.

Mr. Goldberg commented on the recent article in a Toronto newspaper in which inmates of a prison in British Columbia were reported to have started a Jaycee group, as evidence of how far the Jaycee influence was reaching.

The officers elected Wednesday night will be inducted at the May 5th meeting, which will take office, officially, June 1.

TURNS BIKE INTO BUS

Ten-year-old Ralph Ernest Poupart of 154 Dundas Street in Brighton, spent last night in Trenton Memorial Hospital as a result of a street accident near his home. Thursday morning. The boy, who suffered minor injuries only, was struck by a school bus, driven by Mrs. Ina Scarborough, also of Brighton, when he turned his bicycle into the path of the bus. The bicycle was damaged extensively.

Complain Too Many Bodies Have Right to Expropriate

TORONTO (CP) — Pressures on farmers for their land and possible pressures on Chinese-Canadian citizens because of their color were considered Thursday by a royal commission inquiry into civil rights in Ontario.

The York County Federation of Agriculture said in a brief that the farmer now is denied information of the need for expropriation which, in turn, denies him the right to defend himself adequately.

Francis Radelmeier, past president of the federation, told J. C. McIlmer, former Ontario chief justice conducting the one-man inquiry, there are many bodies with the right to expropriate, but there is no central control of their activities.

The brief said a trial of necessity should be required to decide if a project is practical and in the public interest before any expropriation negotiations can begin.

COULD BE HARSH

The Toronto chapter of the Japanese-Canadian Citizens' Association said in its brief Chinese living in Canada could be subjected to harsh treatment if Canada should go to war against Communist China.

The brief, which referred to the confinement elsewhere in Canada of 20,000 Japanese living in British Columbia at the outbreak of the Second World War, expressed hope a similar situation would not arise in a "colored Communist" conflict in China.

The association said its experience showed that color and not race was the main reason for discrimination against the West Coast Japanese.

While persons from Communist countries living in Canada probably would not be mistreated, it said.

"If hysterical pressures are not resisted by the government and particularly by its political leaders, the meaning of Canadian citizenship will become valueless," the brief said.

DISCUSS SAFETY

GUELPH, Ont. (CP)—A continuing safety program and improvements in public relations were the main topics during the semi - annual meeting of the directors of the Federated Women's Institutes of Ontario here Wednesday. Mrs. N. Vlckruck of Port Arthur said more emphasis is needed on maintaining a calm atmosphere in the home to lessen the chance of accidents.

Retiring Senators

Back from its Easter recess, the House of Commons will be dealing with a bill setting an automatic retirement age of 75 for senators appointed in the future.

This bill was first proposed many months ago. It is probably the best feasible solution for the need to keep the membership of the Senate abreast of changing times. Yet, as with any arbitrary retirement measure in any enterprise, it is certain to work some injustices. Some senators will be forced to leave the chamber while they are still amongst its most useful and progressive members.

Present senators would be given the option of continuing in office or of retiring on a pension. Some dozen senators are already well into their eighties and it is believed many of these will feel compelled to retire for the measure passes.

This will provide the first important test of the effects of the retirement bill as a method for improving the calibre of Senate membership. The government of the day will have an unusually large number of vacancies to fill. If it hews close to the party line, naming men of its own political stripe to all or to most of the vacant positions, no great improvement can be looked for from the establishment of an automatic retirement age. If it pays little attention to vast political services, if it does not select only men who are eager to retire from the rough-and-tumble of politics in the Commons or from the strains of private business, we may be in the process of getting a Senate which will be fitted to play a more important role in the government of the nation.

One would think that the establishment of an automatic retirement age ought to lead to the appointment of younger men, so that the Chamber could still have members with many years of experience but yet under retirement age.

One could hope, too, that consideration might be given to naming men who had not been primarily concerned with politics, but who had experience in certain specialized fields. Unions, as well as business, ought to be represented. There is no reason why eminent churchmen should not make good senators. The voice of radicalism ought to be heard in the Senate, as well as the voice of conservatism.

The proposed bill is designed to remove from the Senate the stigma sometimes attached to it as a home for retired politicians, a refuge for the elderly. It is to serve its purpose if governments must avoid filling the vacancies it will create with old men who were born a little later than the ones they are replacing.

Age of Miracles

The age of miracles is not past—and any person who thinks differently has only to enjoy the divertisements of the advertisements which adorn this, and all other, Great Family Journals on this continent.

Sometimes, though, the promises of miracles are inadvertent. For instance, we are not at all sure that the copywriter who drafted a recent Ford Motor Co. advertisement took in all the implications of his attention-catching statement "And the Falcons are running on Mustang engines."

What, in fact, would happen if falcons came equipped with the power plant of a mustang? If would depend on just what was meant.

If the falcon had all the power of a mustang, it would soar higher than any eagle. But if the mustang's "running gear" was reduced in size to fit a falcon's body, we doubt whether the poor bird would be able to get off the ground, let alone challenge the eagle. Mammals' "engines" are not impressively effective when compared with those of birds. And birds, of course, are weaklings compared with many insects. We talk of horsepower and manpower, until comparatively recently the source of most of the energy man was able to utilize in doing what he regarded as the world's work. But any and heap can debouch a myriad engines more powerful and efficient. If a man could lift as much as an ant, in comparison with his weight, much of our heavy machinery would be unnecessary. Even with pulley-and-cord, lever-and-fulcrum, man is no match for many of the tiniest particles of living matter.

But in the end, man has surpassed all. Nothing alive can match the power of the engines he can build. Today Falcon-sized cars do have Mustang-sized engines and tomorrow a flea-bite of a car may carry an engine capable of moving a train.

Small Woes Hard to Bear

... Montreal Gazette

"Remember, William, the shutters in England will rattle as they do in America." Ellen Picken Osler spoke these words to her son, Dr. William Osler, when he was leaving North America to make his home in England. She was then a very old woman, nearing her centenary mark. Her son had made a flying visit to Toronto to say goodbye to her. This was her parting admonition. And a very wise one it was.

As Dr. Osler's biographer, Dr. Harvey Cushing, wrote: "Rattling shutters, like fidgety legs, are common to all places and get on the nerves; human nature is much the same everywhere. Was ever lecture on patience, charity and tolerance better epitomized than in these farparting words from Ellen Picken Osler . . . ?

"Discomfort always lies in the wrong kind of hope. It is the hope that in some other part of the earth, or in some other way of life, the troubles that now seem so besetting will vanish away.

Hope may have its justification in the midst of great troubles; "weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." But the little troubles — the ones that constitute the annoyances — are rarely ready to withdraw. And, strange to say, it is the little troubles that may prove the hardest to bear. Sorrow is not without authority; annoyance is rarely without indignity. The rattling shutter is scarcely tragic, but it can bother the nerves.

The seriousness of little troubles was illustrated in the report of Dr. Rose T. McIntyre, for 12 years the White House physician of President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

After the president's death, he was asked: "At any time did he have abnormally high or alarming blood pressure?

The White House physician replied:

"He had a peculiar blood pressure. It lowered. He could vary 30 to 30 points easily in two or three hours. He got annoyed over little things and you might see his blood pressure jump up 20 or 30 points and get pretty high. But, when he got down to the big stuff, no. It came down and stayed."

A further question was asked: "Little things bothered him more than big ones?" Dr. McIntyre replied. "Always."

Yet few people realize that they hope foolishly when they hope to find peace by laying down their greater burdens. All they might do is to exchange big troubles for little troubles. And they might well find that they had made a poor exchange.

In 1803 John Florio, in his translation of Montaigne's essays, was writing a warning against the fallacy of exchanging big troubles for small:

"... the end is ... to live more at leisure, and better at ease. But man does always seek the best way to come unto it, who often supposeth to have his affairs, when he hath changed them. There is not much less vexation in the government of a private house, than in the management of an entire state . . . and though domestic occupations be less important, they are as importunate."

No doubt it is true. The man who is quarreling with his neighbor about the position of a fence is likely to be quite as agitated, even more so, than a statesman defending the disputed boundaries of his nation. The minor affliction, the more ridiculous, will not let the mind rest on the spacious scene of a statesman's duty.

Benjamin Franklin had a few last years of retirement in his house, among his books. After his life of long toil amid great issues, he could give his mind to his office or study, conversing with his friends, or reading and writing.

Yet this man who had helped to direct the course of the world's history, himself felt that those last years involved in a struggle no less insistent. An observer says that "two of the boys were playing and very nearly in the lot in front of the office. Between whiles they rowdy and fell to them: "Boys, boys, can't you play without making so much noise? I am reading, and it disturbs me very much."

Benjamin Franklin was a master of science and statecraft. But it is very doubtful whether he ever brought this problem — and it was a very little one — to any satisfactory conclusion.

Strictly Personal
Play Is Reflection Of Ourselves

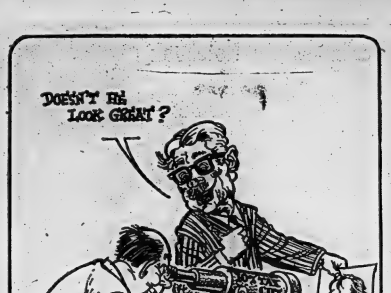
By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Without a doubt, the most interesting play I saw during 10 days of theatre-going in New York recently was the off-Broadway production of "A Slight Ache," by Harold Pinter, the gifted British playwright.

Not only was it beautifully written and impeccably acted, but the theme itself illustrates a deep and universal tendency in human relations. It takes an ordinary situation and projects it to the very brink of our unconscious fears and needs, and the fantasies they instill in us.

Space does not permit telling the story adequately, suffice to say, for present purposes, it concerns a husband and wife who invited a ragged match-seller into their country house to find out more about him, and who in the end unconsciously near their rear gate for many days.

First the husband speaks to him at great length, and then the wife. The match-seller never says a word in response to the whole play; he simply stands there, hunched over, holding his tray, and we do not know whether he can even hear what they are saying to him. He seems to have suffered a stroke and is scarcely moves at all, like some wounded animal.



The husband, who, at the play's beginning seems prissy and smug and supremely self-assured, gradually loses control in the man's presence. He imagines him to be a spy, or someone seeking vengeance for an evil deed that the husband committed long ago.

The wife, who, at the play's beginning seems blandly passive and conventional, slowly turns amorous in the man's presence. She overlooks his foul odor, his repulsive rags, his utter responsiveness, and caresses him as the answer to her unspoken prayers for sexual relief from her grim marriage.

Here, Pinter is merely pushing to a normally creative extension of behavior we all indulge in, only we usually do it more prudently and less dramatically. We project our own feelings into others; we reshape them, as it were, into the forms that has preexisted in our own minds; we use them as sounding-boards for our most intimate fears and frustrations and infantile hopes.

We do not see the Other as a "Thou" in Buber's terms; we see him or her only as an it, as an object, as an instrument, as a projection of what we would like the world to become or what we are afraid it might be. The Other is not a true person, in his own right, but a thing, like the blind, deaf, paralyzed matchseller, who becomes Retribution to the husband and Pleasure to the wife.

This paranoid projection, which everyone engages in to some degree, is perhaps mankind's most persistent and implacable enemy, both on the personal and on the social scale. For we do it not only with individuals, but also with classes, races, nations, and sexes. We turn a homeless into a So-so thing, and then wonder why we cannot live together happily.

Testing for Diabetes Simple, Two Methods in Use Today

Dear Dr. Molner: Our grandson, born last fall, seems unable to handle any form of sugar. Do babies that young have diabetes? Can it be detected at such an early age?

Sugar seems to cause a rash on his bottom.

Diabetes is very prevalent on my side of the family and my dad was among the first to take insulin. (He lived to be 83.)

I am worried for fear our grandson might wind up in a diabetic coma before they can find out if he has the disease. — Mrs W. D.

Yes, infants can have diabetes especially those with a strong family history of that disease.

I doubt, however, that his rash is the result of diabetes, or even of sugar. This isn't one of the classical symptoms.

When babies this young develop diabetes, it is usually abrupt and severe in onset. Their symptoms progress swiftly to acidosis and diabetic coma. The younger the child, the more one must be alert to act quickly in case diabetes signs appear.

In this case, I doubt that the little fellow is in trouble, but with his family history one must be aware of the possibility.

It is a simple process, with a baby as with anyone else, to test for sugar in the urine. It is one the precise blood sugar tests.

For the benefit of others who are worried about diabetes, may I call attention to the enlightening remark in today's letter: "The grandfather, who, with insulin, lived to the age of 83 in spite of a disease which, before insulin was discovered in the 1920's, would have been tragic.

Dear Doctor: I have had hemorrhoids for a long time and would like to be operated on, but I have heard so much about them coming back afterwards. Do you think surgery is successful? — F. M.

I know it is successful — and I don't know of anything else that will do more than postpone the day of reckoning when you just can't put up with the trouble any more.

Hemorrhoids are like small varicose veins. In fact, they are varicose veins in a sensitive location. The swollen veins, once removed, are gone for good. This does not mean, however, that other veins may not subsequently become swollen. Let's put it like this: If you have a leak in the roof and you get it fixed, but the roofer cannot guarantee that you won't eventually find a leak in somewhere else.

The majority of people who have surgery for hemorrhoids are through with the trouble afterwards. But some may have new hemorrhoids develop later.

Following the surgery, it's of particular importance to return to the doctor for a limited time for "dilation." This will prevent scar tissue from building up and inciting future trouble. The avoidance of constipation is also important.

For more detailed discussion of these ways of avoiding future difficulties I refer you to my booklet, "The Real Cure for Hemorrhoids." Send 25 cents in coin and a long, unstamped, self addressed envelope to Dr. Molner in care of the Chicago Sunday Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill.

Dear Dr. Molner: Why is it when my 14 - year - old daughter eats ice cream it gives her stomach cramps and then a loose bowel movement? Could it be allergy? — Mrs. D. G.

Quite possibly the cold stimulates the peristalsis or the rhythmic movement of the intestinal tract. What happens if she drinks a lot of ice cold water or pop?

I am inclined to doubt allergy as a cause, because in that case we would expect her to have the same consequence from milk or other milk products.

Never take a chance on diabetes! For fuller understanding of this disease, write to Dr. Molner for a copy of the booklet, "Diabetes — The Sneaky Disease." Please enclose a long, self-addressed, unstamped envelope and 30 cents in coin to cover cost of printing and handling.

Letter to the Editor
Criticizes Failure To Assist Policeman

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

I am writing in connection with the incident described in Monday's Ontario Intelligencer. This is the beating of Constable Sam Morgan of the Belleville City Police.

While I do not know Const. Morgan, it strikes me as being unreasonably strange that a community such as Belleville, composed of seemingly intelligent people, should partake in such goings on.

I should like to ask each and every one of those persons who stood by and watched as Const. Morgan was beaten, why they did not unite and assist the police officer by intervening.

Do not try and ease your consciences by saying it was none of your business, because it very definitely was.

I ask you, if a man were being arrested on your property for a crime committed in your house, and he (along with others) was bealing the policeman who was trying to protect your home and property, would you not attempt to assist that policeman?

Belleville is the home and property of each and every one of its residents, and if these residents do not have the backbone to protect and respect it, I suggest that they take a good look at themselves.

The police force of any community, whether it be Belleville or not, are not able to properly carry out their duties without the assistance of the public, and I say that the public most certainly did not render much assistance to Constable Sam Morgan outside Gerry's Steak House on this Saturday night past.

Shifting of the approach of news coverage in the transition from war to peace, freedom of the press, staff rehabilitation, and other problems will be considered during the busy "news-paper week."

Lieut.-Col. John W. A recent addition of the Belleville Rifles contributed an excellent picture of Lieut.-Col. Phillips having the medal pinned upon his tunic by the Governor General.

Two hundred members of the Independent Order of Good Fellows attended the morning service in Bridge Street United Church on Sunday, and were addressed by the pastor, The Rev. Dr. James Semple. Members of sister lodges from Picton, Trenton, Kingston and Brighton were in attendance with the Belleville lodges. Members of Quinteca and Rebekah lodges were also in attendance at the service.

Postpone Showdown

Hamilton Spectator

World opinion outside the United States would seem to favor the negotiated settlement system. Undoubtedly President Johnson knows this. Yet he also knows his history. The enemy is communism, and it is an enemy that does not honor commitments nor keep promises. He must wonder, as he listens to the peacemakers, if a negotiated settlement in the Far East would only postpone, to the advantage of the communists, the final bloody showdown.

Butter Price Up Two Cents Pound on Sat.

OTTAWA (CP)—Housewives will be paying two cents a pound more for butter after May 1 as a result of a change in the federal government's consumer subsidy.

Agriculture Minister Harry Hays said Thursday in a statement that he does not believe butter consumption will be affected by the increased consumer cost.

He said the consumer subsidy had been reduced by one cent last year and consumption in 1964 had gone on to exceed production by 5,000,000 pounds. Enough stockpiled butter was available to meet the demand.

Police Force Members Move Into Campbell St. Station, Old 'Y' Bldg. Renovated

Belleville's finest today reported for duty at one of the finer re - modelling projects in the city.

City police have now moved into their new Campbell Street headquarters, relinquishing the the 80-year-old rustiness of the Market Square offices.

The new quarters are not exactly new, but skilful planning and imagination have provided a crisp and contemporary environment for the force.

To create this called for a major rehabilitation job on the former YMCA building, constructed shortly before World War I.

The general public will have a chance to see the results for itself May 8 when the police commissioners plan an open house.

What will go on view, behind the aging facade of the building, will be the most up-to-date small - city police headquarters and magistrate's court in the province.

The force, under Chief J. B. McLauchlan, has been concentrated on the first two floors of the three-storey building.

The first floor houses the administrative and routine departments of the force.

The floor above is dominated by the magistrate's court, a large high-ceilinged room with a roomy arena that still leaves comfortable space for public seating.

On this floor also are located the offices of the department's prosecutor and court plainclothes branch and court officials.

The basement houses the cellblock and a large garage, and introduces several innovations.

The garage doors are electrically operated from the duty sergeant's desk on the first floor. A cruiser can be admitted and prisoners taken to the nearby cells, among other things, saving them the embarrassment of parading on view before the public.

The move was made yesterday without fuss or interruption of normal police schedules. Today, the new quarters are still a bustling scene as the department's various units square themselves away.

Their new offices are acknowledged as not the ideal solution to a year-old chronic administrative problem for the department.

The final, of course, would have been a new building.

However, because of cost factors, city council and the police commissioners settled on the purchase of the YMCA building as the best alternative at this time.

The move has created one striking anomaly.

Inside, the building fairly sparkles with clean-cut modernity, while grime over more than 50 years still clings to the exterior.

The Chief, however, has brought a collective sigh of relief from the force after years of fulminating at the ill-housed department in the city-government complex.

Through the years those incurring the public displeasure were not the only ones surprised to find themselves in the ancient Market Square building. The public, city residents as well as visitors and tourists, were often taken aback when they called on the police at home. The cramped, dingy conditions of the old headquarters brought many a reaction of disbelief.

For years, as professional police work became more and more sophisticated, the force struggled along in a structure that is believed to be the oldest public building in the city.

It was built about 120 years ago as a civic building and housed council and community events. At one time its upper floor was used as a militia drill hall.

This is the third transfer for the city force since Belleville swore in its first peace officer. The department was once housed in a fireball building near the Upper Bridge, was moved in the 1870's to the newly-built city hall and, then to the Market Square edifice—now, after years of frustration, an unlamented, if sentimental, memory.

Gen. Wessin's forces were re- ported to have received food and medical supplies from the U.S. Marines that landed ear- lier in the week.

One unit of marines guarded the U.S. Embassy. Thursday they lifted two rebel snipers who fired at them from a roof- top and apartment windows. The marines shot back from the cover of automobiles parked on the lawn of the embassy. Ca- sualties were reported.

At least three other snipers were killed by Dominican troops.

Embassies of El Salvador, Peru, Mexico and Ecuador re- ported similar sniper attacks.

Reuters news agency said U.S. marines killed four snipers Thursday.

In Washington, the United States asked the OAS to call on the battling Dominican factions to establish an international neutral zone at Santo Domingo for the safety of refugees.

U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker, attending a meeting of the OAS council which lasted until the early hours today, pro- posed that the hemispheric or- ganization send a peace coil- mittee to Santo Domingo to seek a ceasefire.

The OAS called a meeting in Washington Friday of foreign ministers to deal with the "grave situation."

In Santo Domingo, U.S. Am- bassador W. Tapley Bennett said he had conferred several times with leaders of both sides in quest of a truce but has failed on each attempt.

It was a fluid war, with rov- ing groups on each side, mach- sniping and sharp clashes when opposing groups encountered each other. Much of the fight- ing was hit-and-run.

On the rebel side were army troops and civilians armed by the rebel army group during the weekend. Supporting the junta were the air force, the navy and some army troops.

MAJOR BATTLE

A major battle broke out as a band of rebels armed with au- tomatic rifles, hatchets and knives attacked police head- quarters in downtown Santo Do- mingo. The police retained con- trol of the fortress. Casualties suffered by both sides were not known.

Most of the damage has been concentrated in the downtown area, which except for the fight- ing forces is virtually deserted. Most stores are closed and shut- tered. Travel about the city streets is extremely hazardous. Large numbers of soldiers and members of the national police were reported to have taken off their uniforms and gone home.

cials had told him the federal government was informed be- fore the layoffs, announced ear- lier this week by the United Auto Workers (UAW).

After the announcement, Mr. Martin, whose riding of Essex East includes part of Windsor, said the federal government had met with Ford officials but had not been notified of the impending layoffs.

The Ontario government of- fered its best wishes for the success of the Quebec govern- ment's General Investment Corp., which Mr. Randall said would help Quebec reach its economic objectives thereby strengthening the country as a whole.

Mr. Randall was replying to Stan Farquher (L — Algoma- Manitoulin) who asked how the province was going to prevent in- dustry from locating in Quebec rather than in Ontario.

The labor minister pointed out that Ontario had 11,000 industries which each employ less than 50 persons. He said the province is just as interested in expanding small industry already located in Ontario so as it is attempting to coax new industry here.

"We are not losing anything to Quebec. Certainly we don't want to go out and raise the ante to stop business from go- ing to Quebec," he said.

FOUNTAINS FROTH

LONDON (CP)—The phantom fountain - fogging has struck again. Many famous London fountains have been sabotaged with detergent over the past few months. The latest fogging were the two big pools in Tra- falgar Square, where children watched entranced, as mass- tains of foam slowly raced across the paving.

DESERONTO

The campaign chairman, Mrs. H. Trannue, reported the branch went "over the top" in the annual campaign. To date the amount received has been $418.

Mrs. M. Ryan, chairman of Senior Citizens committee and card convener, reported 16 calls made to the sick and shut- ins; 21 birthday, get-well and anniversary cards were sent.

Another hospital bed has been purchased for the local loan cupboard.

Chairman Mrs. Donald Daw- son reported a blood donor clin- ic will be held in Napanee on May 6 at the memorial build- ing.

CONVENTION REPORT

Mrs. D. Dawson and Mrs. M. Rendell, official delegates who attended the annual convention in Toronto reported on the ac- tivities there. One of the high- lights of the convention was a visit to the Lisgar Home for the Aged. They told of the day care offered by the home for those who are waiting for admission. These people are given care at the home during the day and reside in their own homes at night.

The meeting was told that 300,000 bottles of blood were collected in Ontario last year and the Red Cross now has complete coverage in its blood donor service from coast to coast. To keep up this ser- vice many more donors will be needed in 1965.

Captain Hopkins, chairman of public relations for the Ontar- io division, presented "Miss Red Cross" for 1965. Miss Red Cross wore an unusual cos- tume, each item represented a service given by the Red Cross. A jar of blood for blood do- nors, a small truck for transpor- tation, a bed with beds for dental care, a flashlight for disaster, an arm in a sling for first aid, a diaper as a scarf for home-makers, a book for hospital visiting, a telephone for emergency, a shirt made by Junior Red Cross members, white curls of batten for Sen- ior Citizens, an applesien form for voluntary services, a badge for water safety, grey knitted socks for women's work, a bedpan to represent home nursing.

All of this was worn or car- ried by a husky young man from London, Ontario.

Remarks That Middle-aged Wives Get Tired of Hearing

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Re- marks that middle-aged wives get tired of hearing:

"For the $1,800 face-lifting job, he gets rid of one extra chin. Frankly, Ella, in your case I'd plan on spending around $2,000—maybe $2,500."

"H, Mommy! This is an emergency. I can't get a baby sitter and I simply can't miss my appointment at the beauty parlor. It's been ages since I've had my hair done. Would you mind coming over and taking care of your lovely grandchild this afternoon?"

"Well, how did you spend your day, Ella, cackling with a bunch of old hens over the bridge table as usual?"

"The gray haridly shows at all, dear, except at the roots."

"I'm afraid these dresses are a bit too—uh—too youth- ful for Madge. Perhaps you'd find something more suitable in our department for mature matrons."

"H, Mommy! This is an emergency. We're having Jim's boss and his wife to dinner tonight and I want to serve lobster casserole. Can you rush right over and show me how to make it? By the way, could you stop at the fish store and pick out the lobsters?"

"If you had more to do, you wouldn't have time to feel sorry for yourself."

"I can't zip it up, Ella. Either you're going to have to get a larger girdle—or a stronger husband."

"Why do you still go on insisting that you eat by can- dlelight? That kind of stuff is for romantic kids and newly- weds."

"What do you mean, do I still love my wife? Now, let's don't get started on that. But after 36 years I'd think you'd realize you're not married to Cary Grant—or Richard Bur- ton, for that matter."

"H, Mommy! This is an emergency. Jim and I ran a little short and I wonder if you could lend us $50 until- but don't tell Dad. Gee, Mommy, I don't know what I'd do without you."

JOURNALIST JAILED

SALISBURY (Reuters)—John Parker, president of the Rhodes- sian Guild of Journalists, was committed to prison Wednes- day for refusing for two days to answer questions on how he obtained secret documents. Parker, 38, who is not charged with any offence, was sum- moned under the Criminal Pro- cedure and Evidence Act under which a magistrate can insist on answers to questions in re- lation to suspected offences.

WE'RE CELEBRATING BABY WEEK

Saving for Baby

The first excitement of finding out whether the expected arrival is a boy or a girl is over. The little bundle has been examined, cuddled and praised by everyone from nurses to an excited Grandma and Grandpa, and is finally home, tucked tidily into a frilly bassinet, quiet —for a while. But the time comes when he (or she) awakens and announces with a lusty yell that he (or she) is ready to be fed.

The first howl of hunger sets Dad's mind in motion. For the first time, he can see, not the little cuddler in the crib, but the young man or woman pouring over brochures, trying to select a college or university.

Education or training of any type requires money. Will he be able to afford it, Dad wonders? What will happen to his pride and joy if he can't?

The soundest and most sensible thing to do is to start planning now for that time, which will come faster than anyone realizes, and the best way to plan is to start a savings program—now.

Plan one geared to the family budget, taking into consideration that there will probably be more little bundles in that crib as the years go by, and that they will have to be taken care of as well.

It is amazing how what appears to be an insignificant amount can grow into an almost unbelievable sum over a 20-year period—the age at which most youngsters enter university.

It is noted that, in regard to bank savings, the larger your initial deposit and subsequent regular deposits are, the greater percentage of interest you will accumulate.

The secret of successful saving lies in regular deposits.

The following deposits, made regularly the first of each month, over a period of ten years, would at the current rate of interest and barring withdrawals, build to the amounts shown below:

$20.00 monthly	$ 2,756.70
$30.00 monthly	$ 4,134.94
$50.00 monthly	$ 6,891.62
$100.00 monthly	$13,783.20

Various insurance companies also offer plans to ensure money for baby's education.

It's fun watching baby's future grow with him, and one of the best investments you will ever make.

Babies, Babies, Babies!

The hand that rocks the cradle these days is the hand that is reaching out for more baby food, more baby clothes, baby frills, more of everything for the whole family. It's the hand to watch, the hand to please, the hand to hold on to.

There were a few less cradles for hands to rock in 1964, report the statisticians who keep track of new arrivals in Canada. The total was 457,293 or 2.6 percent less than the 1963 figure of 469,568.

The coming of age of the early World War II baby boom crop has started to register in the marriage statistics, with 140,920 couples joined in holy wedlock in 1964, a jump of 8 percent over 1963, and this is only the beginning.

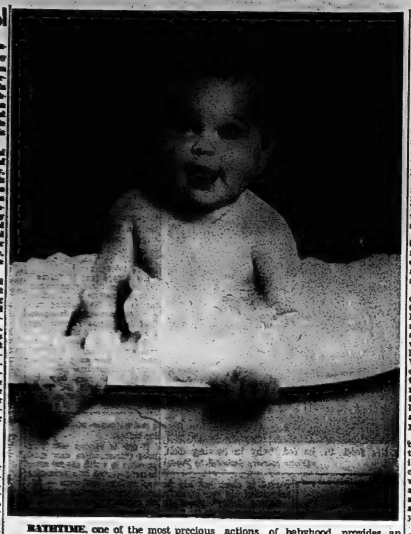
The number of boys and girls reaching marriageable age for the next several years will keep the wedding bells ringing, ringing, ringing.

The population now stands at 20 million and could go over 24 million by 1985. And more people should mean more babies even though the birth rate itself is dropping off.

BUMP HEALERS

One mother keeps a box on a high shelf labeled "bump healers". Into it go small toys, crayons, packets of hard candy. When a toddler is learning to walk there are plenty of tumbles and older children take spills, too. After examining the bruised knee or elbow, next consolation is a trip to the box for a "bump healer".

Quality Control



Mothers have the final responsibility for continuing the baby food quality control program that begins in the field and orchards. After mother selects baby food from the supermarket shelf, she must see that the foods reach baby in the most appealing and sanitary possible form until the last portion is eaten.

Jars of baby foods, cans of strained juices and boxes of cereal should be kept in a dry, moderately cool place. Cereals can absorb foreign odors, so keep the boxes away from soap cleaners, drugs and strongly flavored vegetables. Just like any other food, baby foods should be rotated, using those on hand longest before opening newer purchases. At feeding time, transfer only the portion to be fed to the serving dish.

After opening the baby food jars and removing the contents to be fed, jars with remaining food should be recovered and placed in the refrigerator, recommends Edna Mae McIntosh, nutritionist for Gerber Products Company. It is more convenient and sanitary to refrigerate unserved baby foods in the original jar or can. During processing, their inside surfaces have been sterilized along with the food. Transferring to another container offers more opportunity for contamination and faster spoilage.

TASTY TREAT

Combine 1 jar Junior Applesauce and 1/3 cup miniature marshmallows. Heat together in top of double boiler until marshmallows begin to melt. Remove from heat, stir and add ½ teaspoon vanilla. Chill. For color and extra flavor, a few red cinnamon candies may be dropped in while heating. A tasty treat for both toddlers and grownups.

RAINTIME, one of the most precious actions of babyhood, provides an appealing subject for home movies. Show baby playing with floating toys — and splashing. But keep the camera — and eyes — dry!

Beauty Pitfalls

Early motherhood is the happiest, prettiest — and busiest — time in a woman's life.

There's a special glow in your face and a lovelight in your eyes that can be rivaled by no one. But such gems of beauty deserve the background of a beautiful skin — and that's where the busyness may trap you.

Nobody would dream of suggesting that you rob the newest member of your family — his brother, sister or dad — of the time and attention that you so rightly give in abundance.

But you can preserve your beauty without leaving the nursery, by dipping into baby's cosmetic box for pure beauty aids that will keep your skin soft and smooth as baby's.

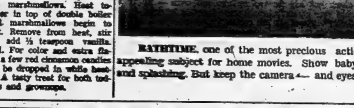
Baby cream is a wonderful overnight cream that rubs into the skin so that it is invisible. It promotes healing and will not stain clothing or linen. It is also a lasting hand cream that won't come off the minute a little water touches your hands. When you're rubbing baby cream on the little one, it only takes a few extra seconds to rub some on your own hands too, and after you have tucked baby in for the night, it's quick and easy to put baby cream on your own face and hands.

Borrow mild baby soap with built-in hexachlorophene protection for your own complexion and bath soap. Two capfuls of baby oil in your bath water will keep you smooth all over, and what could be more pleasant than silky baby powder to smooth and soothe you after your bath.

Baby's lotion is perfect for overall protection from chapping for both you and baby. It's also a good powder base that will protect your skin all day long.

Baby oil removes makeup quickly, easily and thoroughly. It is a wonderful beauty aid for the sensitive dry eye area that can begin to show tiny lines at a surprisingly early age.

All of baby's toiletries, in fact, can be utilized by you, and when you begin to borrow from baby's shelf you will doubtless discover "beauty secrets" of your own. After all, if it's good for baby, it's good for you too.



With the same tender loving skin care that baby gets, you'll keep your skin beautiful for the best lovely years ahead. Before you know it, you'll know the thrill of hearing a miniature charmer say, "You're the prettiest mommy in the world."

Storks and Babies

How the stork became associated with the baby delivery routine is anybody's guess. There are many farfetched legends about the stork bringing babies from fountains or baby pounds but probably the most endearing notion is that because the stork has so many trails that it would be admired as a human, he got the job over all other feathered contenders. He is known to be a faithful mate, a model parent and is unusually considerate of his elders.

SLOWER SHOPPING

Studies indicate that the average family shopper in super markets today spends 50 percent more time in the store than she did five years ago. Today's shopper also spends more time studying labels and buys more than she did five years ago. And a large proportion are accompanied by young children, many of whom go around for the ride.

Bathtime

What could be sweeter than a freshly bathed baby? Possibly only two freshly bathed babies.

Bathtime is one of the best times of the day for baby and mother and many mothers find the best time for bathtime is before a feeding — usually the 10 p.m. feeding.

Whatever time mother chooses to bathe baby, here are some basic rules to follow:

1. Gather all the bath and after - bath equipment, toiletries and clothing and place in a handy spot. Put diaper pins, scissors or anything else that might be harmful to baby out of his reach.

2. Check the room temperature, the temperature of the water and wash your hands. It's a good idea for mothers to forego long fingernails during baby's infancy for the sake of safety and sanitation. The room temperature should be about 75 or 80 degrees, the bath water about body temperature (90 — 100 degrees, if you are using a bath thermometer.) If you are testing with your elbow of wrist, the water should feel comfortably warm.

3. Never leave the baby alone or let yourself be distracted for a moment when baby is in the tub or on the table being diapered or dressed.

4. Line the bottom of the basin or sink with a diaper or towel to keep baby from slipping.

5. Wash baby with a soft cloth and gentle and protective soap. A new baby soap with hexachlorophene gives baby's body an invisible protective film that fights germs between baths.

6. Wash baby's face and head first, doing the diaper area last. Never bathe the baby by splashing water on him, let him initiate any splashing and splash away, within reason.

7. When baby is washed and rinsed of all soap, pat him dry with a soft towel. Smooth and sooth him all over with baby lotion and give the diaper area special protection with the new white petroleum jelly made especially for baby.

AT FEEDING TIME, place the food to be fed baby in serving dish. Remainder must be refrigerated. (Photo courtesy Gerber Baby Foods)

Baby-Sitting

Baby-sitting is proving to be the most important source of income to the Canadian teenager. Teenagers now earn at least 50 percent of their spending money tending for children.

These young people must shoulder a tremendous responsibility when they "stand in" for parents.

To aid teenagers in meeting such responsibility and to help them make a success of their baby-sitting business, a special guide, entitled "Sitting Safely" has been written by Edna Mae McIntosh, nutritionist for Gerber Products of Canada Ltd. at Niagara Falls, Ontario.

Helpful hints offered in the introductory chapter include special pointers for the teenage girl baby-sitter.

Girls should always make sure they are seen home after late sitting appointments, and are warned to check out ads for baby-sitting jobs very carefully.

"Sitting Safely" places its heaviest emphasis on the things the sitter must know to ensure the safety of babies and young children. The primary rule is "Safety through Prevention." In other words, don't wait for things to happen. Always be on top of the situation.

Sitters are reminded to keep children away from hot stoves, electric appliances and cords, to keep matches and sharp kitchen instruments out of reach, to keep the child away from the medicine cabinet and never to leave a child alone — even for a few seconds — when he is being bathed.

If one is playing with the baby—outside, extra care must be taken to watch out for other hazards — such as a swimming pool or lawn equipment — that might prove tempting for youthful exploration.

Other topics discussed in "Sitting Safely" include "characteristics of a successful sitter, notes on nursing care, preschool children, older children, infant and child nutrition, feeding suggestions, and play activities.

Picnic With Baby

Just because you have a young baby is no reason to postpone the fun of family outings. You can picnic, and with baby.

By following a few simple guide lines, you can give baby a welcome change of scene without drastically upsetting his routine.

First and foremost provide for your baby's comfort . . . a tailgate picnic built around a simple menu is one of the best ways to picnic with baby, for many reasons. The back of the station wagon gives a small child enough room to crawl around in yet he'll be confined without feeling too restricted.

It's a good idea to "carpet" the back of the station wagon. A shower curtain which can be thrown into the washing machine between outings is a practical idea. Some favorite toys are good to bring along too. A junior inflatable bucket seat makes a good seat for baby and even does duty as a pillow or mattress at nap-time.

Food is the most important part of any picnic and even more so with baby along. Plastic containers make it easy to carry any food along without danger of spilling. Orange juice and cereal can be part of any picnic if you pack them in specially designed containers. Bring familiar food that you know your child loves — this is no time to experiment with new foods. A jar of vegetables and meat can be carried along and warmed in a bottle warmer that plugs into the car cigarette lighter.

For dessert, baby can have Cherry Vanilla Pudding.

A picnic without cooking should be planned so that the family can stay close to baby. Everything for the picnic can be prepared at home and carried to the site in plastic containers so that all mother has to do is remove the seals from the containers and then concentrate on having fun with family.

OUT IN THE WASH

Mothers like to share their discoveries, whether it is a new variety of baby food or a new way to remove stains from baby clothes. The before cooking baby clothes. Rub milk spots with lemon juice, then with soap, then the spots really come out in the wash.

BABY WEEK

APRIL 25 - MAY 1

ONE IN 457,283 ! — That's the number of registered births for 1964, and this young fellow was among them. Last year, 2.6% fewer babies were born than in 1963. The figure in 1963 was 469,568.

Sleeping Is for Babies

A new baby spends almost all of his first three months in bed, and — although many a young mother finds it hard to believe — he spends a major part of his next three years in the same place.

Baby will be doing as much bouncing and jumping as sleeping in his crib — on his crib mattress. That is why a mattress is one item where "second-hand" means "second - best". For three to four years' use, day after day and night after night, it makes good sense to give brand new baby his brand new mattress.

When buying a mattress, don't go hunting a bargain. Shop in a store you trust and look for nationally advertised brands. With some background information and a little patience, you will be able to find a mattress to suit both baby and budget.

Of course, baby's mattress should be covered with a washable and wetproof material. A sprinkling of powder will keep the cover fresh and odorless. Remember, baby's mattress isn't a plaything. Many covers are ruined when mother forgets.

Next to the mattress, modern mothers find that snug contour sheets are the way to give baby a smooth wrinkle-free surface for sleeping.

Baby's blankets should have a semi-snug fit — not so loose that he can pull them over his head but not so tight that they restrict his ability to move about.

Some people think emigration to other planets is the solution to the population - explosion problem. But it would require passenger ships seating 100 persons leaving every minute just to stay even with the present population.

Children may tear up a house, but they will never break up a home.

Ann Landers

Rich, Flattering Desserts Not Everyone's Cup of Tea

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I'm a nice looking, middle-aged woman who is slightly overweight. I love good food and I am not going to starve to death to squeeze into a size 14. I see no point in trying to be a carbon copy of those emaciated, consumptive women who call themselves models.

A friend of mine is as skinny as a rail. She passes up desserts and never touches candy, ice cream or sodas. "She says she doesn't care for them). How can anyone not care for hot fudge sauce, whipped cream cake and lemon meringue pie?

ANN LANDERS

Is it possible that she just says she doesn't like these things and that she is really dying inside? I say she is. What do you say? The whole club wants to know. — PLEASINGLY PLUMP.

DEAR PLUMP — I hope I don't ruin your day, Doll, but it is entirely possible that the skinny rat has no interest in pies, cakes, fudge sauce and other calorie-laden foods.

Some people have a perpetual sweet tooth. Others just don't crave rich foods and can live very nicely without them.

(P.S. — I enjoy desserts, candy, fudge sauce and the works — and I've been a size 10 for 27 years. So now you can hate both of us.)

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am in my middle twenties and the mother of three children. Their father was killed in the service last year.

Several months ago I fell in love with a musician who works odd jobs sometimes and is now unemployed. Virgil is divorced and his ex-wife has remarried. She has their two children.

I invited Virgil to move in because he was over here all the time anyway. Besides, it was too hard on me to drive him to his evening house every night, sometimes as late as 4 o'clock in the morning.

When my relatives and friends asked when we got married I was ashamed to tell them the truth so I made up a date. Virgil has not mentioned marriage but I think he would marry me if I asked him to. To be honest I don't want to get married because I would lose the government cheque that I've gotten ever since my husband was killed. Please give me some practical advice. — DILLY.

DEAR DILLY — Any man who would move in and allow a widow and her children to support him can't be much.

Give this parasite the heave-ho and find yourself a decent man who wants to be a husband and father.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I know you aren't a doctor, but can you tell me why (and millions of other women) what to do about feet that hurt all the time?

I am a receptionist and must look well from 9 to 5. My legs are a bit on the heavy side and high heels are a must for me.

I tried attractive flats to see if my feet felt better and ended up with terrible pains in my calves. Now I am back on high heels and my feet are killing me.

Are aching feet part of a woman's lot? If you say so I'll accept it and shut up. — BARKING DOGS.

DEAR DOGS — You can do two things to quiet those barking dogs:

(1) Massage your feet with cream (any kind) every night before going to bed.

(2) Buy larger shoes even if it means going up a whole size. Some women don't realize that their feet get larger as time marches on. They continue to ask for the same size instead of a shoes that fits properly.

* * *

Awkward and self-conscious? Unsure of yourself? Write for Ann Landers' new booklet, "The Key To Popularity," enclosing with your request 35c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Susanna's Family Fare

IT'S WISE TO IMPROVISE

Dear Susanna: We bought a new bureau recently and what with extra expenses cropping up for which we had never planned, we found that new front room drapes were out of the question. There was a sale of bed spreads at a local department store, and we bought four matching plaid ones — each 81" by 100".

I got busy and sewed them up and now have wall to wall full length drapes that look attractive and will do us nicely until we are financially ready for tailored ones — more costless than $14. Just be sure before you buy, though, that the plaids all match. — Mrs. Eastern

During the moving, a good parchment lamp shade was crushed, so my next challenge was to find a suitable replacement. I experimented with all sorts of doodads, and as a last resort I tried a wicker waste basket. It's about 12 inches high and is narrower at the bottom than at the top. I drilled a small hole in the centre of the bast to fit fits neatly over that small metal screw at the very top of the lamp.

The basket makes a unique shade and a terrific conversation piece. I plan to try several more. The addition of tassles and braid trim is a nice innovation. Something else, they fit in most dramatically with any oriental theme . . . quite an authentic eastern atmosphere here. — Colleen W.

A thousand thanks, oh most wise and honorable one! — SUSANNA

MESSENGERS'

RAWDON — On Saturday evening Mount Pleasant Rawdon Messengers sponsored a social evening in the church hall with over 40 adults and children in attendance.

Mrs. Raymond McConnell and her assistants Mrs. Frank Spencer and Mrs. David Potts arranged the party. The worship centre was decorated with an Easter lily the gift of the Stirling Horticultural Society. Mrs. Garth Joslin was pianist for the Easter hymns.

Piano solos were rendered by Terry Bailey, Janet Scott, Jeannette Hoard and Bonnie Williams. Vocal selections were given by Linda Hoard and Jill McAdam. Kenneth Couch contributed accordion music. Randy and Janet Scott conducted a humorous skit with seven adult assistants. Selections were read by Frank Hubble and Debbie Graff.

Mrs. David Potts conducted two games for the children and the winners were Frank Hubble and Terry Bailey.

Mrs. Raymond McConnell voiced appreciative thanks to the children for their program and to the adults who helped to make the social evening a success.

Several of the Messenger members served light refreshments.

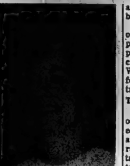
Expo '67 Explained at Sorority Founder's Day Dinner

By RETA LAWRENCE

Members of all five chapters of Beta Sigma Phi celebrated Founder's Day at a dinner at the Sun Valley Motor Inn, on Thursday evening.

Presiding was Trudy Thornton who introduced the head-table: Pauline Bishop, Margo Hall, June Sine, Mrs. Louise Stuart (guest speaker), Joan Thompson, Joan Young and Judith Blacker.

The Beta Sigma Phi grace was given by Judith Blacker.



Mrs. Thornton welcomed the Pledges, mentioning that, at this time of the year members in fourteen countries recognize Founder's Day, thus forming a chain of friendship with all members, each resolving to live good, true and useful lives.

The message from the Founder, Walter W. Ross, was read by June Sine. The topic of Mr. Ross's message was "On Being a Real Person." He cited many actual instances of people who, though faced with great tribulation, still remain willing and delightful members of society and of their respective chapters of Beta Sigma Phi. The message concluded with the admonition "Go now and let the world know how really fine you are. Crown every moment with planning, with action and with attainment."

GUEST SPEAKER

The guest speaker for the evening was introduced by Joan Thompson, Expo hostess and co-ordinator of Women's Associations, "Expo '67". Originally from Montreal Mrs. Stuart lived from age five to eleven in Napanee. She is a vivacious and charming lady.

Besides her demanding work with the Exposition, she is very busy with the needs of her family of children, serving in several official capacities. She is also active in church work, being a member of the United Church of Canada.

Mrs. Stuart gave a graphic picture of what may be expected by a visitor to the International and Universal Exposition '67, to be opened in Montreal on April 28th, 1967.

INDUSTRY

"Since the Exposition is to mark Canada's 100th birthday, it is the obligation of all Canadians to demonstrate a practical kind of unity and let all people know what we are like. In what we are doing and where we are going," she said.

Women's organizations will play a major part in achieving this goal by extending their friendliness and hospitality to people of all nations who will visit in Canada at that time.

Canadians are fortunate to have a first-class category Exhibition as authorized by the Bureau of International Exhibitions in Paris. The framework of the Fair will be "Fun and Education." This will not be a Trade Fair.

Forty-six countries have now officially registered as participants and it is hoped and expected that the number will increase to sixty or seventy. The World's Fair in Brussels had forty-five participating countries.

TRANSPORTATION

With the aid of a large layout plan, the speaker described each of the proposed buildings and their purpose, and gave a description on the modes of transportation, including electric railways, tunnels, speedwalks, water craft of all nations and even elephants and camels.

Besides the displays from other nations there will be theme buildings, showing the accomplishments of man in the past and his hope for the future.

A new stadium will seat 25,000 people and a new theatre 2,000. There will be 88 operatic, 35 ballet and 35 symphonic productions. The greatest art obtainable throughout the world will be on display.

At the northern end of the island an old-time western village, complete with saloons and even an undertaking establishment will be built.

PERMANENT STRUCTURE

One of the anticipated highlights, which is to remain a permanent structure, is the City of Montreal and City of Paris Tower, containing restaurants and boutiques of all sorts.

The Federal Government is financing 50 per cent of the cost, the Province of Quebec, thirty-seven and one-half, percent, and the City of Montreal, twelve and one-half per cent. It is estimated that after the deficit has been eliminated some ten and one-half million dollars will be Canada's profit.

A housing project is underway to demonstrate how to achieve the most privacy in the greatest density of population. These accommodations are planned so that the roof of one porch will be the garden of the one immediately above.

POLITE ROBOTS

Since this is the age of automation, polite and talkative robots may roam the confines of the Fair. Mrs. Stuart says that, should you see a slightly tired robot, please plug him in to the nearest outlet for recharging. Just be sure that you don't re-charge an exhausted member of your party in error.

So much enthusiasm was generated that everyone present is already scheming and planning in order to holiday on St. Helen's island in 1967.

"This is our chance," Mrs. Stuart said, "to play host to the whole world. The Fair can only be as great a success as each Canadian makes it."

The speaker was sincerely thanked by Margo Hall who, on behalf of the sorority, presented her with a gift of Canadian Cheddar cheese, one of Belleville's renowned products.

Collective Bargaining For Nurses Main Topic

TORONTO (CP) — Collective bargaining—was the main topic in everybody's minds at the first day of the three - day annual convention of the Registered Nurses' Association of Ontario here yesterday.

Last February the association presented draft proposals to the provincial government for a nurses' collective bargaining act in which the association would be the nurses' bargaining agent and disputes would be settled by arbitration rather than by strikes.

Health Minister Matthew Dymond told the convention that he believes the proposals are sound in principle but that they may not be flawless.

He said the matter of collective bargaining for nurses must be and is being studied in context with the desires and needs of other groups involved in the care of patients.

About 1,100 members of the association left the convention hall and made a unscheduled march on Queen's Park.

Labor Minister Leslie Rowntree promised them he would deal with their bargaining proposals "as quickly as possible."

Some of the demonstrators shouted: "This session, this session."

Liberal Leader Andrew Thompson told them that nurses should have better salaries and should go after them in an aggressive, responsible and organized way.

But a dissident group within the association, the Committee for the Advancement of Professional Nurses, charged that the association is dominated by management nurses and is trying to rush the proposed act through without getting the viewpoint of the rank and file.

Ruth Le Roux, chairman of the committee, said the proposed act would place the health profession in a dual role.

The health minister would interpret the act and appoint the arbitrators if asked. Mrs. Le Roux said, he is also the nurses' employer in a number of cases.

The committee as such is taking no active part in the association's convention but is watching what goes on, passing out pamphlets setting its point of view, and has a room two floors above the convention hall where interested nurses can talk to committee members.

Says Book Was Dictated To Her by Archangel

By BRENDA LARGE

OTTAWA (CP)—Winifred G. Barton is a 49-year-old Ottawa housewife who has written a book she says was dictated to her by an archangel.

She is also founder of a society set up to study the psychic experiences of Canadians.

The archangel, whom she describes as her spiritual guide, is named Lolled-N-Kahn and this is what Mrs. Barton writes about him in her book, The Inner Power:

"Something of a humorist, Lolled will be the first to insist on the correct pronunciation of his name: Lee-lee-ad. Seven thousand years of heavenly influence has left no way hundred his ready wit, and has served to lubricate the wheels of painstaking progress.

"For the record, might I add that an Archangel differs from an Angel in that he is performing a specific mission among earthbound spirits rather than serving Omniscient Will in the universe."

Mrs. Barton calls Lolled-N-Kahn "Lee" and says the book, which she wrote in 1963, is a translation of thought impulses he transmitted to her from the universe.

The jacket of the 133-page volume, published by Pageant Press, New York, carries this promotional line:

"This incredible volume provides us with an outline of the formation of the Earth and other inhabited planets. Illustrates the development of mankind from a unicellular creature to a multicelled animal and finally to spiritual being."

SEES BETTER LIFE

The jacket cover text, which was not written by Mrs. Barton, screams, "This book should be thoroughly read and considered NOW before it is too late."

Mrs. Barton herself is not the screaming type. She is a quiet, rather plump woman with greying dark brown hair and friendly brown eyes. She appears to be both sincere and secure in her belief that once man achieves a better knowledge of the spiritual world around him, the physical world can be made a much better place to live in.

Over a cup of coffee in her home in a comfortable middle-class residential district she talked about the Metaphysical Society.

The Ottawa group decided in January to send letters to weekly newspapers across the country asking people to mail in details of their "supernormal" experiences.

Mrs. Barton is receiving letters from many parts of the country and says she is collecting them for a second book. Some tell of "haunted" houses while others relate accidents or disasters accurately foretold in dreams.

GIVES EXAMPLES

Two examples, slightly altered to conceal the writers' identity:

—"Three people sat around a kitchen table in a farmhouse. They heard a rapping at the door and went to answer it. But no one was there. Later they learned the father of one of the people had been seriously injured at about the time they heard the mysterious knocking. He subsequently recovered."

—"A woman was on vacation in Vancouver when she fell and her little daughter was ill at home in Toronto. The feeling was so strong that she took the next plane. Her six-year-old had come down with pneumonia."

Mrs. Barton, English - born mother of four whose husband Ernest works in the income tax department, has had a lifelong interest in extrasensory experiences, which many people say is just coincidence or products of the imagination.

She says she began having them herself when she was four. In her book she indicates she believes her spiritual senses can be developed that she can chat mentally with the archangel "Lee" and even travel mentally with him through the universe.

The Metaphysical Society, which has about 30 members, meets regularly to "discuss and investigate psychic phenomena and super normal faculties aroused by spiritual development."

Members believe it is possible to train anyone to have supernormal experiences by various simple mental exercises providing the person has open mind. And Mrs. Barton says science eventually will discover the full potential of extrasensory experience in the same way that it has developed the power of electricity.

Women's Institutes

BETHEL-ION W.I.

A joint meeting of the Bethel-Zion Institute and 4-H Club was held in the community hall on Thursday evening with an attendance of 60.

The W.I. financial report of the year was given by the secretary, Mrs. Don Sills, which showed a most successful year and the president, Mrs. Fred Wellman, thanked the ladies for their co-operation.

A letter of thanks was read from the adopted Korean girl who is now on her own, working to help support her family; also a letter and photo of Hong Kong, six years of age.

This branch decided to exhibit at Belleville Fair a group of ten home-baked articles.

For the training school class they decided to ask for a course on millinery and second choice desserts.

The May meeting will be open to forward Other Neighbors and Mrs. Ray Summers will be the guest speaker, telling of her experiences in Korea.

The June meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Earl Selder, when a miscellaneous shower will be held at the Rideau store will be followed by another next month.

All reports of the year's work were given in preparation for the District Annual in Moira on May 21st.

3 cups hot milk,
2 tablespoons finely cut pimientos,
6 or more cups diced cooked chicken (see below).

Simmer two 2½-3-lb. chickens or one 5 to 6-lb. boiling fowl in a small pot, covered, until meat falls from bone. Turn out on tray. Cool enough to handle and strip meat from bones and cut into ¾" dice. You should have at least 6 cups or more. Measure broth. You should have 3 cups. (If boiling fowl is used remove raw fat before cooking and render melt it down to get the required ½ cup fat, if you do not want to use butter or margarine). Saute the green pepper and mushrooms in the melted fat about 5 minutes. Blend in the flour and salt, then add broth and milk, stirring constantly until thickened. Add pimiento and chicken. Blend well.

To serve immediately: Heat the mixture thoroughly and serve on biscuits (see below), hot buttered toast or in timbales.

To freeze: Cool the Chicken a la King quickly. Pack in freezer containers, leaving space for expansion. (For straight, tall containers, leave ½" space in each pint; for low broad containers, ¾". Pints are best because large blocks of Chicken a la King are difficult to thaw.) Seal and freeze immediately.

To prepare for serving: Without thawing, heat frozen Chicken a la King in the top of a double boiler - about 30 minutes for 1 pint.

KNEADED TEA BISCUITS

(large recipe. This is a "repeat" from May 29, 1961)

4 cups sifted all-purpose flour,
2 tablespoons baking-acting baking powder,
2 teaspoons salt,
½ cup good quality shortening,
1¼ cups cold milk.

Sift together the sifted flour, baking powder and salt. With a pastry blender or two knives cut in the shortening until pieces are roughly ¼". Make a depression in the centre and pour in the milk. Quickly stir just until dough forms a big lump and leaves side of bowl. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead 10 times by giving the dough ¼ turn and folding over after each kneading motion. Pat or roll out evenly to ½ or ¾" thickness. With floured 2½" cutter cut out and bake on unbuttered cookie sheet at 450 deg. Fahr. for 18 minutes. Do not overbake. Use enough biscuits for current meal. Cool and freeze remainder by placing in cartons and overwrapping with heat-sealed MST Cellophane. Or, store in heat-sealed MST Cellophane bags; poly bags are satisfactory for storage but cannot be used for quick oven thawing, because they melt. Thaw in their wrappers at room temperature or in a moderate (300 deg. Fahr.) oven. Serve warm.

U.C.W. Meetings

HOLLOWAY ST. U.C.W.

Holloway St. United Church Women held their April meeting on Tuesday evening at the church. The theme of the worship service, prepared by Mrs. G. Dobbs, was "Brotherhood." Her thoughts regarding this subject urged greater love, understanding, and tolerance towards all nations as well as towards each other. Miss Suzanne Lowther rendered a vocal solo accompanied by Mrs. Dorothy Bowes at the piano.

Mrs. T. F. Townsend introduced Rev. and Mrs. H. F. Swann who have recently returned fro ma visit to Trinidad and Tobago where they had served for many years. Interesting colored slides of former pupils of Dr. Swann who are now teaching in modern schools that have been built with help from the government in recent years showed great strides in the development of education and building. Where in the old days they taught Sunday school under a tree or in an old building on a sugar estate they have been able to erect a fine church hall.

Pictures of the handful of high school boys they started to work with many years ago were compared with the large student body of boys shown in front of their modern school of today.

Mrs. Moorman thanked Rev. and Mrs. Swann for sharing the highlights of some of their experiences with the group.

President Mrs. R. Taylor conducted the short business session. Plans for the Grannies' Old Fashioned Tea and Bazaar Party next week were discussed and members were also reminded of the WMS fast to be held at Holloway St. church later in the month. It was decided that the bale should be in before the end of May.

Delicious refreshments served by Mrs. Dobbs' unit brought the evening to a close.

MR. MELTZER ON REAL ESTATE
"What's Your Problem?"

By BERNARD C. MELTZER

Small income - producing properties can offer excellent opportunities to retired persons. There are double benefits — they provide an interesting occupation suitable to retirees and a high return on money invested to supplement retirement income.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I am a victim of my company's policy that a man must retire at age 65. This may be fine for some but not for me. I am in excellent health and as active and alert as ever. I could live on my pension and securities in modest comfort, but I dread the boredom of my not having anything to do.

I have attended "pre-retirement" classes on furniture repair, envelope addressing and other similar businesses, I might consider — but they don't interest me. I have followed your column and have become interested in real estate. Have you any suggestions for me? — One Who Dreads Retirement .....

ANSWER: Real estate can be an excellent field for you. There are many types of property that fit into your pocket. The best one would probably be a small four to 12 unit apartment house in good condition, in a stable neighborhood.

This type is large enough to fill up your time but not enough it to the exclusion of other interests. More important, by managing it, making minor repairs and performing other services yourself, you will be able to get back a 30 to 40 percent return on your cash investment in addition to growth of capital that comes by paying off the mortgage.

Not only will you have an interesting and challenging occupation but you can make a $10,000 investment, do the work and yield the return of approximately $100,000 in the usual conventional retirement investments.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I'm sure that you would agree that one should never do anything counter to his convictions. I believe strongly in astrology and the stars tell me this is my bad year for real estate.

My former advisor mis-read my horoscope and told me this was a good year to invest so I placed a $2,500 deposit on some land. My new reader says that I should not enter into any business deals for the rest of the year. I know she is right for she also told me not to take a trip and my sister who went without me got into an accident.

The owner of the land says that if I don't settle in 30 days as provided in the agreement he will forfeit my deposit. What would you do? — Star Spangled ANSWER: I'd go back to the first reader or one who has his feet on the ground — otherwise you are going to be $2,500 poorer.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: How can I find out what my neighbor paid for his house? I don't want to ask him directly because he might think I am a busybody just sticking my nose into his business. — Mrs. A. K.

ANSWER: Busybodies and non-busybodies alike can get such information from public record. All it requires is a trip to the county office where deeds are recorded.

The copy of your neighbor's deed on record will reveal what he paid for the property—either as a direct statement of the "consideration" or by the amount of revenue stamps attached to the deed.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: My basement is probably the warmest place in our house. Would it pay to insulate the pipes and heater? — W. P. C.

ANSWER: Most definitely. The fuel savings resulting from insulating the heater and pipes would pay for the job within two to three years. In addition, you will find that the heater will now do a much better job in maintaining a comfortable temperature within the house.

TORONTO (CP)—Winners of six 1965 Southam Newspapers fellowships for journalists, including the first representative from a weekly paper, were announced today. They are:

Alan Anderson, 36, courts columnist for the Toronto Telegram.

Howard Bennett, 37, assistant editor of the weekly Dufferin Leader of Carman, Man.

Mario Cardinal, 32, assistant news editor of Montreal Le Devoir.

Carman Cumming, 32, United Nations correspondent for The Canadian Press.

Mathematical Problem Has Baffled Man 2,000 Years

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP) — Three undergraduate students at the University of Waterloo claim to have solved a mathematical problem that has baffled man for more than 2,000 years.

It's the famous cattle problem posed in an epigram by the Greek mathematician and inventor Archimedes (287-212 BC).

The students, all in third-year honors math, are Hugh C. Williams of Burlington, Ont., Rl Angus German of Toronto and C. Robert Zarnke of Waterloo.

They say there are actually eight answers to the problem and each is 206,545 digits long.

In simplified terms, the problem involves four herds of cattle, each herd a different color and with a majority of bulls. The problem is to determine how many cows and bulls there are in each of four herds. What makes it complicated is the nine mathematical conditions within which the problem must be solved.

The students employed the university's $1,500,000 computer to work out the answer. It has been estimated it would take 1,000 men a total of 1,000 years to figure it out by conventional methods, but the computer took seven hours and 49 minutes.

The students, on their own time, thought about the problem for about a month, then used the computer at night to get the answer.

Prof. Wesley Graham, head of the computer science department, said that in 1880 a civil engineer in the United States claim to have solved a mathematical problem and two friends formed a club to solve the problem but gave up after four years.

The solution found here has been accepted for publication in the respected technical journal, Mathematics of Computation, Washington. The full answer won't be published since it weighs several pounds and would fill a 2,000-page volume.

Prof. Graham said others will undoubtedly work out the problem with a computer to see if the answer found at Waterloo is right.

Noting that the students worked out the problem themselves, Prof. Graham said it is unlikely students at larger universities could have done the same since use of computers at big institutions is not as readily available.

Welland Canal Tunnel At Thorold Major Part of Program for Highway Dept.

TORONTO (CP)—A $158,797,000 highways construction program for 1965-66, including the start of work on the Kitchener-Waterloo expressway and a tunnel under the Welland Canal at Thorold, was made public Thursday by Highways Minister Charles MacNaughton.

Other major construction work will be undertaken on the Macdonald - Cartier Freeway, the Ottawa Queensway, highways 17, 11, 101 and 105 in Northern Ontario, the Sudbury-Timmins highway, Highway 403 through Hamilton, and the Brantford bypass.

Contracts for about $2,500,000 will be awarded for the start of construction on the 14-mile Kitchener - Waterloo freeway. When completed it will ring the cities of the twin cities. Later the controlled - access highway is to be linked with the Macdonald - Cartier Freeway.

Value of work to begin this year on the tunnel under the Welland Canal at Thorold is $13,800,000. The tunnel will form the new route of Highway 58 from north of Highway 20 to Highway 406.

Eventually, three tunnels are to be built under the Welland Canal, which is to be twinned by the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority. The highways department says many canal crossing structures have become inadequate because of increased canal ship traffic.

New contracts valued at $8,300,000 will be let for work on the 1.4-mile gap in the 10-mile Ottawa Queensway. The controlled - access freeway through the city of Ottawa will be completed in 1967.

Major construction on the Macdonald - Cartier Freeway outside of Toronto will be undertaken on the replacement highway between Gananoque and Brockville and on paving between Brockville and the Quebec border.

Contracts valued at $3,000,000 will be awarded for the start of construction on another seven miles of the new four-lane divided highway to replace the 25-mile, two-lane road between Gananoque and Brockville.

Paving of 17 miles of two-lane road between Brockville and the border will open the stretch to four-lane traffic. A two-lane stretch of the freeway east to Chatham also is to be widened this year, completing the freeway as a four-lane route from Windsor through to Gananoque.

Widening the freeway to 12 lanes across the top of Metropolitan Toronto will continue with the award of a contract for a 4.5-mile section east of Yonge Street and a 2.1-mile section east of Islington Avenue.

In the Hamilton area construction will start in 1965 on a further 2.5-mile section of Highway 403 west of Aberdeen Avenue to Mohawk Road. About $2,400,000 has been set aside for this.

A contract of $1,300,000 for paving of the entire 6.6-mile Brantford bypass will be let this year.

In Northern Ontario, a 36-mile section of the Atikokan-to-Fort Frances extension of Highway 11 will be paved at a cost of $600,000. The 88 - mile road itself is not expected to be completed until summer.

Paving of 12 miles of Highway 105 south of Ear Falls will begin in the spring. Three new grading contracts will be awarded for the sections between Ear Falls and Highway 17 at Vermilion Bay. Cost of the new work will be $2,800,000.

Sixty - three miles of Highway 17 in northwestern Ontario will be brought up to Trans-Canada Highway standards. Contracts let this year will total $5,200,000, for grading and paving of 31 miles, paving of 35 miles, grading of three miles and construction of four bridges and overpasses.

On the Sudbury - Timmins highway new contracts will be let for 24.3 miles of grading and granular base in three sections: Eight miles south of Highway 101; 7.3 miles south of a point 16 miles south of 101; and nine miles south of a point 38 miles south of 101.

Construction of an additional 28.5 miles of Highway 101 from Foleyet to Wawa will begin in 1965. The section extends from Chapleau west to Highway 17. Some paving also is provided for in the total expenditure of $1,700,000.

The highways department said work on other highways and secondary roads will cost about $35,500,000. The work is mainly for reconstruction of two-lane roadways, accident-prone stretches and for replacement of narrow or unsound structures.

Liberals

precipitating a general election.

Many other opposition MPs are known to oppose an early election. A government defeat on a non - confidence motion would provoke the immediate dissolution of Parliament.

ENDORSE THE MOTION

The NDP motion was endorsed by 63 Conservatives, 15 New Democrats, 10 Creditistes and the two Quebec Independents, Leon Balcer and Rene Paul. New Democratic Leader Douglas was among those voting yes. Three Conservatives said they were paired.

Opposing the motion were 102 Liberals—98 Liberals were absent—Mr. Thompson, Mr. Lessard, H. A. Olsen (SC—Medicine Hat) and A. B. Patterson (SC—Fraser Valley).

Three Social Credit MPs from Quebec missed the vote and two others abstained—Guy Marcoux (Quebec — Montmorency) and Marcel Lessard (Lac St. Jean).

Mr. Lessard said he is not convinced that the Conservatives or the NDP could perform better than the Liberals if they were in office.

The government, six seats short of a clear majority in the 265-seat Commons, now has survived four tests of confidence in the new session. The next test will come Monday when the House divides on a Conservative motion.

Larry Pennell, parliamentary secretary to Finance Minister Gordon, said the NDP motion was irresponsible and would reduce federal revenues by $1,190,000,000 annually.

'WOULD BOOST TAXES'

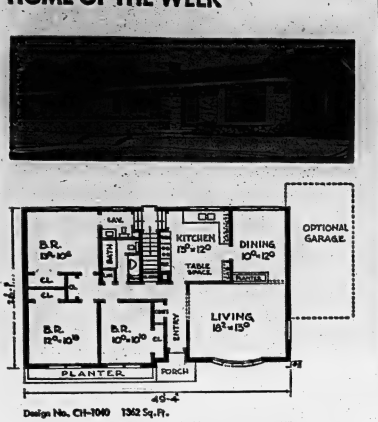
To make up for this loss, the government would either have to boost corporation taxes by 36 per cent or increase the sales tax to 12 per cent of the value of goods from 11.

Colin Cameron (NDP—Nanaimo-Cowichan - the Islands), who introduced his party's motion Wednesday, questioned Mr. Pennell's figures.

Alvin Hamilton (PC—Qu'appelle) said Mr. Gordon hurt Canadian exporters and ignored advice from the Economic Council of Canada by failing to repeal the sales tax on production machinery.

There was a serious threat of inflation and the 10-per-cent income tax cut announced in Monday's budget would add to the danger.

He hailed for tax concessions to "family firms" earning up to $100,000 annually and to export-ers. More co-ordination was needed between the federal and provincial governments and various departments to develop trade.



Gilles Gregoire, Creditiste financial critic, said the economy is not as rosy as the budget speech claimed. Unemployment was more widespread than official statistics indicated.

Mr. Lebas said smoking is harmful to health and cigarette advertising gives youngsters bad ideas.

In Olympia, Governor Dan Evans, a civil engineer, ordered the Capitol building evacuated. The 287-foot tall Capitol dome that rises above the legislative chambers was cracked and daylight could be seen through the wall in one place.

High up in the rotunda, columns had been sheared off at the base and the five-ton chandelier that dangles at the end of a 110-foot chain turned in a small orbit for more than an hour.

Panes in the skylight clattered down on desks of the legislators whose morning sessions had not yet begun. Legislators, in session for a record 108 days, went home until Monday.

His aid President Johnson telephoned his sympathy and an offer of help. Alaska's Governor William Egan also called and offered aid.

Ironically, the state civil defence department had planned an earthquake drill next week. The governor said the drill was planned because a study of the Alaska earthquake indicated the next major tremor was likely to occur in the Pacific northwest.

UAW Requests Compensation For Lost Jobs

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United Auto Workers union Thursday urged legislation to compensate workers who are displaced from their jobs by the Canada - United States agreement on autos and parts.

The UAW endorsed the agreement to end tariffs for producers of most North American motor vehicles and their component parts. But it said that Canada is dragging its feet in preparing for workers who are laid off as a result of the agreement.

Leonard Woodcock, vice-president of the UAW, appeared before the House of Representatives ways and means committee which is studying the draft legislation to implement the U.S. side of the agreement.

Prime Minister Pearson and President Johnson signed the pact Jan. 16, but Congress must pass the enabling legislation.

Woodcock also urged Canadian car-makers to start passing on price cuts to Canadian consumers.

The UAW represents most of the 1,000,000 workers in the U.S. industry and the bulk of Canada's 65,000 automotive workers.

BILL BENEFIT BOTH

Woodcock, in a partial text of his testimony issued in advance, said the agreement with proper safeguards will greatly benefit both countries. It means in effect the integration of U.S. auto industry producing primarily for the U.S. market, and a Canadian industry producing for the Canadian market, we will have taken a long step toward an international industry producing for the entire North American market."

Woodcock said the union hopes the principle can be extended to other North American industries.

Woodcock called for additional U.S. provisions in the draft bill to compensate workers who are thrown out of work by the agreement.

He said the U.S. government also should "make known to the Canadian government the concern of the U.S. that adequate safeguards be provided for Canadian workers affected by the agreement."

Refusal by Canada to do this would certainly hinder expansion of the free-trade principle in other areas, Woodcock added.

Lusitania Wreck Attracts Concentration of Game Fish

DUBLIN (CP) — A strange postscript to the Lusitania tragedy is being written by Ireland's booming tourist industry.

Seven years ago it was found that the wreck, like a huge natural reef, had attracted a massive concentration of game fish.

Now "fishing over the Lusitania" is a powerful tourist lure, one that has brought prosperity to the once-barren corner of southwest Ireland off which the Cunard liner was torpedoed in May, 1915, with loss of 1,198 lives.

Since the building of Cork airport, international anglers have taken to making a special detour to Kinsale for the summer excursions to the site of the wreck. They are run every day—twice daily in fine weather —during the season which lasts from mid-May to September. Sometimes the boats tie up to the buoy marking the site and fish all night.

EELS ARE BIG

"Conger eels are the main thing—big as telegraph poles they are," said an official of Dublin's Irish Tourist Board. Among outstanding catches he recalled were a skate weighing 204 pounds, several make sharks of around 170 pounds.

Many of the visiting fishermen are Germans—an irony the Irish skippers are quick to savor. One who had spent some time hunting for the exact position of the wreck told an impatient Teutonic customer: "Well, you should know where she is—you sunk her."

Some say—and one non-fisherman who went out swears to it—that on a calm day you can see the black shape of the hull and funnels through the water, 192 feet down. But tourist officials consider this a spot of the old blarney.

They also discount the legend of the sunken millions in gold, supposedly locked somewhere in the wreck. "If there had been anything worth having, you can be sure the people of Kinsale would have had it years ago," said one Dublin official wryly. "They can smell money miles away, so they can."

Bill knows a good thing when he sees it.*

Bill Mason is an independent surveyor. He's in business for himself. So Bill needs an automobile that makes a good impression. Like shiny shoes and a sharp trouser crease. He figured he had found what he was looking for when he spotted a Buick Wildcat convertible on a Goodwill lot. Bill was impressed with the car. And the price. But it wasn't until he heard all about the Goodwill warranty that he began to think seriously about buying.

Then he checked around and found out a lot about Goodwill Used Car dealers. He liked what he found. So he bought the Buick. That was two years ago. And because he was so pleased with his Buick he has since bought a GMC Truck for his business.

Bill Mason is a successful businessman. And he knows a good thing when he sees it. That's why Bill does business with the man who displays the Goodwill sign . . . a man who's in business to stay. He sells Pontiac, Buick, Acadian and GMC Trucks. And he gives the best used car deals in town.

Shiny roofed 60 foot silos at the Latchford "feed barn" stand out prominently for motorists passing through the Marysville Flats, 16 miles east of Belleville. Here one man using fully automated equipment can feed up to 300 steers.

Body of Grizzly Found Lived In 9,000 B. C.

TORONTO (CP)—The Royal Thursday that a skull and other bones found near Orillia last October have been identified as those of a grizzly bear that lived more than 11,000 years ago.

Randolph L. Peterson, curator of the museum's mammology division, said the find is the first evidence of grizzly bears east of the Great Lakes, though there have been occasional hunters' tales of such an animal in the Ungava Bay region of northern Quebec.

Today grizzlies live only in the Rocky Mountain region, the Arctic tundra and Alaska. The furthest east that any has been reported in historic times is in western Minnesota and no grizzly-bear fossils have been found closer to Ontario than Minnesota.

The skull was found in a load of gravel which was being dumped at a building site near Orillia. Basil Baye took it to the conservation officer J. T. Ross of the Ontario lands and forests department which turned it in to the district forester's office at Maple. From there it was sent to the museum.

CONDITION GOOD

Dr. Peterson said the skull was in remarkably good condition—it was hard to believe it was more than a few years old.

Later bolt lower jaws, a cervical vertebra and part of a leg-bone were found. A test on the leg-bone showed the animal lived about 11,700 years ago.

Museum authorities believe that at that time the site of Orillia was probably close to the shore of Lake Algonquin, a giant body of water that covered most of the upper Great Lakes area at the end of the Ice Ages.

The bear was apparently not much larger than the present-day grizzly but differed from it in several details.

FIGURES ARE UP

OTTAWA (CP)—More people were born, married and died in March than last year, the bureau of statistics said in a report today. March totals and last year's March figures bracketed: Births 37,153 (35,-698); marriages 7,158 (5,830); deaths 13,580 (11,844).

Feed Barn at Marysville Accommodates 300 Steers And Completely Automated

Steer ranching, Eastern style, sometimes has little resemblance to the wide open range of the foothills country in the Old West.

Instead of steers pasturing on lush open ranges and herded by horse weary cowpokes, the Eastern style operation can be a largely automated affair with cattle always in the corral with their feed brought to them.

That's the modus operandi at the W. G. Latchford "feed barn" at Marysville, where close to 300 steers can be fed by one man—pushing buttons and pulling levers instead of forking a cow pony.

And it could be that the Latchford steers will remain in the corral all during the fattening period without even seeing the open range.

FOUR SILOS BUILT

The year-round corral idea is being toyed with by Mr. Latchford whose Marysville steer feeding complex is still less than a year old.

Last summer four mammoth silos, each 60 feet in height with a diameter of 30 feet were built just south of the CN goods tracks at Marysville.

Open sheds got a big circular fully automated feed trough were added and here young steers are brought for finishing. Depending on size up to 300 steers can be accomodated at the feed trough.

Hay brought in by truck and corn from the Metcalfe Foods canning factory at Deseronto, is the main steer diet. The corn silage is that formally stacked in the fall at the canning factory and then trucked away by farmers for winter feeding.

FILLED WITH CORN

The four big silos, each with a capacity of close to 400 tons, were filled with corn during canning factory operations last fall. After a winter's steer feeding there are still two full silos of silage left.

The steer feeding operation is fully automated.

Corn is mechanically moved from the big silo, bay is chopped, and mixed with other ingredients, the entire ration is moved by conveyor and automatically distributed around the big circular feeding trough in the steer corral.

Steers raised are mostly Herefords or other beef breeds, but Mr. Latchford also plans experimenting with other breeds. He's even thinking of trying Holsteins.

A big percentage of the steers fattened come from the Canadian West, but local cattle are also fed.

Two Million Sets of Coins Made by Mint

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Gordon announced Thursday that by the end of July the Mint will have filled orders for 2,000,000 sets of 1965 coins. He lifted a freeze on further orders from coin collectors.

Six million sets had been ordered in January, before it was decided to work the mint overtime to fill 2,000,000 of them. Orders for 4,000,000 were returns, and a freeze placed on any no cases.

Mr. Gordon told the Commons that the mint has been working three shifts a day, six days a week to fill the orders for 2,000,000. Up to Wednesday, orders for 1,100,000 sets had been filled at a price of $4.00 a set.

"It is expected that the balance of these 2,000,000 sets will be produced and shipped out before the end of July," Mr. Gordon said.

"Consequently by the end of July . . . the mint can begin to produce sets to meet the requirements of those whose orders had to be returned earlier on in the year, and of any others who are entitled to purchase sets."

The government voted down 108 to 90 an NDP non - confidence motion in the second day of the budget debate.

Four Social Credit MPs voted with the Liberals against 15 New Democrats, 63 Conservatives, 10 Creditistes and two independents.

Bert Leboe (SC — Medicine Hat) said he favors the NDP points that the budget should have raised income tax exemption levels and old age payments.

But his party would stand by the minority government as the country would not be thrown into another election.

Larry Pennell (L — Brant-Haldimand) said the NDP should show more financial responsibility; the motion's proposals would cost $1,150,-000,000 annually.

Alvin Hamilton (PC — Qu'appelle), said the tax on production machinery should have been abolished and steps taken to boost exports.

Told of Windfall Core Salesman Informs Inquiry

TORONTO (CP) — A stock salesman testified Thursday he was told by a member of the Ontario legislature that Windfall Oils and Mines Ltd. pulled a hoax of 3.25-per-cent copper at the time of the stock's wild activity on the Toronto Stock Exchange last July.

Three-per-cent copper is considered rich ore. The company, 27 days later, announced that no ore values had been found in the core.

Alfred Andrews, of the investment firm of Nesbitt, Thomson and Co., told a royal commission he was advised that the Windfall core contained 60 feet of copper ore by Osie Villeneuve, Progressive Conservative member of the legislature for Glengarry.

He said Mr. Villeneuve told him, in a conversation outside the post office in Cornwall, the information came from provincial Mines Minister George Wardrope.

Mr. Andrews said, he asked Mr. Villeneuve where he got the information and was told: "I was just talking with the minister of mines, who had been talking with the MacMillans."

George MacMillan is president of Windfall and his wife and son are the company's promoter - financier.

Mr. Andrews' evidence was given to a royal commission investigating the rise of Windfall shares to $5.80 from 56 cents when their exchange plunged to 80 cents last July. The phenomenal activity in the stock was sparked by reports of ore find on a property near Timmins.

Mr. Andrews said he bought Windfall stock and sold it briefly in the month on the advice of Cuthbert Dixon, a partner in the brokerage house of Doherty, Roadhouse and McCuaig Brothers.

Mr. Andrews said Mr. Dixon told him Windfall was drilling 15 second hole in a horizontal direction to the first, which would not indicate an ore body being located.

Mr. Justice Arthur Kelly, head of the commission, asked Mr. Andrews why he sold. —

The reply: "Anybody who has lost money as consistently as I and still has the emotional fortitude to stay with it has to learn something . . . so I sold."

Mr. Villeneuve testified he made about $8,000 trading Windfall but last considerably more by trading other speculative stocks with properties in the same area as Windfall.

He said he traded through three brokerage houses and his brother, Lavanger Lemieux of them, had instructions to buy and sell stock for him if a situation looked good.

He said he met a Mr. MacDonald in Maxville July 13, and was told the Toronto Stock Exchange would take some action against Windfall.

On the previous Friday, the exchange had threatened to suspend Windfall if it didn't provide information to justify its fantastic market activity.

Mr. Villeneuve said he had bought 5,500 shares of Windfall at about the $3 mark on the Friday and was worried about the news Mr. MacDonald gave him.

He said: "On Monday morning, I phoned Mr. Wardrope and asked him what he had heard. I could have told him I had bought stock—I don't know.

"Mr. Wardrope said he'd had a conversation with the MacMillans until after midnight; he had seen them regarding the unfair publicity they had received without them having a chance to give their side of the story.

"Mr. Wardrope told me a statement would be made that morning . . . I called him later and he had nothing to add. . . . He knew I was playing the penny stocks."

Under questioning, Mr. Villeneuve said: "He may have told me that things looked good."

Mr. Villeneuve denied he received any assays from Mr. Wardrope.

Mr. Hartt asked: "Did you tell Mr. Andrews that Mr. Wardrope had given you ass ya?"

"No, I could have conveyed to him the view that I felt it was reliable, but Mr. Wardrope did not give a breakdown on the assays."

Mr. Dixon testified he bought and sold Windfall shares throughout July in his own name and for his wife and daughter.

He said, however, that all except one of his clients had sold their Windfall shares three days before the stock fell to 80 cents from $4.15.

Mr. Dixon said he bought the stock, and advised his clients to do the same on the basis of rumors he received from three sources:

—The first rumor of 90 feet of 2.04-per-cent copper came from a friend who said he had read "the minister of mines department."

—60 feet of 1.5-per-cent copper from Ned Hogarth, Timmins real estate man.

—86 feet of 2.33-per-cent copper from Vernon Gillie, a geologist with Noranda Mines Ltd.

He said he sold the stock because of the way Windfall was drilling its second hole. He said he got this information from Mr. Gillie.

The commission also heard from a man who made about $14,000 trading in Windfall. He was William Lipsett of Toronto, a diamond - drilling contract salesman now retired.

Mr. Lipsett said he became interested in Windfall July 6—the day the stock opened at $1.01 after closing the previous session at 56 cents.

Mr. Lipsett said he was a client of Mr. Dixon, who gave him information. At one time, before Windfall's bust, he held 170,300 shares.

MAY MATCH TISSUES

EDMONTON (CP) — Researchers believe they may be able to match human tissues for transplants and grafting in much the same way as blood types are matched for transfusions, an Edmonton pathologist said Wednesday. Dr. G. P. Bain, associate professor of pathology at the University of Alberta, told a conference on "spare - part surgery" that tissue-matching would be much more complicated than matching blood types.

Hees Has No Plans to Meet With Balcer

MONTREAL (CP) — George Hees, looked on by many as a possible future candidate for leadership of the Progressive Conservative party, said Thursday he has no plans to meet Leon Balcer to discuss the future of the party in Quebec.

Mr. Balcer, former Quebec leader, resigned from the party April 7 after a series of clashes with Opposition Leader Diefenbaker over the party's policies towards Quebec. Mr. Balcer, member for Trois - Rivieres, now sits in the Commons as an independent.

In a prepared statement, Mr. Hees referred to reports published Wednesday that Mr. Balcer "indicated to the press that he expected to have a meeting with me to discuss the future of the Conservative party in Quebec."

Mr. Hees, former Conservative trade minister, and now president of the Montreal and Canadian stock exchanges, added:

NOT BEEN IN TOUCH

"He (Mr. Balcer) has not been in touch with me to suggest such a meeting and in view of his statement when he resigned from the party, I do not expect that he will.

"When he resigned from the Conservative party, Mr. Balcer made it very clear that he intends to remain as an Independent, and it appeared that he had no more interest in the future of the Conservative party. If this did not represent Mr. Balcer's feelings and intentions about the party he should, without delay, make his position clear and join with others in assisting the party in any way possible.

On the leadership issue, Mr. Hees has said frequently that no vacancy in the leadership exists at the moment. When a vacancy does exist, he said, he expects interested candidates will come forward.

Highly - informed sources close to Mr. Hees said last week he will be a candidate for the party leadership but will not commit himself for the post until Mr. Diefenbaker leaves.

Improvised Gym Equipment Helps to Pass Rainy Days

What to do during recess period on a rainy day — when there is no gymnasium or other indoor playing area.

That, over the years, has been a big problem at many a small rural school.

But in the case of the Rednerville Public School enterprising mothers have come up with a bright answer and at no cost to the school board.

The answer is improvised play equipment from which pupils seem to derive much fun.

One of the ideas is an improvised gymn horse built from a big 40-gallon steel barrel. Another is the use of cast off truck tires with which a wide variety of games can be played.

Old mattresses donated by parents ease the bumps as the boys do slow rolls over the makeshift gymn horse.

So when it rains at Rednerville, instead of occupying their time with conventional indoor games, the pupils literally "roll out the barrel".

"It really solves a big problem for those rainy days," says school principal Mrs. Bessie Tesky.

Red Election Wins Are Troubling India

By CONRAD FINK

NEW DELHI (AP)—Communist election successes in opposition corners of India spell trouble for the ruling Congress party.

The elections — a municipal poll in the northeast city of Calcutta and a state election in southwestern Kerala — clearly reveal a rebellion against the party of Gandhi, Nehru and Indian independence.

In Calcutta, a combined opposition called the United Citizens Committee, representing both wings of the divided Communist party, won more votes than the Congress party—300,000 to 260,000—and took 39 seats in the 100-member corporation council.

The Congress won 39 seats, no improvement over the 39 it won in the 80-member council in 1961 elections.

Kerala Communists won 40 state assembly seats, compared with the Congress' 36.

The failure of both elections was the Congress' inability to defeat Communist candidates who were in jail or under ground hiding from police. In Kerala, the Communist Democrats won over Congress candidates who had the necessary freedom to campaign.

SIGNS OF WEAKNESS

Aside from poor election showings, there are other signs of weakness in the immense Congress party, which has almost 15,000,000 members.

Party rank and file revolted in several state byelections and Congress wings in state assemblies have had difficulty holding a united front against burgeoning Communist and left-wing socialist opposition.

Bigwigs in New Delhi are not letting examples of party disciplining.

Party President Kumaraswami is under financial scandals in three states have been traced in recent months to the Congress machine. Two ranking Congress members have quit under fire.

For the moment, the Congress' overwhelming majority in Parliament is safe: The next scheduled general election is in 1967 and the Congress easily beats down parliamentary challenges that would force earlier elections.

Stresses New Programs For Retarded

CAMPBELLFORD — Campbellford and District Association for Retarded Children held its regular monthly meeting at Merryvale School on Tuesday evening. As associations are now being strongly urged to initiate programs covering all ages of mentally retarded, the theme is being changed, eliminating the term children.

President Mrs. F. M. Rutherford conducted the meeting.

Reports were given by the "Flowers of Hope" chairman, Mrs. R. Lillie, the teaching staff by principal Mrs. William Hoey and a report of the OARC conference at Barrie by Mrs. J. Rannie.

Four new pupils were enrolled after the Easter holiday to make a total of 13 pupils.

CONVENTION HIGHLIGHTS

In her report Mrs. Rannie described the visit made by delegates at the conference to the Ontario Hospital at Orillia. She said the children were happy with associates of their own intellectual level, and the musical ability developed was outstanding.

The evening concert at the Ontario Hospital School at Orillia consisted of a 13-piece orchestra, with others trained to step in if needed, a Beatle-type singing group, a choir and round dancing, choir singing and a group of 40 or more doing the teen-aged twist to the music of the orchestra were enjoyed.

Buses arriving at the school were met by cheers on hand. Many of these pupils could not read or write academically but were able to score in musical scores.

Another highlight of the convention was an address by Dr. Carl Haywood, visiting professor OARC on the topic "Personality Factors in the Learning and Performance of Retarded Children."

GUEST SPEAKER

Guest speaker at Merryvale School on Tuesday evening was Dr. DeGroot of Trenton.

Dr. DeGroot outlined the phases of conducting a sheltered workshop for adult retarded, stating the capacity for work is different, the ability to work is in direct ratio and parents are inclined to be protective and underestimate the retarded's ability, a teacher is inclined to over-estimate, a workshop operator is more apt to find the proper medium.

TYPE OF WORK

To find the type of work available, should get professional help from an agency, such as Chamber of Commerce, a survey of industry and this requires research and time, contact government agencies, such as employment offices.

Dr. DeGroot also stressed relationship with unions in regard to wages and time, working, and suggested a prominent union member be appointed to the Workshop Board.

Retardates should be protected from profiteers and would never at any time become a threat to the labor market.

Dr. DeGroot was introduced by Rev. E. A. Toombs and was thanked by Mrs. R. Lillie.

Principal Mrs. William Hoey is arranging a banquet for the pupils who had bowled during the season to be held June 4th.

Sunday School Lesson

Petulance or Principle?

By CLARENCE W. CRANFORD

It is not always easy to pass the gold of God's truth out of the gravel of Old Testament history. It is easy to get bogged down in the story of ancient intrigues and battles. But Bible history is never merely history. It is Israel's faith in God. And he who looks carefully into the stream of Jewish history will find many golden nuggets of insight into the true nature of God.

Some of these nuggets shine out against the dark background of Samuel's clash with Saul. Saul was Israel's first king. Samuel was God's prophet, and as such was an advisor to the king. But Saul did not always choose to follow Samuel's advice. And herein lay the background for some of Samuel's most prophetic statements concerning God and His demands.

Samuel and Saul first clashed at Gilgal when Saul's army was drawn up against the Philistines. Saul wanted to attack, but his army was unprepared. He wanted, therefore, to have a sacrifice offered to God to call down God's blessing on his efforts. He waited a week for Samuel to come to offer such a sacrifice. When Samuel did not come in the prearranged time, Saul himself grew impatient, and went ahead and offered the sacrifice. This brought Samuel's anger down on Saul: "You have done foolishly," Samuel told him. "You have not kept the commandment of the Lord." (I Samuel 13:13 RSV)

Why was Samuel so peeved? Was it just a case of a petulent old man becoming angry because a headstrong young king had interfered with his prerogatives? Was this a struggle between a ruler and an ecclesiastic for control of the people? Or did it go deeper? Was Samuel afraid that if a king also acted as a priest, he might try to dictate the religious as well as the civil policies of his people?

FORCING LORD'S HAND

Samuel did not act out of petulence. He was standing for a principle. Undoubtedly, he felt that Saul was trying to force the Lord's hand. Saul's situation was desperate. His army was outnumbered. Some of his men were deserting. If he waited to attack, he feared more would desert. But he wanted God's support of his efforts. And he felt that sacrifice would help—so he offered the sacrifice to try to get it. Rather than wait, which Samuel knew was the wiser thing to do, he pressed the issue with God.

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for May 2: "God Demands Obedience," I Samuel 13 through 15.

So men have often tried to force God's hand. They rush unprepared into action, and then call on God to bail them out. But God cannot be pressured or hurried. He cannot be blackmailed into supporting the schemes of men. He asks them to seek with patience to know and to do His will.

The complete break between Samuel and Saul came over the battle with the Amalekites. Feeling against them had been building up for centuries. Their ancestor had attacked the Israelites as they made their way from Egypt toward Canaan. To defeat them would be to revenge this ancient wrong. Samuel ordered their complete destruction. Nothing was to be taken as spoil. (I Samuel 15:3) But Saul disobeyed. He listened to his greed and vanity rather than to Samuel. He destroyed only the worthless animals, and kept the best. He spared King Agag's life, not as much out of mercy as vanity. He could display Agag as a trophy of war.

PRINCIPLE STATED

Samuel was enraged. In anger, he declared, "Has the Lord as great delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices, as in obeying the voice of the Lord? Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice." (I Samuel 15:22 RSV)

Samuel was a child in his day. He believed it was God's will alter to sacrifices dishonesty and injustice toward their fellow men.

It is easier to praise God than to obey Him. Men want His help more than they want His guidance. Some people think religion and business do not mix, but to God's way they are just two ways of serving Him. Micah summed it up when he said God will not be pleased even if men offer Him "thousands of rams" and "ten thousands of rivers of oil" unless they "do justice," and "love kindness," and "walk humbly" with their God. (Micah 6:6-8)

Lusitania: Riddle of Doomed Voyage

Are There Still Missing Links?

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP)—At 2:09 p.m. May 7, 1915, off the southwest coast of Ireland, a young German sailor in a nine commander peered through his periscope and ordered his torpedo gunner to fire.

It was a decision that Winston Churchill later described as one of Germany's greatest blunders in the First World War.

Within two years the United States was in the fight, sealing Germany's defeat.

The big four-funnelled vessel that Walter Schwieger held in his sights that fine spring afternoon 50 years ago was the pride of Britain's merchant fleet — the 32,500-ton, 25-knot Lusitania.

She was bound for Liverpool from new York with 1,257 passengers, mostly Britons, Canadians and Americans, and 702 crew.

In full view of watchers on the Old Head of Kinsale 11 miles away, the Lusitania sank in 18 minutes with the loss of 1,198 lives, among them 124 citizens of the neutral U.S.

Alarmed by the wave of anger that swept the U.S. in the verge of war that summer, Germany claimed the Lusitania was carrying Canadian troops and munitions and was armed with masked guns—allegations officially denied and attributed to "perjured evidence" from German agents in New York.

WARNED TRAVELLERS

But was that the whole story? Delving into the dusty, scanty records, one gets a feeling there are too many missing links to be attributed to wartime conditions; perhaps that the liner's fate was suspected by more people than will ever be disclosed.

Some certainly knew it was a routine voyage when the Lusitania sailed on her 202nd—and last—Atlantic crossing May 1, 1915.

That morning a notice appeared in New York newspapers, signed by the Imperial German Embassy in Washington and warning transatlantic travellers that in the "war zone" round the British Isles they sailed on a British or Allied ship at their own risk.

It was dated April 22 but had not appeared before. Ominously, it was placed next to the Cunard schedules announcing the departure of the Lusitania.

Scenting a story, reporters called the embassy—to be assured it was "a gesture of friendship toward U.S. citizens" —and converged on Pier 54, where the big Cunarder, painted war grey and flying no flag, was preparing to sail amid a flurry of sinister rumors.

Several prominent American passengers had received anonymous cables warning "on definite authority" the ship would be attacked. Sidewalk photographers even hawked pictures captioned Last Voyage of the Lusitania.

RUMORED GOLD ABOARD

It was whispered she was carrying a cargo of shells and $6,000,000 worth of gold bullion locked in a secret strongroom. She had carried similar amounts of gold on previous voyages, but this time her cargo was valued at a modest $750,000. It included 5,000 cases of rifle ammunition, not considered "war contraband" by the New York port authorities.

Aboard were 159 Americans, including millionaire Alfred G. Vanderbilt, off to buy English racehorses, and Broadway producer Charles Frohman.

Among the 333 Canadian passengers were Lady Allan of Montreal, wife of financier Sir Hugh Allan who gave, hockey the Allan Cup, with their beautiful twin daughters Gwendolins and Anna; Mrs. G. Sterling Ryerson of Toronto; a war correspondent named Ernest Cowper and a number of reservists going to join the Canadian forces in France.

Vanderbilt—who had received one of the ominous cables—and a Toronto store buyer named Thomas Hone shared an odd distinction: through missing train in 1912 both had escaped sailing on the disastrous maiden voyage of the Titanic. Home was to escape the coming wreck, but not Vanderbilt, whose body was among the 910 never recovered.

SET SPEED MARK

Built in 1906 under a government contract that provided for her conversion in wartime to an armed liner, the Lusitania was still one of the world's most advanced ships. Her four powerful steam turbines pioneered today's liner engines. On her second voyage in 1907 she wrested the Blue Riband of the Atlantic from Germany and Cunard's liner set a record westbound passage time of 4½ days.

With the outbreak of war and drop in ocean travel, Cunard decided to save costs by running the Lusitania on only 18 of her 25 boilers. Since February, 1915, when Germany began retaliating against Britain's naval blockade, the liner had steadily escaped one mystifying submarine. Capt. William Turner, her 59-year-old commander who had been with Cunard since 1883, felt confident that even fettered to 21 knots, the "Lusy" could outstrip the fastest U-boat.

After the Titanic disaster her lifeboats had been increased to 48, accommodating 2,605 persons—a healthy margin over the 1,959 now aboard. Cunard's proud slogan was still, after 79 years: "We never lost a life."

The crossing was uneventful, though it was later said a German spy had been arrested two days out from New York, trying to break into the wireless room. As the liner neared the war zone Thursday, May 6, the lookout was doubled to four men and the boats swung out. Each there was no boat drill for passengers.

WARNED OF SUBS

Admiralty cables warned Turner submarines were operating off Ireland and advised him to keep clear of prominent headlands. Other standard instructions were to zigzag in irregular courses, steam at full speed past harbors.

That evening, New York Admiralty officer received mysterious phone calls asking if the Lusitania had been torpedoed.

At noon next day King George V was talking with Col. Edward House, a close adviser of President Woodrow Wilson whose mission was to sound out protests for a negotiated peace. Conversation turned to Germany's submarine war. The King remarked: "Suppose they should sink the Lusitania with American passengers on board?"

Col. House replied he thought the U.S. would enter the war.

Two hours later, the Lusitania was steaming in clear view of the Irish coast at a leisurely 18 knots. Despite his instructions, Turner had reduced speed, not wanting to reach Liverpool before high tide. He felt the early morning fog had enabled him to avoid the worst danger zones indicated by the admiralty.

What the admiralty had not told him was that three merchant ships had been sunk in that area in the previous 48 hours. And the Irish Coast Patrol, responsible for this vital link in Britain's shipping lifeline, was that day lying in Queenstown, undergoing a change of command.

NAME PAINTED OUT

As the ship changed course, she moved into range of Schwieger's watching U-20 submerged 500 yards away. Later Schwieger noted in his log he could not identify the big liner until he saw the "gold letters" on her bow as she sank—although the name had been painted out since war began.

Suddenly 18-year-old Leslie Morton, an extra lookout in the liner's bow, spotted two parallel white streaks flashing across the sea. He grabbed a megaphone and yelled: "Torpedoes coming on the starboard side!"

Today Morton, a vigorous, brown-haired man of 68 who runs a canal transport company, says he thinks if the helmsman had swung the wheel over that instant, the ship might have been saved. "But there were so many false alarms that day. . . ."

At 2:10 the torpedo—probably two—struck the Lusitania below and behind her bridge, plowing through No. 5 stokehold and blasting the engine room apart. The stricken liner listed violently, still plunging ahead with terrifying speed. Within minutes it became impossible to lower most of the boats. Some were tipped over, others swamped or crushed with their occupants.

The ship was sinking with unbelievable speed despite her double bottom and 175 watertight compartments.

At 2.28 her bow went down, her stern soared 100 feet in the air. Suddenly the steeply-raked hull stopped dead, shuddering. Turner, swimming away from the bridge, realized his huge ship, 785 feet long and 216 feet to masthead, had struck the seabed, 300 feet down.

She stayed there a few moments, settled back and sank.

'FAMOUS LAST WORDS'

Just before the water reached him, Charles Frohman, the half-crippled impresario, was heard quoting from J. M. Barrie's new play Peter Pan: "Why fear death? It is the most beautiful adventure in life." That line has endured among history's "famous last words."

Only one man, Saskatoon who had the most miraculous escape of all was so shaken by the experience he cannot bear to speak of it even 50 years later. In quiet retirement in England, Margaret Gwyn, on honeymoon with her clergyman husband—also saved—was sucked into one of the giant funnels as the Lusitania went under.

An exploding boiler blew the funnel off, shooting her to the surface again. Young Les Morton, who was decorated for saving 100 lives that day, hauled her into his boat, blackened all over and with most of her clothes gone.

Fishing boats picked up the survivors, many of whom died later. Queenstown became a vast morgue.

Final lists showed 785 passengers and 413 crew lost—among them 291 women, 59 children and 35 of the 39 infants aboard.

Of the 333 Canadians, 207 were posted missing but only 37 bodies were recovered. Lady Allan stayed, but not her 15-year-old daughters, with whom she had jumped hand-in-hand from the deck. Mrs. Ryerson was also drowned.

67 TORONTONIANS DIED

Toronto was worst hit of Canadian cities, with 67 lost out of 146 Torontonians aboard. But Montreal, Edmonton, Hamilton, Winnipeg, Vancouver and many smaller communities suffered heavily.

In Victoria, B.C., rioters wrecked the German club. In Liverpool and London's east end, mobs ran wild, smashing any store with a German name.

Editorials asked: What will the U.S. do?

But President Wilson counselled caution. Monday, May 10, as the Lusitania victims were buried in Queenstown, tier upon tier in mass graves, Wilson declared: "There is such a thing as a man being too proud to fight . . . such a thing as a nation being so right that it does not need to convince others by force."

At an inquest in Kinsale, the Irish jury charged Germany with "wilful and wholesale murder."

The board of trade inquiry in London, conducted by Lord Mersey absolved Turner of blame after a closed-session grilling on his failure to follow admiralty instructions. It also cleared Cunard for economizing on the Lusitania's fuel, placing the guilt "with those who plotted and committed the crime."

GERMANY EXULTED

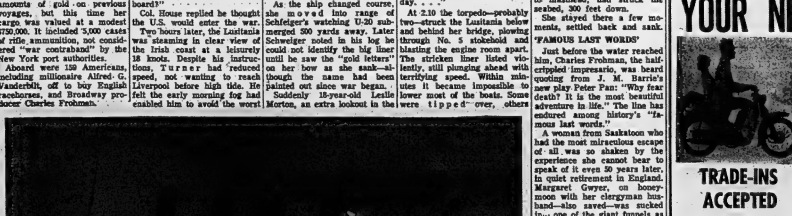
While bodies continued to wash up around Ireland's shores and diplomatic protests flew between Washington and Berlin, the German press exulted. A medal was struck in Munich showing the sinking liner crammed with guns and airplanes. It was dated, mysteriously, May 5—two days before the attack.

Germany stepped up her war on merchant shipping, sinking three U.S. freighters after declaring unrestricted submarine warfare in January, 1917. On Good Friday, April 6, the U.S. went to war.

In 1926, by an ironic coincidence, the man who sank the Lusitania, gunner R. Wiesbach of U-30, came back to Ireland commanding his own U-boat. During the Irish rebel Roger Casement, later hanged as a traitor by England, on his doomed mission to rally the Irish to Germany's cause.

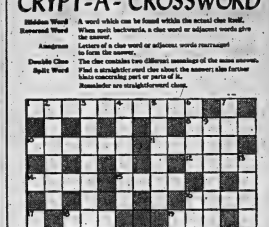
Of all the unanswered questions in the Lusitania case, none is more baffling than this: Why, after all the warnings, did the admiralty not provide an armed escort in the war zone?

The legend of the gold and munitions—never officially supported—inspired several salvage attempts in the 1930s. In 1961 a team of U.S. divers with special TV cameras claimed to be the first to reach and identify the sunken liner, lying almost upright under 192 feet of water, 10.9 miles due south of Kinsale Head.



They found some "peculiar damage" to the hull on the side away from the torpedo, which could have been caused by an internal explosion. Bad weather ended the search—the riddle still unsolved.

TIPOFF IGNORED — The 50th anniversary of the sinking of the Lusitania by a German submarine May 7, 1915, recalls the advertisement which appeared in New York newspapers just before the liner sailed May 1. As early as April 22, the Imperial Germany Embassy published advertisements like that shown above (left) warning that travellers sailing in the war zones on ships of Great Britain or her Allies do so at their own risk. Some notices appeared alongside ads p omoting the Lusitania's trip. (CP Photo)



LUSITANIA GOES DOWN — Norman Wilkinson of the Illustrated London News drew this graphic portrayal of the Lusitania sinking May 7, 1915. Hit by German torpedoes, the bow plunged to the bottom and stuck there briefly before the vessel toppled over and submerged. Lives lost totalled 1,198. (CP Photo)

PROUD FLAGSHIP — The 35,000-ton Lusitania was the proud flagship of the Cunard Line in 1915. With a speed of 25 knots, the magnificent vessel could cross the Atlantic in less than five days. On May 7, 1915, off the coast of Ireland she was sunk ignominiously by a German submarine as she neared the end of a voyage from New York. (CP Photo)

Two runs for the pickerel roosting under way tonight the second the Big Bell tolling of midnight dies away.

The bigger Derby of the pair is being staged by the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce over Picton way with an opportunity for fishermen to win one thousand dollars in prizes and also to get in a few days' angling before the season opens in other parts of Ontario.

The second search for the elusive walleye takes place on the Bay of Quinte off the city under the sponsorship of the Belleville Fish and Game Club. The loot is not as heavy as the Picton affair—but the fun should be just as great.

The weighing-in spots are located in Picton at the Bay Marina and in the city on Victoria Park. Times here are 8 a.m. to 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and on Sunday 8 a.m. to 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. to 8 p.m.

The Prince Edward Derby closes at 2 p.m. Sunday with the awards being presented at the Bay Marina immediately following the announcement of the various winners.

Fishermen from both "side of the bay" agree that some of the finest fishing in Canada is to be found in the Bay of Quinte and district inland waters.

Section Two of the Ontario Fishing Regulations under the sub-heading "Pickerel" states that the official season opens May 15 and runs through March 31st "that part of Lake Ontario lying east of longitude 78 degrees (the village of Grafton), North Channel of Lake Ontario, Bay of Quinte, Consecon Lake, East Lake, West Lake, Pleasant Bay and Huyck's Bay in the county of Prince Edward, Trent River south of Number One Dam. Moira River south from the first dam upstream from Lake Ontario in the city of Belleville, Salmon River south of the Shannonville dam and the Napanee river south of the dam in the town of Napanee."

The pickerel season also opens on May 1st in that portion of the St. Lawrence River extending westward from the dam at the site of the Robert H. Saunders Generating Station in the county of Stormont, including Lake St. Lawrence.

Unless some of the giants of the pickerel species have transferred their families to the "country parts of the bay—and the inland waters, the big boys from the "city side" will again grab the honors and accompanying loot.

Last year the average weight of the county hauls was between 7 and seven pounds. Limbers from here tipped the scales up to 14 pounds. Not counting the "mystery" whale that almost walked home with the gold and glory until it was discovered it had recently dined on a big lead sinq.

The lure of the loot will attract the majority of anglers to the Picton Derby, although many will gun for the minor spoils of the Belleville Fish and Game Club because of accessibility of fishing waters.

The tops of both derbies last year—or it should be tops caught while the events were under way was a huge 17-pound pike boated by a teen-age fisherman in the bay near the city. The sad thing about it was—he was not registered with the Picton derby.

Co-operating with the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce is Quinte Isles Tourist Association which has listed accommodation which will be provided on request by calling their Picton office.

There are two "first" prizes, designed to give non-residents of the area equal opportunity to win the top two prizes. For the largest pickerel caught by a person living outside of the Counties of Prince Edward, Hastings, Leanox and Addington, Frontenac and Northumberland, caught in local waters, there is a prize of a nine and one-half horsepower Johnston Motor, valued at $410.00.

The second "first" prize is open to those named in the above counties only and is a six horsepower motor valued at $310.00.

There are other fine prizes open to all taking part. The lady catching the largest pickerel receives a spinning outfit. There is a valuable cooler for the smallest pickerel entered.

Since many northern pike are caught in these waters, there is a trailer, valued at $130.00 for the biggest one caught by anyone.

A spinning outfit goes to the person with highest total weight catch during the two days. All who enter any fish are eligible to win a transistor radio in a draw.

Registration is at Picton Bay Marina in Picton and must be made in advance of fishing to be eligible. Registration is one dollar for each adult, 50c for children.

'Moose', Mohns Sink Canadiens 2-1

By AL McNEIL

Chicago (cp)—Chicago Black Hawks took a lesson from Montreal Canadiens and scored their fifth power-play goal of the playoffs Thursday night to shut the Habs 3-1 and force a seventh and deciding Stanley Cup contest in Montreal Saturday night.

The victory gave the Hawks a new lease on life, as veteran Doug Mohns sank his third playoff goal midway through the third period before more than 20,000 delirious Chicago fans.

DOUG MOHNS

Montreal have scored 19 power plays in the playoffs.

Chicago's winning goal came just seven seconds after Montreal defenceman Terry Harper had been given the gate for grabbing Bobby Hull as the Chicago star boomed in over the blue line.

Three minutes earlier, Elmer Vasko had made it 1-1 with his first playoff goal since 1961.

Ralph Backstrom was the lone marksman for the Canadiens, getting his second goal of the playoffs at 18:57 of the second period.

An ominous note for the Canadiens was the fact that Vasko had not scored in the playoffs since 1961—the last year the Hawks went all the way.

HIT STICK, SKATE

Mohns described the game-winning goal as 'he dressed:

"It hit my stick first, then hit my own skate and went in. I was waiting right in front when the pass came across from (Stan) Mikita and it was a scramble to get it as my stick was tangled behind my skate."

Hawks' captain Pierre Pilote had fired a pass to Mikita in the corner and Mikita relayed the puck directly across the goal-mouth to Mohns, waiting at the corner of the crease.

Coach Billy Reay described Chicago's victory as "just another hockey game," but said he was glad to win it and "now we can have the real championship Saturday in Montreal."

The hard-fought contest was just under way when a brawl erupted between Henry Richard of the Canadiens and Phil Esposito of the Hawks. This was the first of two slugging contests that highlighted the opening period.

With Esposito and Richard at a standoff, several other players began picking partners. However, referee Frank Udvari banished only the two original combatants to the penalty box, with Esposito getting a double minor and Richard a single minor.

START SLUGGING AGAIN

Five minutes later they again chose sides when Mikita and Montreal's Dick Duff voted to slug it out along the boards. They moved to centre ice and Terry Harper decided Mohns was just right for him. Udvari sent Mikita and Harper off with minor penalties, majors and 10-minute misconducts while Duff and Mohns retired with five-minute majors.

In all, Udvari called 56 minutes on 14 penalties in the opening period, which took 43 minutes to play. During this time, the teams were at full strength for only seven of the 30 scoreless minutes.

Both clubs received superior goaltending performances, in direct contrast to the last two games which ended with a 5-1 win for Chicago and a 6-0 victory for Montreal.

Charlie Hodge was called on to make 32 saves for the Canadiens, while Glenn Hall came up with 21 in Chicago's winning effort.

It was Hodge who kept the Canadiens in the game in the penalty-riddled first period. He stopped 11 shots while Hall faced a relatively easy five.

SINGLES TWO OUT

Reay said the contributing factor in his club's victory was the improved play of Vasko and Pilote on the blueline.

"The difference in tonight's (Thursday's) game was that Vasko and Pilote were moving the puck out of their own zone," Reay said.

"For once, I thought we actually played well enough to win one," he added, smiling for the first time since the playoffs started.

Pilote said the Canadiens checking Hull and Mikita and other dangerous Hawks marksmen had allowed other members of the club to come up with the goals.

"When they check your big guns, someone's got to come through," Pilote said.

Hull said he felt the pressure was not as heavy as in other games, adding: "They're starting to loosen up on me a bit."

Canadiens' coach Toe Blake said a team still needed four games to take a cup.

He said he thought his team had played well enough to win but "didn't have as many chances as we had in previous games."

Both teams left immediately after the game, the Canadiens by train and the Hawks by air for Montreal.

Game time Saturday is 8 p.m.

Canadian Football Players

Body Not To Be A Club

HAMILTON (CP)—The newly-formed Canadian Football League players' association is not intended "as a club to be bled, over the CFL's head," says John Agro, a Hamilton lawyer and pro tem legal adviser to the association.

Agro and Bernie Faloney, former Hamilton Tiger - Cats quarterback traded to Montreal Alouettes and a prime mover of the association, expressed concern Thursday for what they believed were erroneous implications concerning the group's aim.

Both said the association's purpose is to improve pro football in Canada and this can best be accomplished through improved player - management relations.

Faloney said a wire service story from Ottawa on comments he made Tuesday at a dinner had been lifted out of context. He had been reported as saying players were not "cattle or chattels" any more.

He said in that particular instance he had been referring to players being first notified of trades or sales by other than club management.

A brief from the association will be presented to the CFL's annual meeting in June when Agro hopes to obtain formal recognition for the association.

Top Choice Of Juniors To Nationals

Boucher Speaks

TORONTO (CP) — Frank Boucher says Canada should scrap its system of building world and Olympic hockey teams on college players. He has a plan he thinks will produce tough contenders, probably champions, every year.

The Boucher plan is to recruit players who are not graduate from junior ranks.

The 61-year-old commissioner of the Saskatchewan Junior Hockey League, member of the Hockey Hall of Fame and a great centre with the old Ottawa Senators and later with New York Leagers of the National League, says he is "irritated by Canada's repeated failures in international (hockey) competition."

Writing in the May 15 issue of Maclean's magazine, the outspoken Boucher says Canada's "abject failure" at this year's world tournament in Tampere, Finland, "marked the end of my personal patience with what has become known as Father David Bauer's four-year plan to restore our international prestige."

Canada finished fourth at Tampere behind Russia, Czechoslovakia and Sweden. In the 1964 winter Olympics at Innsbruck, Austria, Canada also ended fourth.

Boucher says:

CITES TWO WRONGS

". . . Our 8-0 defeat by Czechoslovakia (is) proof positive that our system is wrong; second, the suggestion by Father Bauer, the man behind Canada's last two international teams, that perhaps we should withdraw from the (world) tournament in 1966 to prepare for 1967—is ample evidence to me that our philosophy is wrong.

Boucher says he admires Father Bauer but believes the two years he has spent on his plan have been wasted and "I foresee the prospect of another wasted two years if we are to go along with him."

Boucher says there are 46 Junior A hockey teams in Canada and roughly 200 players on these clubs are in their final junior year.

"Two or three will make the big jump directly to the National Hockey League next season. Another 30 or 30 will move into the minor professional leagues. Many will go to U.S. colleges on hockey scholarships, and still others will take jobs in U.S. towns and play on senior amateur clubs.

"I say that none of them should go anywhere until they have been considered for our national team. I say that the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and the NHL should co-operate in the appointment of a permanent manager and a permanent coach of our national team, two men completely compatible and carrying the confidence of both organizations. . . ."

SHOULD CO-OPERATE

He says the six NHL clubs would know the players were being groomed for potential big league careers and that the players were "being developed just as expertly as if they were farmed out to a minor - pro club. . . ."

The manager would ask coaches and managers of the country's Junior A teams for guidance in compiling a list of each club's best graduates. He would also tap them for their assessment of all grads on the other teams in their leagues, thereby getting a "good rundown on the abilities of the top 50 to 70 in the whole country."

Invite the players to camp—Boucher suggested Ottawa as permanent head quarters instead of Winnipeg — and after three weeks' training the best 25 would be chosen and these would settle into universities, trade schools or jobs and an exhibition schedule set up with NHL, AHL, junior and senior teams around the country.

"I can't imagine them not drawing capacity crowds at every stop, with their share (of the gate) easily covering their year's operating expenses, in case that's still uppermost in the minds of some officials."

Boucher says a player bound for the pros would miss his first season of pro money "but he'd be exchanging this for a coast-to-coast tour of Canada and an extensive all - expense visit to Europe while polishing his trade."

Bisons Bow Twice To Crackers

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Atlanta Crackers continue to lead the International Baseball League going into today's game against Toronto Maple Leafs.

The Crackers won a doubleheader 4-2 and 7-0 from Buffalo Bisons Thursday to take a one-half game lead over Columbus Jets and a 1½-game lead over the Leafs.

Elsewhere, Syracuse Chiefs edged Toledo Mud Hens 8-7, and Columbus Jets defeated Rochester Red Wings 7-5.

Ed Sadowski and Gene Stephens belted homers for Atlanta in the day's opener, and Stephens added a pair of singles.

Bob Barton sparked the Crackers' second victory, collecting a double and two singles.

Bob Lipski led off the ninth inning for Syracuse with a single and scored two plays later off Ike Brown's grounder for the winning run.

Ron Cox with three hits and Sam Jones, who relieved a tiring Ed Hobaugh and retired the last batter, led the Jets to their victory.

Hartack Seeks Fifth Derby Win

By KELSO STURGEON

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — There's no doubt in Bill Winfrey's mind that Bold Lad is the best horse in the Kentucky Derby, but he admits he can't stop worrying about two or three others in the field of 11 that have reputations as strong stretch runners.

"I'm not worried a bit about any speed horses in this race," the veteran trainer said.

"My concern is with the horses that will be coming from behind. I think I'm running the best horse, but . . ."

This will be Winfrey's first derby horse since he ran Native Dancer and Social Outcast as an entry in 1953. On that Saturday afternoon 12 years ago Native Dancer was beaten by a head by Dark Star for the only loss of his racing career. Winfrey was installed the 8-5 favorite for the 91st running of this racing classic at Churchill Downs Saturday. He will be ridden by Bill Hartack, the man who has won the derby on the last three mounts he's had in it.

EIGHTH RICHEST

With 11 starters, the derby will have a gross value of $154,500, making it the eighth richest in its history.

The winner will pick up a purse of $112,000, while $25,000 will go to the second place finisher. Third place is worth $12,500 and fourth $5,000.

Post time is set for 4:35 p.m. EST for the first jewel of the triple crown.

Bold Lad, running under the colors of Mrs. H. C. Phipps Wheatley Stable, is expected to get his main competition from those stretch runners which are on Winfrey's mind.

Top Rollen a bay colt from the Powhatan Stable of Raymond Guez, was listed by the official oddsmaker at Churchill Downs as the second choice at 4-1. Tom Rolfe won the Stepping Stone purse and will be ridden by Ron Turcotte of Grand Falls, N..

The third choice is Mrs. Ada L. Rice's Lucky Debonair at 5-1 while Florida Derby winner Native Charger, owned by Albert Warner, was listed at 8-1. Hartack, who will be going for his second straight, won with Iron Liege in 1957, Venetian Way in 1960, Decidedly in 1962 and Northern Dancer, owned by Canadian industrialist E. P. Taylor, in 1964. This will be Hartack's seventh derby and a victory would tie him with Eddie Arcaro at five winning mounts.

Oil Kings Shade Braves 2-1

WINNIPEG (CP) — Edmonton Oil Kings broke a jinx that favored the home team in the first four games of the Western Canada Memorial Cup junior championship final Thursday night and edged Winnipeg Braves 2-1.

The victory seat Edmonton home for the next game Saturday night with a 3-2 edge in the best - of - seven series and the hope that they had taken the wind out of the Manitoba champions' sails.

Edmonton scored both their goals — by Ron Anderson in the first period and Graham Longmuir, in the second — before Brian Siebert ruined Simmons' shutout hopes by batting in his own rebound three minutes before the end of the game.

Anderson scored on a power play with the Braves' Al Dyker in the penalty box, deflecting Bob Falkenberg's drive from the point at the crease-edge.

Longmuir scored on a pattern play with Anderson and Greg Tomalty.

800 Entries For Quinte Harrier Run

Quinte Secondary School's annual harrier race, a big event for almost the entire student body of the school, will be held this coming Tuesday afternoon.

And, as always, it will be a wide open affair.

Quinte's Jack Sisson said yesterday he expected approximately 800 starters in the big race. This will include about 450 boys and 350 girls.

The girls are given a five-minute handicap. They leave the starting line at 3.00 p.m. Tuesday with the boys taking off five minutes later.

The race is over a 2½ mile course.

As well as an individual winner, the various grades compete against each other.

The following day, Wednesday, May 5, will see the annual Ken Colling Memorial Cross-Country Run, starting at BCIVS, with most of the district's top harriers competing, including a number of the QSS. boys.

Meanwhile, Canada's leading sulky driver, Ron Feagan, 23, registered his fifth victory of the Mohawk spring season with Roger R. Gration in the seventh. Feagan now tops the national list with 48 wins.

A crowd of 2,441 watched seven of nine favorite arrive in the winner's circle. Mutuel betting totalled $143,350.

Robinson Recalls Old Days

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — The racial problem in the Southern United States can be solved if it is brought down to the level of dollars and cents, Jackie Robinson, former baseball star, said Wednesday night.

Robinson, the first Negro to break into big-league baseball, told a Brantford Kinsmen Club sports dinner that "if every product of Alabama were boycotted, it wouldn't be long before the hostilities died down."

Robinson said that when he entered International League baseball with Montreal Royals, the Montreal fans asked only that he play the game to the best of his ability. He recalled that after the final game in which the Royals won the Little World Series he was carried by the crowd to the clubhouse and cheered and chased by them as he ran to meet his wife.

"A newspaper man said it was the first time white chased a Negro out of love rather than hatred."

But when he joined Brooklyn Dodgers in 1947, the players complained about having to play with a Negro until they realized that "Jackie Robinson, the ball player, could help them win the pennant and make some extra money."

He said he was told by the Dodgers coach "that the fight wouldn't be won by me fighting, but by my teammates fighting for me."

In the same way, Negroes will win their fight for equality if people throughout the world rally to their cause, Robinson said.

Rather Write Than 'Eye'

Golfer Rejects Ace

AVON, Conn. (AP)—Amateur golfer Ev Hamlon scored a hole-in-one Wednesday, but is fighting it. He wants to be non-conformist.

"I want it understood," he said Thursday, "that it is the principle, and not the money involved, certainly not new refreshments."

So the 50-year-old Hanlon also scored a first in that of 1955, wrote the U.S. Golf Association.

He wants the USGA to rule on whether his apparent hole-in-one can be called an "unplayable lie, therefore, in all probability, setting up a three or a short putt."

"A rule reads a ball can be declared unplayable anywhere by a golf course," explains Hanlon, "if so, why not in the hole?"

Playing Avon Golf Club's 170-yard, par-3 11th hole, Hanlon's tee shot rolled into the cup. Hanlon ignored the shouts from companions, removed the ball from the cup, took a penalty and dropped in his putt.

"And, with me, it's a three," he told everybody within hearing range.

Said Hanlon:

"I've disliked the idea of a hole-in-one shooter buying for years. I experienced it twice before in 1947 and 1956, and told myself then that were I ever to get another, my first step wouldn't be a trip to the bar, but rather, a letter to the USGA."

Six Games Attendance, 14,740

Milwaukee Fandom Boycotting Braves

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Despite 67 - degree weather, the fans continued to spurn the cold shoulder Thursday night as Atlanta - bound Milwaukee Braves defeated world - champion St. Louis Cardinals 4-1.

"This isn't baseball weather," has been the cry of Braves' officials during a cold wave that had attendance plunging as low as a topless bathing suit.

But, unofficial as it is, there seems little doubt that there will be a fan boycott of the Braves this season.

Attendance for the entire three - game set against the world champions totalled 3,183. And in their last six games the Braves haven't drawn enough to fill County Stadium once, with only 14,740 paying customers.

In other games, Don Drysdale outdueled Juan Marichal in Los Angeles Dodgers' 2-1 victory over San Francisco Giants and Chicago Cubs whipped Cincinnati Reds 6-3 while Baltimore Orioles edged Washington Senators 5-4 in the American League.

Hank Aaron hit his first homer for the Braves in the eighth inning but they already had put the game away in the fifth inning when a throwing error by Curt Flood and a wild pitch by Curt Simmons led to two runs.

ALLOWS TWO HITS

Pitcher Bob Sadowski of the Braves, forced to retire when he injured his knee sliding into third, allowed only two hits before he left. Billy O'Dell finished up a four-hitter.

Tommy Davis drove in both Dodger runs in support of Drysdale.

Davis tripled in the fourth inning, following a single by Wes Parker, to tie the score. In the sixth, Maury Wills singled, took second on a bunt, stole third and came home on another Davis single.

The Cubs got the job done with a four-run sixth inning that broke up a scoreless duel between Cal Koonce and the Reds' Jim O'Toole.

Billy Williams opened the sixth with a double and Ron Santo followed with a single. Pete Rose then dropped a throw on Ernie Banks' grounder, allowing Williams to score. A walk loaded the bases before Koonce singled one run home and Glenn Beckert singled in two more.

Frank Robinson ruined Koonce's shutout bid with a three-run homer in the eighth.

Trailing 4-3, the Orioles won in the eighth when Brooks Robinson stroked a two-out single and Norm Siebern cracked his first homer of the season.

The winning blow came off Phil Ortega, who drew an automatic $50 fine in the fifth inning for throwing at Johnny Orsino. Orsino had homered in his previous at-bat. Woodie Held hit two solo homers for the Senators.

Top Hockey Men Disagree

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Frank Boucher, commissioner of the Saskatchewan Junior Hockey League stands almost alone in advocating that the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association scrap its current project to develop a Canadian national hockey team.

About the only part of Boucher's suggestion that found even partial approval was that the government should be prepared to give up possible $20,000 a year contracts to join the national team.

He also suggested that proposed expansion of the NHL would further hinder Boucher's plan because professional teams would be scouring more junior graduates.

SHOULD SKILL NHL

CAHA president Lionel Fleury said in Quebec Boucher should try and sell his plan to the NHL but that it is much easier to form a national team of university students, as was done last year in Winnipeg and the year before in Vancouver, because they are more interested in becoming educated than in becoming professionals.

John Wilson, coach of the senior Ottawa Montagnards who this year made a 12-game tour of Europe, said he doubted that NHL clubs in the United States would ever agree to a proposal that would serve only to strengthen Canada's national team.

He added Boucher's plan appeared impractical to him because of the high player turnover implicit in its one-year aspect. Wilson said it takes four or five years to build a good club, adding, "You can't build a team on a one-year basis and you can't build a team made up of stars, which I think is what Boucher has in mind."

Bud Holohan of Winnipeg, former manager of the national team, agreed with the idea of a "permanent manager and coach, but said he felt Boucher is deluding himself about the calibre of top international hockey.

He said a team of first-year junior graduates would not be good enough to defeat top international clubs.

Blows Radiator-

Volvo Hopes For Record Sweep Smashed

KELOWNA, B.C. (CP) — A blown radiator and a collision with an RCMP cruiser Thursday eliminated two competitors from the Cross - Canada 4,000-mile auto rally.

Len Bloomer of Vancouver and John O'Dwyer of North Burnaby, B.C., were reported involved in a head-on collision with a police cruiser at Invermere, 100 miles south of Radium Hot Springs in the British Columbia interior.

Police said no charges would be lodged because no one was at fault. The accident occurred on a little - used back road during a dust storm that obscured vision.

No one was injured but the Bloomer - O'Dwyer Valiant, in sixth place at the start of Thursday's run from Edmonton was unable to continue.

BLOWS RADIATOR

Volvo hopes for an unprecedented sweep of manufacturers, private entry, individual and women's categories were smashed when the Volvo was put driven by Blair Rusch of Montreal and navigated by Miss Kerry of Toronto blew its radiator almost at the Valiant accident scene.

The Volvo team, which had been in first place at the start of Thursday's leg, was knocked out. All three cars in a team must complete the run from Montreal to Vancouver.

At Thursday's half-way point in Cranbrook, Klaus Ross and John Bird of Toronto, driving a Volvo, were in first place with 28 points, five more than they had had at the end of Wednesday's leg.

Paul McLennan of Toronto and John Wilson of New Dundee, Ont., driving a Mustang, were in second place at Cranbrook, with 30 points.

Henry Taylor of London and Robin Edwards of Fabreville, Que., driving a Ford Cortina, were in third place with 100 points, unchanged from Wednesday.

Geno Henderson of Dearborn, Mich., and Doug Gallop of Pointe Claire, Que., had guided their Valiant to fourth spot and had 88 penalty points.

In fifth place it was the Volvo of Graham and Acheson. They were the highest placed private entry with 305 points.

The competitors, who had been driving over the Prairies for two days, found the switch to British Columbia's mountainous terrain hard on machinery. Martin Chenhall of Oshawa and Dennis Johnson of Montreal, driving a team Chevelle, reported at Cranbrook with their gearbox jammed in high.

With the elimination of the Volvo team, the Chevelles had taken over first place in the manufacturers' category.

The rally ends at Vancouver today.

Pro Sports Should Get Legal Help

TORONTO (CP) — Professional sports should be given special consideration by provincial and federal governments in matters of combines law, Ken Preston, general manager of Saskatchewan Roughriders of the Canadian Football League, said Thursday.

Preston was commenting on the dilemma facing the CFL, which has been advised that its player import rule is a possible violation of the Ontario Human Rights Code.

Professor Bora Laskin, legal expert from the University of Toronto, in a confidential report, had warned the league its method of limiting each team to 14 American imports was a probable violation of the code.

Preston singled out the draft rule in hockey and football as proof the government is willing to overlook some things in sport.

"Can you imagine chemical firms getting tired of competing for bright young chemical engineering graduates and deciding to draft them?" he asked. "Then if a company had a student's name on its list, the student couldn't work for any other company.

"That wouldn't stand up in any court in the land — but we can do it in hockey and football."

Rally Half-Way Standing

CRANBROOK, B.C. (CP)—At the half-way point of Thursday's leg of the cross-Canada auto rally, standings were:

1. Klaus Ross and John Bird, both of Toronto, Volvo, 28.

2. Paul McLennan, Toronto, and John Wilson, New Dundee, Ont., Mustang, 30

3. Henry Taylor, London, and Robin Edwards, Fabreville, Que, Ford Cortina, 100

4. Gene Henderson, Dearborn, Mich., and Doug Gallop, Pointe Claire, Que., 128

5. Ewen Graham, Midnapore, Alta., and Henry Acteson, Calgary, Volvo, 305

Motorcycling Is Popular Sport With Both Sexes

By BORIS KLEIN

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—"Honey, let's go for a bike ride."

With a roar, off ride the Kirk Douglases, Polly Bergen and her husband, agent Freddie Fields, or Barbara Rush and husband, publicist Warren Cowan, gunning over the Hollywood hills on their motorcycles.

Motorcycling, a popular sport here among he-men actors of the 1940s, is making a comeback among stars of both sexes.

"It's a social sport, like horseback riding," says Cowan, who rides tandem on his Japanese machine with his wife.

"It's a great way to get out in the country," says Stella Stevens, who has a baby blue helmet to match her English cycle.

FOR BUSINESS TOO

Bob Brandt, husband of Janet Leigh, biked up to the swank Beverly Hills Hotel for a luncheon date the other day on his machine, briefcase under arm..

Brandt introduced Janet to motorcycle riding in the mountains near Malibu Beach during their courting days three years ago.

The latest Hollywood pair to use bikes as vehicles for courting are Ann-Margret and Roger Smith.

Cowan uses his bike for quick trips to the office at night or on weekends from his nearby home. But actor Robert Wagner rides all the way from his San Fernando Valley home to the office in a car—sometimes with his wife riding tandem.

Paul Newman keeps a bike on the West Coast in his brother Arthur's garage—and a motor scooter near his New York apartment.

Motorcycling became a Hollywood fad in the 1940s among such stars as Clark Gable, Van Johnson and Keenan Wynn.

"Gable gave it up after a nasty spill and Johnson abandoned his after a similar experience. Johnson still wears a metal plate in his skull as a result of his accident.

THE ARNOLD Palmer Method

by GOLF'S 4-TIME MASTERS WINNER

CONTROLLING IRON SHOTS

I know of no tossing pro who regards iron clubs as distance-producers. The sole function of iron shots is accuracy.

Yet, many golfers delight in swinging for distance with the irons. They only hurt themselves by over-swinging and sacrificing accuracy.

Usually, they even sacrifice distance because they fail to obtain solid impact with the ball.

In the illustration, we see two lengths of backswing with a 5-iron. I don't think that I should dictate the proper length of backswing — it varies with the individual. I will suggest, however, that most golfers in the middle and high handicap range would score lower if they shortened their backswing on iron shots.

A shorter backswing with the irons need not cut your distance. Most golfers can generate just as much distance-producing clubhead speed — and much better accuracy — with a shorter, well-controlled swing.

Tour Specialists Offer Melina Mercouri's Greece

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—It is probable that a team of producers named Phil d'Antoni and Norman Baer have done more for armchair rubbernecking than anyone since the days of Baedeker. Hosts of the lectures and Fitzpatrick of the movie travel talks, D'Antoni and Baer invented, for all practical purposes, the television star-guided tour.

Perhaps Princess Grace's "tour of Monaco" a few seasons back was the seed, but the idea really blossomed with "Elizabeth Taylor in London" and "Sophia Loren in Rome," the first two d'Antoni-Baer super-travelogues.

Coming up next Monday is their special "Melina Mercouri's Greece," on ABC.

"You don't want stars who are seen very much—and that immediately eliminates all the popular television names, except Bob Hope, who is a special category. We did have some preliminary talks about a "Lucille Ball in Ireland"—she's Irish, of course—but it couldn't be worked out," Baer said.

Next season, in addition to touring out a couple of their specialties, Baer and d'Antoni will produce six ABC specials starring Robert Preston. Each will explore the geography and characteristics of a different region of the United States.

Recommended viewing: Tonight—Rawhide, CBS, 7:30-8:30 EDT, with Julie Harris as guest star; An Hour with Ed Murrow, CBS, 10:30, memorial program: A Time for Killing, NBC, 9:30-9:30, George C. Scott in a Bob Hope Theatre war drama.

Saturday — Kentucky Derby, CBS, 5-6 p.m.

Sunday — "This is Early Bird," ABC, CBS, NBC, 1-3 p.m., inaugurating two - way transatlantic telecasting by satellite.

Many Anglers Will Compete In Derby

PICTON (Staff) — Indications are that in spite of the backward season, there will be several hundred fishermen participating in the weekend fish derby to be held in Picton. Prizes for this annual event total $1,000, and entrants come for many miles to compete for the attractive awards. This year there is a prize for the biggest total catch of fish within the two days by one person.

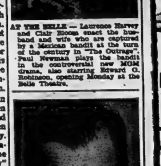
All catches are weighed in at Picton Bay Marina between 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. and 5 and 10 a.m. Saturday and between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. Sunday. Prize presentation is at the Marina at 2 p.m. Sunday and the public is invited. The "Derby" is sponsored by the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce.

New Church Dedicated on May 9th

PICTON (Staff) — Picton's Free Methodist Church will conduct its dedication services on Sunday, May 9th. At the 11 a.m. service the speaker will be the new Bishop, Paul N. Ellis, of Indianapolis, Indiana, and he will dedicate the new church at 2 p.m. The special speaker for the evening service will be the Rev. S. Bull, superintendent of Ottawa and Kingston district and former pastor at the Picton church. Also expected to attend is the Rev. Dr. W. J. Stonehouse, superintendent of the Peterborough district.

Special music and singing will be provided by the Clark Caverly Trio from Oshawa. The public is invited to attend.

Palomar Hall Will Now Be Nursing Home



PICTON (Staff) — The Palomer Hall, a very popular Picton entertainment centre in the past, is under renovation to make way for a new nursing home. The building and property has been purchased by well known minister, Rev. A. Nosewortby of Toronto. The retired clergyman also is presently operating a nursing home in Toronto, called "Happy Life."

Many listeners of the "Family Hour" broadcast over a Toronto station by Mr. Nosewortby are well acquainted with the minister's fine work.

The nursing home when completed (date set is June 1st) will accommodate between 35 and 40 patients. The plans call for nine modern rooms with seven bathrooms. An office, lobby, kitchen and room for the Registered Nurse will also be included. Construction is being completed by the Brown and Miles Construction Co., of Toronto. Many local subcontractors for electrical and plumbing work are being employed.

AT THE BELLE — Lawrence Harvey and Clair Bloom meet the husband and wife who are captured by a Mexican bandit at the turn of the century in "The Outrage". Paul Newman plays the bandit in the controversial new MGM drama, now starring Harvey and Bloom, opening Monday at the Belle Theatre.

AT THE BELLE — Joseph Cotten stars with Susan Davis and Olivia DeHaviland, James Mitchell and Cecil Kellaway in "Hush, Hush, Sweet Charlotte", 20th Century-Fox drama, showing today and Saturday evening at the Belle Theatre.

THANK YOU . . .
FOR PAYING YOUR CARRIER PROMPTLY
Collections by your Ontario Intelligencer carrier are timed to provide you convenient service and best meet his school and study schedules. He may begin collections Thursday and complete his collections on Friday, so that he can pay for his papers on Saturday morning.
Your thoughtfulness in paying him the first time he calls to collect will encourage him in giving you prompt service. It will save him extra work for which he would receive no additional profit.
It will give him more time for school and other activities . . .

Successful Living

Suggestions for Parents Of Children Who Won't Eat

DEAR DORIS — I saw where a couple in another city were arrested because their baby died from not eating. Miss Clark, I know that some children will not eat enough no matter what their parents give them. If they have a sore throat or something hurts them they will not eat and you can't ask a baby where it hurts.

DORIS CLARK

If they have no fever you can't keep calling the doctor because if you call him too much for minor things he might think you are nervous and not come when you really need him.

One of my girls wouldn't eat anything and we took her to doctors but it didn't improve her appetite. When she was small I fed her cereal by holding her in my arms so she couldn't push the spoon away and pushing the spoonful of cereal into her mouth. When she was a little older I would let her hold my lipstick if she would let me feed her something.

The baby book says no child will starve himself and not to force or bribe, but I know of a few cases where children nearly did it's only their mother's forcing and bribing that kept them alive. — TOO SHY TO SIGN NAME.

DEAR DORIS — I sympathize a great deal with Too Shy and think she should be commended for her understanding. In the case of the child she mentions, help was available. There really was no reason for the child to die had the parents used the help that was being offered to them.

I think one of the best things that a column such as you write can do is to keep encouraging people to use the services of the agencies in the community and to keep reminding people that there is no stigma attached to making a request and indeed it should not be considered a sign of failure on their part.

Only yesterday I learned of the suicide of a young unmarried mother of a slightly problemed child. I have a strong feeling that this suicide might have been avoided if the family had not tried to solve the problem itself but had referred the girl to a social agency used to helping unmarried mothers. — DIRECTOR OF A CHILD CARE AGENCY.

DEAR TOO SHY AND DEAR DIRECTOR — Thanks to both of you. Would any other parents like to comment?

DEAR DORIS — Alberta's letter has touched me to such an extent that I feel I must give her some encouragement. One day every day of my life I see a young man who has become remarkable to him "You are very short, aren't you?" he replied, holding his hand to the lower part of his forehead, "in our country we judge the size of men from here." Then he threw down his arms. Our service reply is along the same lines and I think it a wonderful reply.

As to the nice girl (wife) Alberta is worried about, is it necessary that she be as short as her husband? I think not, as I have seen many wives taller than their husbands. Also, don't forget that girls can be small as well as boys.

I wish Alberta would pray for happiness for her son and not for a wife. Surely God would not answer for this one thing that bothers her so much keeps her grief constantly before her.

A mother so concerned about her son's future deserves better than that and she gives herself no chance of momentarily forgetting it — she should try to do for her own sake as well as her son's. — TRYING TO HELP.

* * *

DEAR TRYING — Agreed. It's difficult to imagine anyone considering that Lloyd George's personality was dwarfed because of his height!

DEAR DORIS — Four months ago I ordered an item advertised on the container of a nationally known product, enclosing the money and box top requested. I have not heard from the company since, even though I wrote again about two months ago. I have also written to the firm advertised on this product, available under the same conditions.

My question is: Is there anything I can do about this? It wasn't much of a financial loss, but my concern is that the public have some means of protection against this type of fraud. — MRS. V.J.

* * *

DEAR MRS. V.J. — And so the public should. Write once more, registering your letter, and stating you would like simply within two weeks' time. If there is still a dead silence tell your Better Business Bureau or Board of Trade, and the newspaper which carries the advertising.

* * *

Confidential to THIRTEEN YEARS — If you have read my column at all, you already know what I think about the heavy petting and "older things." You are heading straight for trouble, and so are the other girls and boys your age who do this.

DEAR DORIS — I lived with a woman for 12 years. We have a daughter 12. We never married, but she used my name and our daughter did too. Now we are parted and our home gone.

She took me to court and I have to pay an amount every month for my daughter. But she no longer uses my name. All these years both of them have been on my income. Who knows, we might be back together again.

Is this right? Also, can I claim this amount in the coming years? — DESERTED.

* * *

DEAR DESERTED — Any natural-born daughter is entitled to support from her father, whether they live together or not.

There is no getting it back later. The name she takes is her own business, since yours gave her no legal status anyway.

It would appear that this time the father in the case regrets the lack of a marriage ceremony. I'm sorry.

* * *

Confidential to LOST COMPLETELY — Both boys like you. Treat them both as friends. Write in for my leaflet "Tips on Talking," enclosing 10c and a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

* * *

Confidential to TROUBLED AND BEWILDERED — Your sister was unkind to both you and her boy friend to embarrass you the way she did. Now that the situation has changed, the boy in the case will get over it sooner when he observes you being composed and friendly. He can forget it if you do.

* * *

(Doris knows Canadian resources and can guide you to the help you need. Write to her, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.)
